More Interest May Get Funds

Increased interest in the vocational-technical high school planned for Virginia Beach recently may play an important part in finally getting the project off the ground.

School Supt. E. E. Brickell and W. E. Lobeck, director of the proposed school, were in Washington yesterday to testify before a Labor and Health, Education and Welfare subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee, in efforts to shake loose federal money earmarked for the project.

They sought release of funds under the 1968 Vocational Education Act. Some $450 million was authorized by the legislation, but only a small portion was released. The release of funds is necessary before Virginia Beach can begin the center, which will be funded by 50 per cent federal money for construction and 75 per cent for equipment.

The school is expected to cost about $2 million with another $1 million for equipment. It is scheduled to be built off North Landing Road on the old Upton Farm. An earlier site on the city-owned Green Run Farm was rejected, partly because test boring showed the land there not stable enough.

Some $75 million is now allocated nationwide in the next fiscal year, but again only a small part is expected to be released. Virginia Beach received a boost last week also from Second District Congressman William Whitehurst, who urged the subcommittee to release as close to 100 per cent of the funds authorized as possible. First District Rep. Thomas Downing testified before the same committee on May 14 urging much the same thing, but in reply to a letter from House of Delegates candidate Richard Guy, Downing warned of the funding crisis now being faced.

Guy had also supported a high priority for the center in a speech before a Pembroke Meadows group. He said, if elected, he would introduce legislation in the General Assembly for increased state contributions to such centers.

The need for the vocational-technical center has long been recognized by school officials in Virginia Beach, and preliminary planning has been carried out for more than two years. It was originally hoped that the building could be ready by September 1970, but the earliest estimate of completion, based on funds being released and all other aspects running smoothly, places the starting date in September 1971.

Many more pessimistic estimates place the beginning of operation even later. Meanwhile the State Department of Education has given Virginia Beach $33,000 in a grant to pay 50 per cent of the architect's fees for the building. That grant was announced a week ago.

Virginia Beach set aside its share of the school cost from the January 1968 bond issue and has held them until such time as the federal funds are released.

GOP Ready to Move

Political activity in Virginia Beach has moved into high gear with the beginning of the last full month before the July 15 Democratic primary.

Voter registration is continuing until June 14, but according to all reports there has been no rush to register new voters at the registrar's office.

Prior to the primary the GOP is expected to get in on the act too. Announcement of candidacy of possibly as many as four persons is likely before the late June city convention to settle on two candidates to oppose the two Democratic winners for the House of Delegates seats.

One candidate is expected to announce his intention of seeking the GOP nomination within the next few days. Republicans are encouraged in Virginia Beach since Richard Nixon won the city last fall and since many are appearing to lean toward the gubernatorial candidacy of Linwood Holton this fall.

Meanwhile Henry Howell has finally made a Virginia Beach move. While both Fred Pollard and William Battle had spent considerable time and effort here, Howell had no organized support. He has now named James A. Albano, Jr., Walter U. Walsh, John J. Shand and Earl H. Byrd, Jr. as his Virginia Beach co-chairmen. Rolland Winters will handle precinct operations. Howell will campaign in Virginia Beach next Wednesday morning.

The four Democratic House candidates are continuing to stomp the city making appearances at teas, coffees and civic meetings.

Most of the activity centers around Richard Guy and Bruce Murphy. Fewer comments are forthcoming from the Rhae Adams-B. R. Middleton ticket.

Guy urged the City Planning Commission to turn down an application for a motel on the beach near the North Carolina line in an area where the state proposes to build False Cape Park. He also criticized Middleton for voting in favor of a state constitutional change that would permit the General Assembly to set new boundaries of the city of Richmond, which has been stymied in several

Economic Study Should Help Attract Industry

The much-heralded 112-page economic study of Virginia Beach, as prepared without cost by Virginia Electric and Power Company, was unveiled last week at a dinner meeting of the Virginia Beach Development Council at the White Sands Country Club.

The report is expected to have far-reaching implications on the future of Virginia Beach. For the first time the city has a document which can be used for ready reference by industry considering locating in Virginia Beach.

E. R. Cockrell, Jr., who served as the project chairman for the VBDC, which requested the study, said, "Current information is even more important today with 14,000 industrial development organizations looking for industrial prospects throughout the nation. It is not good enough anymore just to have information compiled; it must be in a presentable and useable form."

J. R. Perrow, manager of VEPCO's area development, and VEPCO itself were praised by Gov. Mills E. Godwin, Jr.

at the meeting. He said VEPCO has helped greatly to attract new industry to the state through the preparation of these important economic studies.

The study that was turned over to the VBDC and to the Virginia Beach Industrial Authority will also be on display in schools and in city libraries, as well as in appropriate city offices. It is designed as a reference for industrial development organizations to assist industry in new plant locations and expansions of existing plants.

Perrow also said the study can be used for evaluation of a community's shortcomings and assets, in preparing long-range master plans and in preparing community development plans.

He added that eight potential sites in Virginia Beach were selected as being representative of industrial prospects. The study is divided into six major classifications: physical assets, manpower, market resources, government, community facilities and industrial sites.

The study is based on information supplied through a local economic VBDC study committee headed by Cockrell. Other members included R. H. DeFord, Jr., Charles W. Gardner, Frank W. Kellam, David Norman, Russell O. Rucks, Capt. S. T. Sadler, Lawrence (See 'Study,' p. 2)

Money to Be Reallocated

Virginia Beach City Council is expected to approve the reappropriation of about $380,000 to the School Board Monday at its regular meeting. School Supt. E. E. Brickell reported to Council last Monday that the School Board had a surplus of about $700,000, but asked for part of that to be reappropriated for several projects.

Even with the appropriations for summer school ($47,000), driver training equipment ($62,000), food services ($36,000) and 40 new school buses ($235,000), Brickell told Council about $300,000 will still be on hand.

The purchase of the new school buses was budgeted in the next city budget, but Brickell said the School Board budget, the largest part of the operating budget, can be reduced by that amount with the purchase from the surplus.

In his appearance before Council Brickell also reported the lack of progress in negotiating for new school sites in the Bayside area. School needs there, both elementary and secondary, are considered critical since present schools are operating at capacity and new homes and apartments are either completed or planned.

Schools on both levels are expected to be finished by the fall of 1970, but Brickell said timing now depends on finding suitable sites. Brickell said at least five farmland owners had been worked with, but negotiations had bogged down. He said one wanted $8,000 an acre for land appraised at $6,000 an acre.

Some 60 acres are considered necessary for the high school site. Brickell's indication of problems brought comments from several Councilmen that condemnation proceedings, often long and involved, may be the only answer, where bargaining fails. It was generally conceded, however, that condemnation may be a very real possibility in the current matter.

A site for a school at the Virginia Truck Experimental Station is still being considered, according to Brickell, but he said no reply to inquiries had been received from the state. Earlier it was thought the School Board was almost ready to sign a long-term lease for a 14-acre unused site at Seashore State Park for a school. Suddenly Parks Commissioner Ben Bolen said the land would be needed for a new state park. (See 'Council,' p. 2)

Permits Continue To Rise

Building permits issued during May 1969 in Virginia Beach totaled a whopping $8,308,755, better than $4 million more than in May 1968. That total was $4,303,463, and was a pace-setting month in a near record year.

All indications are that 1969 could still prove to break all building records in Virginia Beach, according to assistant building official, Robert Lohr. The number of apartment and townhouse projects pending at present and the number expected to be applied for in the near future could easily make the difference, Lohr said.

"Money doesn't seem to be too tight here," he said, "and things look good for the months just ahead."

Through May of this year the value of building permits issued is about $4 million ahead of last year at the same time. The 1969 five-month total is $31,944,099, and the 1968 comparable period figure was $27,931,475.

A total of 63 multiple-family permits were issued last month for 354 units, totaling $3,551,182. Single-family housing accounted for 72 permits, at a value of $2,042,230. Commercial permits totaled $1,313,000, the largest project of which was a part of Haygood Shopping Center.

In addition, more than $900,000 was for the new science building at Virginia Wesleyan University.

Readers

Turn Down Campers

The vast majority of SUN SURVEY readers who answered last week's question want to hide campers, camping trailers and other recreational equipment from sight.

Of those who replied, 74 per cent said "Yes" to the question, "Should City Council pass an ordinance banning recreational equipment in side yards, especially on small lots where regular side yard restrictions cannot be met?" and 26 per cent said "No."

City Council will take up the question Monday in regular session. Action was deferred two weeks ago for clarification, and because of opposition from small lot owners. (See Council story.)

Most who answered in the affirmative commented upon the aesthetic aspect of the question, but one reader said he would just be in favor of the present ordinance or any new one being enforced. The old one is not. Those who replied in the negative pointed to the penalty that would be faced by small lot owners.

While the public opinion poll does not profess to represent the thinking of all residents of Virginia Beach, it does represent the thinking of a cross section of those who took time to clip it and return it to us. Your attention is called to this week's SUN SURVEY question also, which appears in the box at the lower left corner of this page.

Each week a new question will appear and the results will be published the following week. The question will be timely, and the more answers we receive the more responsible the opinion.

Conflict Appeal Set

Virginia Beach Commonwealth's Attorney Andre Evans, who began a series of conflict-of-interest uprisings in the state about a year ago, makes another effort at settling one of the cases next week in Richmond.

Evans will appear before a three-judge panel of the State Supreme Court of Appeals to give his arguments why he should be allowed to appeal a Virginia Beach Circuit Court decision that he has no power to institute a conflict-of-interest suit.

Last July Evans filed suit against Richard Holland to recover $215,479 paid to Holland's firm, A. Wrenn & Sons, by the City of Virginia Beach, while Holland was head of the now-defunct Police and Trial Board. The firm sold emergency equipment to the police department.

Following a request by Evans, Attorney Gen. Robert Y. Burton ruled this was conflict-of-interest, and Evans instituted the suit. But the merits of the case were never tried. Judge Robert Wahab, Jr. ruled that the state comptroller, under Virginia law, must be the one to institute the suit against Holland or anyone else. Evans is now seeking an appeal to the higher court.

The Holland case is the only conflict-of-interest case actually initiated in the state, although Evans said earlier he would file a number of others against past and present Virginia Beach officials who serve or have served on a number of boards and commissions. It was assumed the outcome of the Holland case was to be the determining factor, since no other suits have been filed.

In Norfolk, Chesapeake and in other areas of Virginia, the Holland case touched off a flurry of activity last summer and fall, but the matter has died down unresolved at present. There is now apparently up to the State's high court.

Weekend, Dedication Draw Throngs to City

The three-day Memorial Day weekend in Virginia Beach was a very warm and very busy one. The city's beaches were jammed. Hotels and motels were full to capacity. The roads were packed, but generally safe. And the city dedicated its new $1.3 million Administration Building during City Hall Day ceremonies Sunday.

There was something to do in Virginia Beach over the weekend for tourists and residents alike. Thousands took advantage of all the activities.

High school bands and the U.S. Navy School of Music Bank provided the background music for City Hall Day. City officials and invited guests as well as interested private citizens sat in the hot sun of Princess Anne as the new building was dedicated. The speechmaking was short. First District Congressman Thomas N. Downing, former City Manager W. Russell Hatchett and present City Manager Roger Scott handled those jobs. Civic Center Director Sam Scott was master of ceremonies.

Hatchett was also presented a scrolled resolution by Mayor Frank Dusch and City Council thanking him for his untiring efforts as Virginia Beach's first City Manager. Hatchett and Scott then placed the dedicatory cornerstone in the building. Hatchett had hoped to have Princess Anne of England on hand for the occasion, but his and other efforts failed to get her here. He quipped Sunday that he hoped she would yet visit the complex that bears her name.

In the time capsule of the cornerstone, to be opened on the 50th anniversary of the city on Jan. 1, 2013, were placed a city charter, a history of the city, a City Hall Day program, a prophecy by Manager Scott, stamps, coins, a new economic study of the city and a film showing all aspects of the young, sprawling city. David Norman, assistant City Manager, was in charge of City Hall Day, and prepared the items for inclusion in the capsule.

Following the ceremonies city offices were open and staffed. A number of displays were set up. Hundreds of city residents and tourists flocked to Princess Anne to ride the boardwalk train around the complex to see all the building, to see the inner workings of the city government, and to get free hot dogs and soft drinks. The rest of the weekend belonged strictly to the tourists. The crowd was larger than on many mid-summer holiday weekends, according to all sources. The Chamber of Commerce set up a room-finding service for those who arrived and found no accommodations. Some had to stay as far away as Chesapeake.

The innkeepers and resort businessmen, including restaurateur, say this was the largest Memorial Day weekend on record. They feel it was an excellent barometer for a record season to come.

Campers at Seashore State Park were full early in the weekend. More than 700 would-be campers were turned away to find a spot in some private campgrounds, all of which were also full.

Extra bus service was added to get visitors to the resort area by Trailways. All charter fishing boats in the city's marinas reported brisk activity. And the fishing was outstanding, said the captains.

The Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway set a new record on Thursday, handling 27,867 vehicles at the main toll plaza, then topped that Saturday and again on Sunday. The Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel took in another record amount on Sunday of $43,983, as visitors flocked in from the north.

Restaurant operators in Virginia Beach said that they felt cocktails had helped draw more people to the beach than before, but that the liquor business over the weekend was not particularly heavy. The Alcoholic Beverage Control stores, however, still reported brisk business.

Summer 1969 is showing signs of being the best on record for Virginia Beach, and last weekend was merely the beginning.

Controversial Items On Planning Agenda

There are at least two controversial items on the Virginia Beach Planning Commission agenda for the public hearing June 10.

One item, that of zoning or rezoning the property at the entrance of Thoroughgood was deferred from last month's hearing. Property owners of Thoroughgood have been fighting against the construction of a shopping center by Thoroughgood Corporation on this property since February. A compromise has been worked out for the property by the city planning department, however, and some decision is expected at Tuesday's hearing as to whether or not the Thoroughgood property owners will accept the city's plan.

The other controversial item, application for a change of zoning and a use permit to construct a 50-unit motel within boundaries of the proposed False Cape State Park, has already received opposition by Richard D. Guy, who is presently running for House of Delegates. Guy opposed the application because it is his contention that plans for False Cape State Park should be worked out between the state and city before any private development of the area is allowed.

Application for a use permit for construction of another 50-unit motel will also be made. This application, made by Martin Dehaan, is for property located East of Old Route Blvd. and west of Atlantic Avenue.

The Commission is scheduled to hear applications for change of zoning and/or use permits for the construction of 423 apartment units.

The largest of these applications is for a use permit for construction of 300 garden apartments in Green Run. The property is located on the southeast corner of South Lynnhaven Road and Providence Road.

George C. L. Jensen will apply for a use permit to construct 64 apartment units on property located on the north and south sides of Berrie Road in the Berrie Gardens area.

A change of zoning and use permit is being applied for by Marsel Builders for construction of 32 apartment units on property located on the north side of Linkhorn Circle east of Fremac Drive in the subdivision of Fremac Lake Shores. The change of zoning request is from Residence Suburban District 3 to Multiple Family Residence District.

Marsel Builders is also applying for a use permit to construct 27 apartment units on property located on the north side of 18th Street west of Parks Avenue. The property is in the Virginia Beach Borough.

An application is being made for a use permit for camping sites and related facilities on property in the Princess Anne Properties, Inc., for property located on the east side of South Lynnhaven Road south of Ole Town Drive.

The City of Virginia Beach will make an application for a use permit to construct a public health building on property located on the east side of Independence Blvd. north of North Windhuck Road in the Pembroke area.

The Planning Commission will meet at 1 p.m., June 10, in the Council Chambers of the new Administration Building at Princess Anne Courthouse.

Pres. Nixon Presents Diploma

Capt. Walter J. Moore, Jr., 2nd Police Precinct C.O., is the first Virginia Beach police officer graduating from the FBI National Academy to receive his diploma from the President of the United States.

Pres. Richard Nixon personally presented diplomas to each of the 100 police officer graduates during a special ceremony in the East Room of the White House, the first such ceremony to be staged in the 34 year history of the Academy.

In addressing the graduates representing police departments of 44 States, the Canal Zone, Jamaica, Canada, Alaska and Thailand, Pres. Nixon said that while United States is in-involved in many problems today one of the most difficult tasks facing the nation "is that of establishing and maintaining respect for law at the highest level."

Capt. Moore said it was an experience he will never forget. Of the President's address Moore said "I think it was a shot in the arm to all of us and shows he means to keep his campaign promises to law enforcement officers."

Col. W. W. Davis, Virginia Beach Police Chief, who travelled to Washington for the ceremony, reflected Capt. Moore's feelings by saying, "I think he (Pres. Nixon) is going all out to show his support for law and order." When asked to describe his impression of the Academy Capt. Moore replied, "I had always heard this was the West Point of law enforcement. I think this was borne out from the caliber of instructors you have and their curriculum." Moore also said "he was impressed by the providing of time for students to gather together in an exchange of ideas formed by their training and experiences within their own departments. Moore said, "This improves your contact with law enforcement officers in other parts of the nation and results in closer cooperation between ourselves."

not be used for anything other than recreation, after giving indication before that there was no use planned for the land in question. All indications had pointed to state approval until recently. That area will need a new school by September 1972.

Council is also expected Monday to consider the deferred matter of banning parking of camping trailers, campers and other large recreational equipment in driveways, on streets and in side yards. A wave of opposition, especially from small lot owners where side-yard restrictions could not be met and where it would be impossible to reach the backyard, caused the two-week delay at last Council meeting.

In zoning matters the docket is less controversial and much shorter than usual. An application will be considered for a 54-unit motel on 21st St. near Pacific Ave. The J. B. Kesser and L. P. Burman motel would be the first to be built in the expressway corridor area since the toll road was built.

Apartment and townhouses again will receive much attention by City Council. The largest application is by David I. Levine for 384 apartment units on South Lynnhaven Road near Salina Drive in Princess Anne Plaza. Another 46 townhouses are being sought at the entrance to Chesapeake Colony by Wayne McLeskey on land already zoned for this use.

A rezoning application for other townhouses on the other side of the entrance last month failed to win Council approval.

Politics

attempts to annex or merge with surrounding areas.

Guy said if this is now approved by the voters, the same thing might be applied to Norfolk at a later date, with Virginia Beach directly in the path.

Murphy continued to hammer away at legislation he would introduce that would allow mental patients to be assigned to the state hospital nearest their home. Patients from this area now are assigned to Central State Hospital in Petersburg, while Richmond area patients are sent to Williamsburg.

F & M Files With SEC

First & Merchants Corporation today filed a registration statement with the Securities and Exchange Commission covering the proposed sale of $20,000,000 convertible subordinated debentures due 1994.

The debentures will be underwritten by a group jointly managed by Eastman Dillon, Union Securities & Co., Wheat & Co., Inc., and Scott & Stringfellow. First & Merchants Corporation is a one-bank holding company which owns the stock of First & Merchants National Bank, headquartered in Richmond, with 56 offices in 19 Virginia cities and communities. On March 31, 1969, the Bank had deposits in excess of $641 million and total assets exceeding $727 million.

The corporation intends to use the net proceeds from the sale of debentures to increase the capital accounts of the Bank, for investment in a planned real estate development subsidiary and for debt retirement. The balance will be added to general funds for such corporate purposes as may be determined by the board of directors.

Conflict

has revealed that the entire matter may take on another facet if a controversial opinion by Hanover County's Commonwealth's Attorney is upheld.

That ruling concerned conflict-of-interest where the wife of a Hanover County Supervisor worked for the county as a school teacher. The Attorney General has issued no formal opinion but the Hanover official indicated he had strong backing.

The ruling could be far-reaching if upheld, since it implies that anyone in the immediate family of an official of a political subdivision also employed constitutes conflict.

In Virginia Beach, for instance, the son of Tres V. A. Etheridge was employed by the city for two years. It is not known whether Evans would take any action on this matter if the ruling is upheld.

The special commission set up by the Virginia General Assembly reported last fall to Gov. Mills E. Godwin, Jr. that a general rewriting of conflict statutes was needed to strengthen the law and to make it enforceable, but saw no reason to speed. It is expected that the 1970 session of the legislature will handle that chore, and any decision on conflict-of-interest cases before that time is not expected.

Station Is In Demand

Although ownership of the Coast Guard Lifeboat Station at 24th Street has not been decided, there are a number of groups interested in acquiring it.

There is some question of whether or not the valuable oceanfront property will revert to the heirs of the original owner, Edward Drinkwater. Others who want it include the Navy, the City of Virginia Beach, Hospitality House, plus several private groups.

The matter will be turned over to the General Services Administration for disposal at some future date.

'Flea' Is Good Musical Comedy

Wedgewood Dinner Theatre in Toano is now playing a delightfully whimsical production of Jerry Devine's musical comedy, "The Amorous Flea". Although the play is based on Moliere's "School for Wives" and the plot is the same, the dialogue is hilariously modern, even though the piece is played in period costume.

The plot revolves around a Paris fop, rumpous and quite aging, who plans to give himself in marriage to a young maiden of whom he has been guardian since she was four. He has managed to have her educated in nothing at all, in attempts to keep her ignorant of the world and all its wonders and in the hope of making her his virtual slave molded in any image he wishes.

While she goes along with all this empty-headedness, it is learned that love, in all its innocence, cannot be denied. A young man appears on the scene, and through some rather contrived goings on, including mistaken identities and outrageous orders given the girl by her old lover, the young couple is thrown together in every possible way. It's all very broad, slapstick comedy, and it's all very funny.

The weakest part of the production is in the music. Travis Beggars plays a big piano, but that is the only music provided for the often difficult musical comedy numbers.

There are some outstanding acting jobs, however, that make up for any shortcomings in the music. Toby Stephens as the old man, cavorts, wheezes, and blusters through the role with obvious enjoyment and does a fine job with it. Sherri Reid plays the ignorance-is-not-necessarily-bliss role with outstanding comedy timing and makes the character into something quite special.

Very funny bits are added each time Claudine Iddings and Bob Hutchinson come onstage as the servants who serve the highest bidder. Hutchinson plays the fellow as stupid as possible to caricature the role, and Mrs. Iddings adds a most professional touch to the production with her acting ability.

Bill Goffred is hardly the dashing young hero-type physically or in his characterization, but gives the young lover role a sparkling freshness. Leroy McFarland adds a nice touch as an old friend of the pompous old fellow. Larry Miller and Ron Reid complete the cast in bits at the end. Reid overdoes his role slightly, with symptoms of emphysema detracting from his speaking.

This little-seen musical played off-Broadway several seasons back, and was given a fine airing last year by the Little Theatre of Virginia Beach. The Wedgewood production is also quite welcome on the theatrical scene. It is a light, airy spoof that is thoroughly enjoyable. HJL

Scott Protests Change

City Manager Roger Scott is awaiting a reply from Washington regarding a formal protest to any reforming of federal tax laws which result in discontinuing a tax exemption for interest which municipalities earn from municipal bonds.

Retirees To Meet

The Hampton Roads Retired Officers Association will hold a luncheon meeting at the NAS Oceana Officers Club on June 7. Social hour will begin at noon followed by lunch and the program.

The program will consist of a presentation on the space program by Mr. Pritchard from NASA Langley Research Center.

All retired officers of the U.S. armed services are invited to attend. For reservations contact Cmdr. M. V. Cornette, USN (Ret.), telephone 425-6537 prior to noon June 6.

Scott said the protest is based on grounds of local governments presently paying the highest interest rate during any period in municipal financing.

The opposition was contained in a letter written by Scott to Vice Pres. Spiro T. Agnew, copies of which were forwarded to U.S. Senators William B. Spong, Jr. and Harry F. Byrd, Jr. and 1st District Rep. Thomas N. Downing.

Herzer School Plans Recital

The Clifford Herzer Piano School announces three student recitals Sunday June 8 at the Norfolk Location 748 Shirley Ave.

They will be: 2 p.m., students from the class of Clifford Herzer; 3:30, students from the class of Walter Noonan; 5:00, students from the class of Carol Noonan. Norfolk, Portsmouth and Virginia Beach students will participate. The public is cordially invited.

Members of the seventh grade of Seaboard School pause in the Mediterranean Court of the Virginia Museum during a recent tour of the galleries. The Seaboard students were taken through a number of the Museum's galleries, including the popular Egyptian Gallery and the Indian Gallery, as well as the special exhibition "Virginia Artists 1969."

Conference Considers Problems

A wide range of social problems have been considered in depth this week at the annual meeting of Christian Scientists in Boston, Mass.

Filmed interviews with prominent spokesmen were shown on the subjects of race relations, youth, underdevelopment, law and order, legal and judicial reform and international relations.

Attending the conference, which ends today, from Virginia Beach were Mrs. Hilda Wilson of E. Bayshore Drive, Mrs. Myrtle Baker of 24th Street and Mrs. Mary Frances Morrisette of 58th Street.

Edwin D. Canham, editor in chief of The Christian Science Monitor; Howard Jones, former ambassador to Indonesia, and Alan Young are among well-known Christian Scientists who addressed the meeting during the week.

Hearing Set on Study

Three public meetings are scheduled to acquaint the public with the first phase of an extensive study of the Beach Borough that has recently been completed by the Virginia Beach Planning Department.

Timothy E. Barrow, head of the advance planning section of the department, said the first meeting will be held at the Dome on Wednesday, June 11, at 7:30 p.m. The other two are set for June 16 and 18 at the same time, but at Virginia Beach Junior High School.

The first meeting will be for members of the business community primarily, while the other two will be for the residents themselves.

Barrow said the staff had completed the initial data gathering and analysis stage of the study.

"This stage has included a survey of existing land use, an evaluation of the existing traffic and parking situation, a complete review of previous land development and highway proposals, preliminary review of commercial and resort development trends, as well as an evaluation of existing public facilities," said Barrow.

Eventual plans call for the drawing and passage of a land use plan for the borough, as has been done in several other areas of the city for long-range and current planning purposes. Included in the analysis are the Seateack and Birdneck areas, representing both ends of the economic scale, according to Barrow. The meetings were called to get the reaction to the present data. Barrow said comments by merchants and residents will play a large part in the further development of the plan.

Festival To Include 24 Bands

The air over Virginia Beach will be filled with music starting June 16 when a total of 24 high school bands from throughout the nation will be competing in the Eighth Annual Virginia Beach Music Festival, according to Charles H. Forbes, Jr., general chairman of the Chamber of Commerce sponsored event.

Eleven states are represented in the lineup of bands with the Davenport, Iowa, band returning as honor band as the first place winner in the 1968 festival.

Logan O. Turrentine, director of bands at Hialeah, Fla., high school will again serve as executive director of the Festival. George Bailey, a former Virginia Beach resident, will serve as assistant director.

Opening ceremonies for the four-day event are scheduled for 3 p.m. on June 16, at First Colonial High School. Frank W. Kellam, president of the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce, will welcome the visiting musicians and their followers. The judges will also be presented and Chairman Forbes will recognize all bands and their directors.

A parade will start at 9 p.m. on Monday. The parade will follow a northerly route up Atlantic Avenue starting at 10th Street. It will break up at 32nd Street.

The young musicians will be judged in marching, sightreading and concert work during the four days of the Festival.

Downing Speaks

At Services

Memorial Day Services were held May 30 by the Tidewater Veteran's Association at Rosewood Memorial Park.

Main speaker for the ceremony was Thomas N. Downing, U.S. Congressman from the First District. Also participating in the program was the Army School of Music and the American Legion District Honor Guard Unit No. 3.

United Investment Savings. A new way to make your money grow.

The way your United Virginia Banker looks at it, it's better to invest your money than just save it. That's the idea behind our new United Investment Savings.

Start with an initial deposit of $500 or more. Then, as often as you like, make deposits of as little as $50.

Now here's the interesting part. United Investment Savings pays the nation's highest allowable bank return. The interest—5%—is compounded continuously. Your interest earns interest all the time, so you get more than 5%.

But that's not all. You get the convenience of a quarterly statement. Deposits are simpler to make, while there's no need to come into the bank to have your interest posted. And you even have a choice of how we credit interest to your account.

Withdrawals are easy too. No notice is required at the beginning of each calendar quarter. And only 90 seconds National days any other time.

Ask your United Virginia Banker about United Investment Savings. The sooner you do, the more money you'll make.

We're united to help you grow financially.

Our Economic Study

Great strides have been made in Virginia Beach in recent months in attracting new industry to our city. Many city officials have put in long hours on this task. Their efforts are beginning to pay off.

Virginia Beach will never be a smokestack city, and, in truth, we wouldn't want it that way. But light industry properly placed in industrial parks and in other appropriate areas, can contribute greatly to our economy and tax base.

The latest step toward attracting industry was made possible through Virginia Electric and Power Company, our city officials and the Virginia Beach Development Council. The Council's local committee gathered the important information and furnished it to VEPCO. More than 100 persons worked on the report for four months without any compensation. They deserve a vote of gratitude.

Then VEPCO compiled it all and presented it in attractive book form without charge. The utility also deserves a vote of thanks.

The new study shows all the assets and the shortcomings of Virginia Beach where industry is concerned. City officials say they can now work toward correcting those shortcomings made clear by the report. That will serve as another plus of the study.

Now for the first time when our industrial hunters talk to industry, they can present our case easily and with confidence. The only result can be the attraction of more industry to this progressive city on the verge of maturity. This is an important step forward in the maturation process.

Vo-Tech School Needed Now

School Supt. E. E. Brickell is a persuasive man. Hopefully his plea for release of federal funds already appropriated for vocational-technical schools, such as the one planned for Virginia Beach, will be heeded by the House subcommittee he addressed yesterday.

The city has had plans for this much-needed facility for some time. City funds were put aside in a bond issue in January 1968, but matching federal have not been forthcoming. Virginia Beach is certainly not the only area affected by this fund crisis in Washington, but it is affected greatly.

Support for the release of the funds has grown recently. Both Congressmen Thomas Downing and William Whitehurst have urged the subcommittee to let go of as near 100 per cent as possible of the money. Several others have joined Brickell in asking the same thing.

Much as we realize the budgetary problems faced by the Nixon Administration, we have our own problems too. The same thing is happening here that has happened often before to Virginia Beach. There has been a federal promise, but when the time comes, the money doesn't. This time that just can't happen. This facility is absolutely for our youth and for helping to train those who will be necessary to the planned light industry economy of Virginia Beach in the future.

It has already waited long enough. Hopefully all the urging will help release the federal purse strings and make Virginia Beach a recipient of the funds to build this important school as soon as possible. Every day we delay is costly to us.

The Resort Season Ahead

The Memorial Day weekend brought thousands to Virginia Beach for sun and fun. Hotels, motels, rooming houses and campsites were jammed. There were long lines in restaurants. The expressway and the bridge-tunnel set new records. In fact, it was the best Memorial Day on record.

More inquiries have been received by the Chamber of Commerce here than ever before. Extra help was needed to handle the mail. Over the weekend the Chamber set up a room-locator, and tourists had to stay as far away as Chesapeake.

What it all means is clear. The weather was warm and sunny. There is much to do here. Our resort industry has provided the best, and the tourists are taking advantage of it. If the weather continues to be half as nice, all indications point to the best year ever on record for Virginia Beach.

The resort-oriented businesses contribute greatly to our economy. This year they will contribute more. Their season has been longer and better, and it's really just beginning to move into high gear. Those of us who live here all year possibly do not realize how lucky we are to live in a resort area. Perhaps we take the sun, water and fun for granted. But we can be thankful for the resort industry. It pays a lot of city bills. Let us all hope the optimistic predictions come true, and this is the best year yet. All of us will benefit if it is.

And to the tourists who have just joined us . . . welcome. Have a fine time. Take home happy memories. Then come back again, and again and again.

THE GRADUATE

Fire Victims

Editor: VIRGINIA BEACH SUN

We were guest occupants of the Cavalier Hotel's fifth floor during the morning of the unfortunate fire of May 19th. We requested that copies of the May 22nd Virginia Beach Sun be sent to us so that we might be able to read an objective account of that fire. We have received our copies and now feel that one week's time was an insufficient period in which to expect this keener perspective in reporting. Our purpose in writing is not so much a matter of attempting to create an objective perspective but rather one of reaction to an article which seems to purport sheer fantasy. Our account cannot portray those facts which caused the fire or checked it. Rather, we are limited only to our personal experiences as to that which we sensed when we awoke on that morning and that which we encountered as we made our way to safety.

We awoke at approximately the same time, 5:10 a.m., although we chose separate routes by which to leave the floor; there were only three (two staircases and an elevator) and each was on the other side of the fire from where our rooms were located. There was no exit or escape route on our side of the fire. We were awakened by the smell of smoke only. There was no noise; there was only smoke. After dressing hurriedly, we opened our doors to find a corridor choked with a thick, white smoke, and tainted with an acrid aroma. Only the silent motion of people crawling to the exit could be seen. We dampened towels to cover our faces and felt our way through the smoke to safety. We wore what was close to our hands and carried nothing. Except for a few hollow "last call" shouts, we maintained the eerie silence. We later discovered that it was this same silence which would haunt us the next night and prove more horrifying than the smoke itself. We further realized that it was probably this same silence which prevented panic and confusion and aided us in what we termed our fortunate escape.

We were outside and several minutes seemed to pass before the first fire truck arrived. We walked around wondering when they would arrive and if they had been called. We do not intend to detract from the performance of the police or firemen but by the time they arrived all but one of the residents of the fifth floor were safe. By that time, flames could be observed outside the room where the fire started, clearly indicating that had we still been in our rooms, escape would have been cut off, and the rooms would have then become our crematories, (the fire extension ladder which rescued Ralph White could not reach our wing). It was at this point in time, that the hotel guests on the lower floors, who were in no real danger, were being aroused and advised to descend to the lobby.

While we were in our rooms there was no warning given to us of the fire. We were not called by the hotel desk, our doors were not knocked upon by other residents, and we were not aroused by any noise outside. When we left we concluded that we were the last ones on the floor. We can attest to the fact that there was no bedlam, no confusion, and absolutely no noise. The good Lord was on the fifth floor, but Joe wasn't. William McKenna Dick Jett

Not Fair

Editor, VIRGINIA BEACH SUN:

I don't think it's fair to handicap a family from owning and parking a camper trailer or boat and trailer just because they don't have a concealed back yard.

If they pass a law in not parking trailers on your own driveway then they should include old wrecks some people call their second car.

I would rather have a neat camper or trailer park in a driveway next to or should I say in our neighborhood than some of those old wrecks some people park in their driveways. Stanislaus J. Pinos

Special Report

They're All Going to Win

Politicians are an optimistic lot. With just over a month to go before the July 15 Democratic primary, all three gubernatorial candidates are claiming victory is theirs. Just the other day Bernard Levin of Norfolk claimed he is the only contender for the Attorney General's slot that can win without a runoff election in August. And he is one of four candidates for that job.

There are only two major contenders for the second spot on the Democratic ticket, so a runoff is not expected to be needed there.

The gubernatorial aspirants are talking about a runoff only behind closed doors and in hushed tones, but most political buffs expect there will be one. But when it comes to predicting who will be in it, even the discussions behind closed doors and in whispered tones are missing. There just doesn't seem to be a consensus.

Henry Howell says William Battle didn't release all the results of his poll taken earlier this year and that it included some questions about the preference of soft drinks. How that got into a political poll is unknown.

Battle says he'll be glad to appear on debates with Howell, but Howell says Battle is shying away from TV debates and the like. Howell is also accusing Battle of not having a very good memory, a terrible shortcoming for a candidate, so says Howell.

So far it has been Battle and Howell who have engaged in more personality issues than those in which Fred Pollard has been involved. For the most part Pollard has stayed out of the personality debates.

As a matter of fact the Pollard ticket folks just have a determined smile on their faces these days as they campaign hard, especially since their poll says things are looking up. Howell says he had a poll too, but learned nothing significant from it. It was meant to help him with his image.

Pollard is basing his campaign on experience in a state government. In a case of one-upmanship Battle is now talking about his experience too as a federal executive. He was a close personal friend of John Kennedy and ran the unsuccessful Kennedy campaign in Virginia in 1960. For his effort he was appointed Ambassador to Australia. That experience is now being played up.

And of course, Howell has experience too in the Virginia General Assembly. The "Godwin umbrella" that has been placed over Pollard has been accepted by him. He says that's where he wants to be and that he is proud of the programs he helped initiate under the ministrations of Mils Godwin. Now he says it's time to go farther with Pollard.

Howell was in the legislature during this time too, and has even tried to get under the umbrella just a bit.

What it all boils down to is a horse race between Battle and Pollard in the primary, with Howell most likely running hard enough to make the runoff too. And a horse race it is right now. Something like neck and neck, according to the experts.

Democrats know Howell can't win in the fall over Republican conservative Linwood Holton. Privately they feel that Pollard will have the least trouble against this formidable opponent. But the Republicans are optimistic politicians too. They tell us no Democrat can beat Holton, and he's a shoe-in.

They base this on the GOP bandwagon that began with a Nixon victory in Virginia last fall. This could be the Republicans' shining hour, but it is still doubtful that there'll be a GOP elephant parked in Capitol Square on inauguration day next January.

But since everyone is certain he's going to win, it's going to be pretty crowded in those state offices and in the Executive Mansion anyway.

SPOTS

By H. Joseph Lowenthal, Jr.

"I don't care what you say, you should not have laughed," she said.

"Why not?" he asked. "It was one of the funniest things I'd ever heard."

"You know you shouldn't have laughed," she said. "She'll carry that scar on her personality the rest of her life."

"Those psychology courses you took really got to you, didn't they?" he asked.

"Never mind about my psychology courses. You still shouldn't have laughed."

"OK, I admit it," he said. "I shouldn't have laughed."

"All the other parents beamed and clapped when their children got those special awards," she said. "They didn't laugh."

"How could they laugh when their kids got awards for best attendance, finger-painting, scholarship and things like that?" he asked. "Those awards aren't funny. Besides I think the whole idea of graduation ceremonies for a three-year-old in nursery school is ridiculous."

"Your daughter's award was not meant to be funny either," she said icily. "It was supposed to be a very serious moment. I was so embarrassed when you started laughing. Everyone was looking at you."

"Sorry," he said. "It just seemed natural to laugh when she got an award for being the best behaved child in the class."

"My reaction was more like shock," she said. "But I didn't laugh."

"Her reaction was something like shock too," he said. "And she laughed with me. I thought her older sister was going to fall out of her 'Queen's attendant chair, it shocked her so much."

"She must just be different in school from what she is at home," he said. "The teacher said she was so quiet."

"The only time she's quiet at home is when she's sleeping," he said. "The other morning when I woke her up she talked for five minutes straight without even pausing to take a breath. And right out of a deep sleep."

"What was she talking about?" she asked.

"Of course I know it, but she can irritate both of us with her mischief," he said. "And after a spanking and a solemn, tearful promise of never doing it again, ten minutes later she'll do it again."

"I think she takes after you," she said. "Our older daughter is more sensitive like me. If she's punished once, she won't do it again."

"Not so anyone can catch her," he said. "Yeah, maybe you're right. She is a lot like you."

"That's not funny," she said. "Where is the award?"

"I had to take it away from her to get framed," he said. "She was carrying it around all day. I want to remind her of this in years to come and I want to be able to see it often to remind us how well-behaved she is the next time she colors us a beautiful picture on the cement floor of the garage."

"Maybe all we'll have to do now is point out to her how well-behaved she is when she starts to do something wrong and show her the award," she said. "Maybe then she'll be a perfect angel."

"Dreamer," he said.

"Yeah, I guess you're right," she said.

"Well, here comes our older one holding her eye and crying," he said. "I bet it comes out what happened. What happened, dear?"

"She screamed at me and hit me because I told her I nearly fainted when the teacher said she was the best behaved child in the class," said an unhappy five-year-old.

He laughed.

"You still shouldn't have laughed," she told him, as she comforted the child.

Summer Programs Set

In its meeting Tuesday the Parks and Recreation Commission decided to send a letter to City Manager Roger Scott asking the city to extend a nearby sewer line to Dorer's Mountain rather than to install a septic tank at the site.

In proposing this change the Commission stated that putting in temporary septic tanks now would be a waste of money. The fill at Dorer's Mt. will now be completed at an earlier date than was first expected and crowds of up to 10,000 people can be anticipated when the project is completed.

One project was shelved for the time being. The request by Prince of Peace Lutheran Church for a park in the King's Grant area on the church grounds was set aside by the Commission because there is not enough unity between the people of the church and the civic league at this time for the park to become a reality.

The Commission approved plans for a Volleyball Tournament to be held on June 21 at 87th Street. The tournament, sponsored by Standing Naval Forces Afloat, will be a one-day affair. Participants from about five different countries are expected to enter.

A successful Memorial Day weekend was reported from Little Island. Between 10,000 and 15,000 people made use of the facilities there during the holiday. Over $1,000 was taken in for parking. A crowd of approximately 11,000 people visited Redwing Park during the same period.

Harold Whitehurst, director of Parks and Recreation, reported on the various programs planned by his department for the summer. Among the programs is the free Tri Outdoor Education Program for 4th graders which will be conducted at Playland Park June 16 through Aug. 22. Each school will be assigned a week. This program will include swimming, arts and crafts and nature. A similar program is planned at Little Island for children 9-13 years old.

Whitehurst reported on the playgrounds that will be opened from June 20 until Aug. 13. The Elementary Playground, for grades 1 through 7, will be opened from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday. These are: Alanton, Arrowhead, Bayside, Brookwood, Cooke, Kellam High, Kempville Elementary, Kingston, Luford, Lynnhaven, Malibu, Newlight, Old Donation, Pembroke, Seatack, Shelton Park, Thoroughgood, Trantwood, B. Williams, Windsor Woods and Woodstock.

High School Playgrounds which will be opened during the same period from 2 p.m. until 9:30 p.m. are Bayside, Princess Anne, First Colonial, Kempville High School, Cox and Kellam. Although these playgrounds are primarily for boys and girls in grades 8 through 12, adults can make use of them.

Another summer feature sponsored by the Department of Parks and Recreation is the Concerts by the Sea. These will be held from 7 p.m. until 8 p.m. at the statue of the Norwegian.

Gen. Redling Leaves Area

A farewell review was held at Fort Story last week for Maj. Gen. William N. Redling, Commanding General of the U. S. Army Transportation Center and Fort Eustis and Fort Story, who left at the end of the month for an assignment in Washington with the Army Materiel Command.

Gen. Redling was again honored at the post during a dinner and reception at the Ft. Story Officers Club. The dinner was attended by dignitaries from the Virginia Beach-Norfolk area, including State Sen. Edward B. Cato III, Frank A. Dusch, Virginia Beach mayor, and Frank W. Kellam, president of the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce.

The general was the reviewing officer at the parade escorted by post Commander, Col. Daniel K. Byrne, and Lt. Col. Robert E. Saks, was Commander of Troops.

Fort Story's only WAC and the first to be stationed at the post since 1946, Capt. Catherine S. Barnes, was parade adjutant.

Gen. Redling has been the Commanding General of the Transportation Center, as well as the Commandant of the Transportation School since February 1965. He was previously the Chief of Transportation for the Department of the Army. He will be succeeded by Maj. Gen. Howard F. Schiltz who is now Director of Distribution and Transportation for the Materiel Command.

Lady. They will be held every Sunday during July and August. Various area servicebands will present the concerts.

A special program being offered during the summer months is the Summer Teen Classes. These classes are for teenagers between the ages of 13 through high school. Classes that are being taught free of charge include sewing, cooking, cake decorating, charm, art, ballet, ceramics, millinery, sketching and auto mechanics. Classes are also being offered in Judo, golf and horseback riding. Workshops are being offered in two areas—small arms and riflery and puppet, drama and music. More information may be obtained by calling the Recreation Department at 497-4884.

Whitehurst called the Commission's attention to an unusual event to take place this morning at 10 a.m. This is the track meet at Redwing Park for the special education students. Approximately 500 students are expected.

Tentative future plans were brought up by the Commission for use of Hospitality House. The building, located at 18th Street and Arctic Avenue will be used by the Recreation Department from September through May during the next two years. Two possible uses discussed for the facility were Senior Citizen classes, and weekend activities for military personnel visiting in the area.

Graduation Schedules Are Set

Schedules for baccalaureate services and graduation exercises have been released for Virginia Beach high schools. Bayside High School will have its baccalaureate sermon delivered by the Rev. Alfred G. Stables at 5:30 p.m. on June 8 in the school stadium. Graduation will be held on June 12, 8 p.m., in the school stadium. Rep. Thomas Downing will be speaker.

Cox High School will hold baccalaureate services in the school gymnasium at 4:30 p.m. on June 8. The Rev. Sidney Sanders will deliver the sermon. Graduation will be June 13, 8 p.m., in the school stadium. Rep. G. William Whitehurst will be speaker.

First Colonial's baccalaureate sermon will be delivered by the Rev. Donald H. Seely on June 8, 8 p.m., at the school stadium. Graduation exercises are set for June 11, 8 p.m., in the school stadium. The three valedictorians—Chris Beebe, Jane Criscoe, and Paul Saunders—will be the speakers.

Kellam High School will have their baccalaureate sermon delivered by the Rev. Martin Brady at 3 p.m. on June 8 at the school stadium. Graduation will be held on June 13, 8 p.m., also in the school stadium. F. E. Brickell, superintendent of Virginia Beach schools, will be the speaker.

Princess Anne High School will hold baccalaureate services in the school stadium at 5 p.m. on June 8. The Rev. Leonard R. Graves will deliver the sermon. Graduation will be June 13, 8 p.m., in the school stadium. Edwin Charles will be the speaker.

Union Kempville's baccalaureate sermon will be delivered by the Rev. Milton F. Gay Jr. on June 8 at 5:15 p.m. in the school gymnasium. Graduation exercises are set for June 12, 8:15 p.m., in the school gymnasium. F. E. Brickell will deliver the address.

Train Halts in Time

Summer police officer Alex Williams, and a Virginia Beach motorist, escaped injury in a Wednesday morning accident. Officials said Williams' police car was struck head on by a car being driven by Clark Harrill, Jr., 47, of Oceana Blvd. The accident occurred near the intersection of Oceana Blvd. and Southern Blvd. Both vehicles came to a stop on a railroad crossing as a train approached the crossing at a slow rate of speed. The train was brought to a stop in time to avoid striking the vehicles.

Norfolk Man to Appear

A Norfolk man is scheduled to appear in Virginia Beach Municipal Court Friday for preliminary hearing on a charge of rape. According to police, Grover H. Munford, 35, is charged with the rape of an 18-year-old Norfolk girl early Tuesday morning. The girl is quoted with saying she was walking along Military Highway when a motorist offered her a ride, taking her to a remote sand pit off Centerville Turnpike where the alleged rape occurred. Police Det. Sgt. E. F. Buzzy said he arrested Munford at his home Tuesday evening. Munford is free on bond pending his court appearance.

Watchman Sued

Alvin E. Nuckols, a night-watchman for the Virginia Beach Department of Parks and Recreation, is being sued for $110,000 in connection with the shooting of a juvenile last July. The suit contends 17-year-old Kenneth S. Adams was shot in the foot by Nuckols when he reportedly saw the youth running from a city building on Recreation Drive. Court proceedings cleared Nuckols of any charges in connection with the shooting on grounds of a lack of evidence that Nuckols fired the shot. The suit is seeking compensations of $100,000 for young Adams, plus $10,000 for his father, Thomas, to cover Adams' medical expenses.

Car Strikes Bridge

A 22 year old Norfolk resident was fatally injured shortly after 5 a.m. Tuesday morning when his car slammed into the concrete railing of a bridge on Shore Drive. Police identified the man as William Edward Szabo, whose address was listed as 21st Bay Street, Norfolk. They said Szabo had been discharged from the U.S. Navy on April 29. Investigators said Szabo was killed instantly when his auto, which was travelling East on Shore Drive, struck the concrete railing of the bridge about a mile from Diamond Springs Road. Szabo was alone at the time of the accident. This was the 15th traffic fatality of the year in Virginia Beach.

Toll Reaches 14

The deaths of two persons last weekend raised the Virginia Beach traffic toll for the year to 14, as compared to 4 on the same date of last year. Both fatalities were the result of single-car accidents.

Police investigators said Richard West, 45, of Avenue "P", Norfolk, was fatally injured Saturday afternoon as his car apparently went out of control on Independence Blvd. and slammed into a concrete support of the Virginia Beach - Norfolk Expressway overpass.

Police said the second fatality occurred shortly after 3 a.m. Sunday morning on Princess Anne Road when Ruth M. Harms, 16, of Josephine Crescent, was killed when the auto in which she was riding went out of control. The driver of the car, identified as Robert A. Smith, 17, of Burlington Road, received minor face and head lacerations.

Authorities said the car left the roadway on a curve near Back Bay Landing Road snapping off a tree, spinning around and striking another tree, then traveling some 20 feet before coming to a stop.

Case Continued

Municipal Court Judge P. B. White has continued generally the case of Miss Susan A. Cummings charged by police with attempting to smuggle marijuana into the City Jail. The charge resulted from the alleged discovery of a marijuana cigarette inside a tube of tooth paste the girl brought to the jail in April. Miss Cummings, 19, of Pineridge Lane, has been bound over to a grand jury on a charge of possession of marijuana filed by police in connection with the discovery of the marijuana cigarette.

Actress Is In Demand By Theatre

Director Tim Jones of the Lake Wright Playhouse, had to wait six months to sign Joan Lancaster for a role in the city's only Equity professional company.

"It was worth the wait," he said. "The critics loved her, the public loved her, and the only terrible thing is, we may not have her very long....other theatres have waited just as long as we have."

Miss Lancaster and Storer Boone are starring in Bill Manhoff's merry farce-comedy, "The Owl and the Pussycat." Boone plays an owl young man who likes to think he is interested in things of the mind, and Miss Lancaster portrays a lively sex-kitten whose interests have always been in things of the body.

The action takes place in San Francisco where a young prostitute gets into the apartment of a writer who fancies himself above the demands of the flesh. She convinces him of his error, after which he struggles mightily against her influence, while she works equally hard at falling in love. He decides that if he can't beat her he will join her to him in love of knowledge. She learns three or four new words, but the pedagogical relationship is such a strain that they decide to commit suicide. They don't, of course, because it is a far, far better thing to accept themselves, poised somewhere between a complete idiocy and a vague affirmation that life is good, if you don't use big words to describe it.

"The Owl and the Pussycat" will continue through June 8. Dinner at the Lake Wright Playhouse begins at 6:30 and the curtain is at 8:30 p.m. The Playhouse is located just off Interstate 64 on Northampton Blvd.

PTA Features Trophies

A capacity audience attended the Point O View PTA meeting Tuesday evening which featured a Spring Festival program. Under the guidance of Miss Katherine West, Music Director, the students of the school presented a variety of folk songs and show tunes as well as dances.

Presentation of the May Court and the crowning of the King and Queen, Ken Smith and Judy Kelly, was done by Mac Rawls, Principal.

Richard D. Guy, Virginia Beach lawyer and member of the board of directors of the Community College, presented the PTA with two attendance trophies and expressed his hopes that parents will become more involved in school affairs and that with the trophies as an incentive the students will encourage their parents to attend each PTA meeting. The rooms that will have the trophies for the coming month because of outstanding attendance are Mrs. Pope, 3rd grade and Mrs. Graham, 6th grade.

Mrs. Paul Cousins, Extension Chairman of the Virginia Beach Council of PTA's installed the new officers for 1969-70 as follows: Melvin Mizelle, president, Mrs. M. V. Kohn, first vice-president, Mrs. W. G. Dugan, second vice-president, Mrs. M. Overbey, recording secretary, Mrs. J. R. Kuchera, treasurer and Mrs. H. Traylor, corresponding secretary.

A used school book sale will be held during the summer and will be announced at a future date.

Student Art Displayed

An exhibition of works of art in various media by teenagers, opened May 30 at The Village Gallery in College Park. The artists are students from junior high and high schools in Norfolk, Portsmouth, Virginia Beach, and Chesapeake.

The show has been arranged by The Larrymore Foundation, sponsors of The Village Gallery. Mrs. Dodie Hicks, hostess at the College Park Information Center, announced that the Gallery will be open daily, except Thursday, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday hours are 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. There is no admission charge to the Gallery. The exhibit will run through June 22nd.

The Village Gallery is located at 6226 Providence Road, just inside the entrance to College Park at the intersection of Indian River Road and Providence Road in Virginia Beach.

Capt. Gokey, a member of the 1946 class, U.S. Naval Academy, holds two bachelor engineering degrees and a masters degree in Engineering Administration from George Washington University, Washington, D.C. He is project manager, UHF Telemetry Conversion Project, Naval Electronic Systems Command, Washington D.C.

Girls Collect for Servicemen

Debbie Gualeni, 11, and Linda Gualeni, 9, recently collected several hundred magazines, books and other reading material to be sent to convalescing servicemen in Vietnam.

Debbie and Linda, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gualeni, Jr., collected the material from their neighbors in the Colonial Arms Circle neighborhood through the American Society of The Golden Horseshoe organization. Assisting the girls in their drive was their grandfather, Joseph Gualeni, Sr.

The American Society of The Golden Horseshoe, founded by W. Glenn Elliott of Virginia Beach, is a patriotic organization. They are responsible for many magazines, books and special packages being sent to servicemen in Vietnam who are recuperating from wounds and illness.

The organization was awarded an official plaque by the Station Hospital, U. S. Naval Support Activity, in recognition of services rendered to convalescing servicemen in that area.

Dyane C. Neilson, daughter of Cmdr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Neilson, of Virginia Beach, was graduated from Wellesley College on Saturday, May 31, receiving the Bachelor of Arts degree at the 91st commencement held on the campus in Wellesley, Mass. Miss Neilson majored in psychology.

Debbie Gualeni presents Richard T. Short, co-founder of The American Society of the Golden Horseshoe, with several hundred magazines, books and other reading material. Looking on is Debbie's grandfather, Joseph Gualeni, Sr. Debbie's sister, Linda, was home ill when the presentation was made.

THE WOMEN

VIRGINIA BEACH SUN

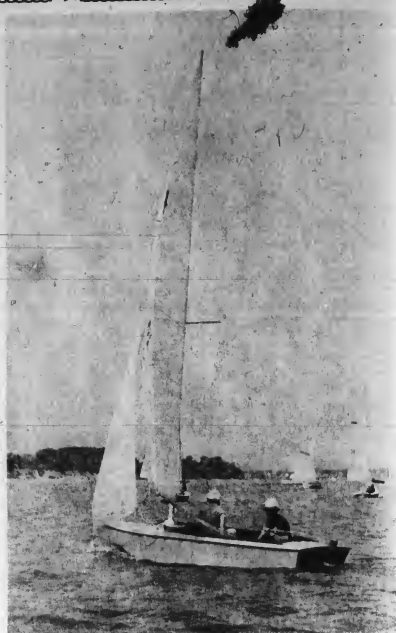

Thursday, June 5, 1969

This was the scene at the Narrows at 9:30 a.m. Saturday as participants registered for the ninth annual Broad Bay Regatta.

This was the scene on Broad Bay later as yachts came out for the first race. In the foreground is a flag used to mark the race course.

This yacht was leading the pack--for the time being anyway--during one of the early races.

Rudy Hagenkoetter Takes Bucket

The ninth annual Broad Bay Regatta got off to a somewhat slow start Saturday when the wind failed to cooperate, but the pace (and wind) picked up Sunday as Rudy Hagenkoetter took possession of the "Broad Bay Bucket."

The Bucket (a large perpetual trophy) is awarded to the winner of the class which has the largest total number of starters for the series of three races. There were two races Saturday and one Sunday.

The regatta is sponsored annually by the Broad Bay Sailing Association and is sanctioned by the Chesapeake Bay Yacht Racing Association. This year's regatta drew about 150 entries.

First place winners (resulting from three races) were, by class: Thistle, Donald L. Moore, Seven Sailing Association; 5-0-5, Ted Causey, Broad Bay Sailing Association; Mob-jack, Rudy Hagenkoetter, Broad Bay Sailing Association; Shark, Herman Smith, Portsmouth Boating Club; Skipjack, Don Heath, Hampton Yacht Club; Windmill, Jesse Page, Saltfish, W.P. Ball, Hampton Yacht Club; Moth, Walter Collins; Sand-shark, Davis Baxter, Hampton Yacht Club; Hampton, Bob Harrell, Norfolk Yacht and Country Club; Handicap B, Art Molitor, Norfolk Naval Sailing Association; Cal Cat, Berebee Trafton, Broad Bay.

Janie Waller

She Wants to Meet People

By Yatta Jones

"This was the kind of education I wanted to get...to be working with people...I wanted to learn about different kinds of people in the world and I didn't feel like a European tour would do it." Those are Janie Waller's words about her summer job.

Janie, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Waller of

Janie Waller

N. Bayshore Drive, will be spending a large part of this summer working in Europe under the International Voluntary Service of The American Friends Service Committee. Her first assignment will be in Tordington, England (about 100 miles northwest of London) where she will be a construction worker at The New Barnes School. Her second assignment will take her to Copenhagen, but she does not know exactly what she will be doing yet.

Janie, who is 19 years old, just finished her freshman year at Queens College in Charlotte, N. C. She is majoring in religion or education but says she is "open to change."

This summer's work will not be completely new for her. Janie worked two years ago in the North Philadelphia ghetto through the same program. At that time she spent four days with a work group that painted a woman's apartment.

The experience was an unforgettable one for her. As she says, "I felt like my whole life changed. It was the first time I had ever lived in real poverty...as we scraped the walls to get ready for painting cockroaches fell all over the place. My work partner told me I might as well get used to it because it was going to happen again...and it did."

Janie also worked with a smaller group here last summer at Seateck.

Before leaving for England Janie will undergo a week's orientation period in Philadelphia at Pendle Hill and then another four days at Luxembourg. There are several different countries taking part in the program so Janie's wish to work with people from other countries will be fulfilled.

There will be about 20 students in the work camp at Tordington. The New Barnes School is for children from broken homes and when the work group is not busy with construction work they will work with the children.

The group who worked at The New Barnes School last year built the foundation for new classrooms; Janie's group will build the upper classrooms.

Accommodations for the work group will be a little less than luxurious. They will sleep in sleeping bags and cook their food over an open fire. She was advised to take some American recipes that are cheap to make. She was also told "the food is delicious...if you like potatoes!"

Janie says that she was told she could bring anything she wanted as long as she kept in mind that she had to carry it. She is keeping her clothing at a minimum. Especially in view of the fact that she will have to do her laundry in cold water. She describes her summer as "a little less than luxurious."

American Lotus Goes International

By Carolyn McAllen

The future of the stand of American lotus in Tabernacle Creek near Sandbridge looks somewhat brighter this spring following dredging of the creek last winter to allow fresh water into the lotus stand.

The lotus are just now sending up leaves into the creek, and the full impact of the fresh water may not be known for several years, but one thing is certain--the salt level of the water has been substantially lowered. Before the dredging the salt level had reached a high of 1700 ppm (parts per million). However, a new test taken since the dredging shows 67 ppm in one area and 135 in another area of the creek.

A report from Longwood Gardens in Kennett Square, Pa., a gardens devoted to fresh water plants, said that 400 ppm is considered brackish and is too high a concentration of salinity for fresh water plants, which the lotus are. It is no surprise that the local lotus have decreased in size and number.

The dredging was done through the efforts of the Cape Henry Woman's Club which sponsors the annual Lotus Festival. Through the year's the club has spent more than $10,000 in buying the land around the gardens and trying to preserve one of the last stands of the native American lotus in the United States. This year's Lotus Festival will be July 16-23, and plans are well underway to make it bigger and better than ever--especially with the hoped for revival of the lotus to its former glory.

Proceeds from the Festival have provided donations to the General Hospital of Virginia Beach, to the public libraries and for scholarships.

Mrs. Cecil Reed, research chairman of Cape Henry Woman's Club and long-time lotus booster, last year wrote an article in the American Horticultural Magazine in which she requested the location of any other lotus stands in the United States. Replies came from Alabama, Illinois, New Jersey, North Carolina and Wisconsin.

This is Tabernacle Creek as it is now with the lotus just coming through the water. In July they will be in full bloom.

However, the largest stand is still in Tabernacle Creek. One stand in New Jersey is reported to be fading out because of pollution and drainage problems.

Through the efforts of Mrs. Reed, the American lotus has gone international. She has sent seeds to the Botanic Garden in Adelaide, South Australia and seeds and rhizomes to Japan. In addition she corresponds with Dr. Ichiro Ogawa in Denver who sent seeds to Japan also.

Plants resulting from these seeds were cross-pollinated with plants grown from 2,000-year-old oriental lotus seeds which were found in an overturned boat in Manchuria. Their age was established through Carbon 14 radioactivity tests.

The ancient lotus has a deep pink bloom. The petals are wider than those of the American lotus. The American lotus is the only yellow lotus in the world. The hybrid, however, has the wider petals of the ancient lotus but it is bi-colored--a combination of pale pink shading to yellow. It will be displayed along with the American lotus

Let's Have A Picnic

This was class picnic week.

At least they were on different days--Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday that is. So, two dozen cookies, three packages of buns and a dish of baked beans later we are through for another year.

Maybe I'm wrong, but sometimes I get the feeling that room mothers only call the working mothers. First my eight-year-old wanted to know if I'd make a dozen cookies for her picnic. I agreed. After all, what's a dozen cookies. Then the room mother called and wanted to know if I'd like to "contribute" three dozen hot dog buns. Naturally.

This was fine until about a half hour later when I got a call about the cookies--not the eight-year-old's class. Next came the beans. By this time I had the feeling I was the victim of some sort of plot. I don't mind helping, but after all...

The five-year-old's picnic was first. I made him a peanut butter and jelly sandwich. Later I asked him if he ate it. "No, I don't like peanut butter--just jelly." Last week it was the only thing he'd eat.

Then the six-year-old got sick before her picnic. After staying in bed for two days on a diet of soft drinks and jello, she wanted to know if she couldn't take some jello in her sister's thermos bottle and go on the picnic. She would really have lived things up--and probably spread a few germs too.

"I'll walk then!" stormed the eight-year-old out of the room after I had simply asked her how she was going to get out to Redwing Park. Her picnic was in the late afternoon. She had named off three different people who "might" take her. Two of them I didn't even know.

The explosion came when I told her I wanted a definite answer and I did not want her going with somebody I hadn't ever heard of. I suggested that she might ask our next door neighbor who also has a second grader. Betty went over there three times before she ever got up enough nerve to ask (she only plays with the other child every day).

I had told her I'd pick her up after the picnic. Have you ever tried to sort one grimy child out from among 100 plus others?

Then my husband had the nerve to suggest that we ought to take the kids out to Redwing Park for a picnic Sunday.

Navy Wives Beautify Cemetery

The Dam Neck Navy Wives Club of America, Chapter No. 207, has been working on a beautification project of the Center cemetery for the past six months. With the aid of a few husbands weeds were pulled and flowers and trees planted.

Upon completion of the project Capt. Stuart Sadler, Commanding Officer of Dam Neck, visited the cemetery and received a wooden plaque for the cemetery which was made by one of the husbands.

The cemetery is believed to be a private burial ground of the Robinson family before the time of public cemeteries and before the Navy moved to Dam Neck. The oldest legible epitaph dates back to the year 1787.

The winning flower arrangement for City Hall Day. The arrangement, which was done by Mrs. J. R. Lewis, was one donated by Alantone Garden Club. Second place was taken by Lake Shores Garden Club and third place winner was Thoroughgood Garden Club.

Notice the low bushy roses just coming into bloom. They are called fairy roses. You can spot them in the circular flower beds on Laskin Road. Also notice them on Atlantic Avenue at 59th Street, 62nd Street and 83rd Street and at the Hilltop Intersection on Laskin Road.

Fairy roses were first introduced into this area two years ago by the Virginia Beach Beautification Commission. They are free of pests and do not need spraying or pruning. They bloom from early June until frost. The masses of tiny blossoms vary in color from a pale to a deep pink.

mer work wardrobe as "two pairs of blue jeans and a lot of T-shirts." She does plan to take some cotton suits and a few "fun" things, however, because she will have two weeks to spend as she wishes while she is there. There was one clothing item that she was requested to take—a pair of workman's leather gloves.

To say that Janie is excited about the undertaking is a bit mild. She describes it as "the kind of thing I never thought would happen to me." She feels very fortunate because the program is over-enrolled and many students who put in applications had to be turned down.

Among her hobbies Janie lists playing the guitar (she received a 12-string one for Christmas), writing songs (she described these as protest songs, "but not obnoxious...they are quiet, mostly about children), and reading.

Janie has strong ideas about the world and the people in it. She likes her job this summer because she feels that she will be working with people who want the same thing she wants; a peaceful existence. "I want to be able to communicate on a level more than political," she says. "I don't feel problems can be solved on a complete political basis because people are human...I think that this kind of thing will be successful because there are a lot of people like me."

Janie is well aware of her inexperience and says, "I think I may sound a bit idealistic, but I think it's part of being young."

She is probably right, but unlike a lot of idealistic people she is willing to work hard for her ideals.

Lotus

Buddhists but to the Hindus before them and also to Christians. Hindu legend speaks of the lotus as the "delicate toeprints left by God as He walked to and fro on earth." Buddhists believe that Buddha first appeared sitting on a lotus pad (Oriental lotus can support up to a hundred pounds). A sculptured lotus appears in one of the oldest existing Christian churches, the Al Mu Allahak in northern Egypt as a symbol of regeneration.

As Mr. Sakamoto wrote Mrs. Reed, "Your lotus plants from Virginia came to be grown in various parts in your country; I believe the day will come soon when the flowers of your good-will will bloom in many places here in Japan."

HERE COMES OLGA!

Memorial Day came along with the opening of the Virginia Beach season. Each year more and more people come to Virginia Beach which, of course, we know is good for business, but it is really hectic for the residents. No place to park, beach crowded, impossible to go out and eat so the "natives" just seem to almost disappear from the scene.

Friday I spent a lot of time taking pictures from one end of the beach to the other. It was impossible to park. The steel pier, of course, was full of surfers and people fishing. Rudee Inlet at the Atlantic Charter Service had a parking lot completely packed with cars belonging to people who had chartered boats for fishing.

Every hotel and motel was packed with cars to their capacity. I do believe I could have found almost anywhere quicker than trying to get down Atlantic Avenue.

The Cavalier Beach and Cabana Club, the Capes, Princess Anne Country Club and the officer's club at the beach were all crowded. In fact, as you would take a long look down the beach, finding a place to stretch out and get some sun was almost impossible. Summer is great. Everyone seems to really come alive. But when you live at a seashore, you have to seek your activities

Romans 'Invade' 1st Colonial

By Robert Ford
First Colonial H.S.

On May 28 regulation school dress gave way to togas and tunics as the Latin students of First Colonial High School celebrated their annual end-of-the-year banquet.

Each year the Latin students and Latin Club get together and make plans for the end-of-the-year event. During the past year the Latin students earned over $300 for their banquet.

The classes each played a role at the banquet. The third and fourth year students were the aristocracy and upper class. As a special treat they were allowed to select slaves from first year students. The plebeians were from second year classes. First year students had the lowly job of waiting on and serving as slaves for the aristocracy.

First year students made plans for the banquet. Jane Criscoe and Dawn Reynolds were the masterminds behind the plans. Special guests invited to the banquet included Mr. Bowyer, principal, and Mr. Caldwell and Mr. Fields, assistant principals.

A menu of typical Roman foods was prepared for the club by Mrs. Warren and her lunchroom staff. Being the honored guests, the third and fourth year students were served first. They were followed by the administration and the invited faculty members. After they had been served the plebeians and slaves fought over what remained.

After a very satisfying meal the aristocracy, honored guests and plebeians were treated to entertainment supplied by the first and second year students. The first act on the agenda was the presentation of a gift to Mrs. Warren for all the help she gave in preparing for the banquet.

Wrestling matches followed the gift presentation. After each bout the aristocracy was allowed to decide who was the better of the two wrestlers. Wrestling was followed by traditional gladiatorial fights. Two teams of three men each engaged in fierce combat with pillows serving as shields and cardboard tubes were used as swords. After several minutes of hard combat the aristocracy was asked to decide who was to be taken out back to be flogged to death with wet noodles.

A modern version of the race of Atlanta was run by four relay teams, two first year and two second year teams. The first bell, Latin two class team was declared victorious.

As a special attraction several pretty Latin students gave an exhibition of their dancing talents. The aristocracy was so disappointed with the act that they had all of the dancers flogged with cooked cabbage.

First year students then elected the plebeians and aristocracy to honorary positions.

School Plans Dedication

The King's Grant Christian Day School will hold a Field, Family, Fun Day as its Closing Day activities on June 7 at 5473 Virginia Beach Blvd.

Honor awards and report cards will be given out at 11 a.m., followed by a family style picnic lunch. Then field day events, and other activities such as pony rides, hayrides, parcel post auction and white elephant auction, bake sale, handicrafts, fish pond and other games.

Dedication of the first building on the permanent site of the school will also take place. Proceeds will go toward the building

Those honored were: Jim Spencer, the one who looked most like Julius Caesar; "7" foot David Rollins, the one who looked most like a column; Tex Marlow, the one who looked most like Mount Olympus; Robert Ford, the one who looked most like the minotaur; Bartly Yuthill, the one most likely to go to Tartarus; and Latin Club Pres. Carolyn Miller, the one who looked most like a goddess.

BADGES & BANTER

By Les Lehigh

Recent contests among golfers in the Virginia Beach police department included a match this past week between Lt.'s C.R. Bailey and F.L. Knowles being challenged by Sgt.'s Daniel Creelman, Jr. and Carl West during an 18 hole round at the Stumpy Lake course. We understand the match was going in favor of Creelman and West until the 17th hole when Knowles shattered their visions of victory by sinking a chipshot from 25 feet off the green.

Men of the London Bridge Volunteer Fire Dept. were honored last Sunday by men of the London Bridge Baptist Church. Following a breakfast in their honor the fire fighters were given special recognition during the morning worship service by Pastor Mark Stone who presented Chief L.B. George, Jr., with a Bible for use in the department.

Reliable sources report City Sgt. John F. Marr was questioned as to whether open house would be observed at the City Jail as part of the "City Hall Day" observance. With a twinkle in his eye and a chuckle in his voice Marr reportedly replied "the jail will be open as usual, and if anyone wants to get in they know what they have to do".

Another of those unusual fire alarm calls were recorded this past Tuesday when men of the Plaza and Thalia Volunteer Fire Department's were dispatched to the Malibu region following a report of "smoke pouring out of a house". Arriving at the scene fire fighters discovered the dwelling was unoccupied and the smoke was a type of fog being circulated through the home as a method of clearing out mosquitos or other insects.

Justice of the Peace H. Bates Reese has us wondering over a remark made the other day. Reese was discussing ways of cutting down expenses during a possible trip to Europe, when he said he understood he could save quite a bit of money by visiting Denmark or Sweden. Reese wasn't too clear in his explanation but indicated the "savings" had something to do with being able to enjoy certain attractions in those areas without having to worry about clothing.

Children's Program to Begin

The Virginia Beach Public Libraries will launch their second annual Summer Reading Program on June 11.

Children in grades one through seven who read 15 books between June 11 and Aug. 4 will receive a certificate. The books must be on the child's reading level.

Children may pick up record cards at the circulation desk. The title and author of each book is written on the card, and parents must sign the cards to certify that the child has read the books. Several hundred children participated last year. Cards are available at all branches.

Award certificates will be presented at 10:30 a.m. Aug. 4 at all libraries.

Memorials To Cancer Increase

An indication of the growing support of the American Cancer Society's Memorial Program was given recently by Mrs. William P. Kellam of the Virginia Beach Unit of the American Cancer Society.

Mrs. Kellam said that Memorial Gifts to the Virginia Beach Unit totaled $2,326.00 in the past eight months as compared to $1,097.00 during the same period in 1968.

"The growth of Memorial Giving reflects greater public awareness of the need for more resources in the widening fight against cancer," Mrs. Kellam said.

"Cancer research has progressed so rapidly that available funds have not been sufficient to support all the new projects considered necessary to follow up on many new leads which have been uncovered. Most scientists now believe that cancer will be brought under control before many more years have passed," said Mrs. Kellam.

Memorial Gifts received by the Virginia Beach Unit of the American Cancer Society are made in remembrance of those who have died of cancer. "Some donors," Mrs. Kellam said, "have established the habit of making Memorial Gifts annually or at regular intervals."

Every Memorial Gift is acknowledged with a dignified card naming the person in whose honor the donation has been made. This card is sent to the person designated by the donor. It does not state the amount of the gift. An acknowledgment is sent to the donor.

Mrs. Kellam said, "the only information needed for making a Memorial Gift is the name of the person honored and the name and address of the person to whom acknowledgment should be sent. Memorial Gift Leaflets are available at the Virginia Beach Unit office, 958B Laskin Rd. and can be obtained by telephoning 428-4151.

The public is invited to attend; there is no admission. The Recreation Center is located on DeLaura Lane in Aragona Village. For further information please contact Robert Hardy at the Recreation Center during the day at 497-9908.

Mile of Art to Be Shown

The 14th annual Boardwalk Art Show will be held July 17-21 along a mile strip of the Boardwalk at Virginia Beach. Invitations to exhibit have been sent to 2,200 artists for the 1969 show. Acceptances have been received from artists in 22 states, excluding Virginia, and invitations were requested by artists in England and Jamaica. Many of last year's prizewinners will be exhibiting. Prizes in 1968 totalled $2,675, with $1,000 going to the "Best in Show" purchase award, and sales totalled $80,436.54 for the 450 artists exhibiting.

Mrs. W. W. Washburn is general chairman for the 1969 show and Mrs. J. L. Strole is entries chairman.

Joint Meet Planned

The 45th Annual Joint Meeting of the Virginia Engineering and Technical Societies will be held June 19-21 at the Cavalier Hotel.

Technical exhibits will be displayed throughout the entire meeting.

Whitehurst Is Speaker

Second District Congressman, Dr. G. William Whitehurst, will be the principal speaker at formal Ground Breaking ceremonies for a new Science Center at Virginia Wesleyan College on June 8.

The ceremony will be held on the East Patio at Virginia Wesleyan at 4 p.m. on Sunday. Virginia Wesleyan President Lambuth M. Clark will preside for the occasion. Judge Jerry G. Bray, Jr., chairman of the Board of Trustees of Virginia Wesleyan, will introduce the speaker. Music will be provided by the COMPHIBLANT Band, U.S. Atlantic Fleet.

The Science Center is the second major building in Wesleyan's Phase II development program. Construction began on the project this week. It is to be completed in July 1970 and will house classrooms, offices and laboratories for the college's expanding science division. The total development cost for the Science Center is $1,050,000. The college received a grant and a loan from the U. S. Office of Education under the Higher Education Facilities Act totaling approximately $700,000. Virginia Wesleyan had to raise slightly more than $300,000 locally toward the cost of the project.

Home Wins Contest

Gary Worrall and Ronald Van Voorhis, two students at First Colonial High School, have been announced as winners in a Model Building Contest sponsored by the National Association of Women in Construction, Chapter #137.

The contest was for high school students in the Tidewater area; Gary and Ronald were first place winners. In addition to individual trophies presented to the winners, the sponsoring school also received a plaque.

The winning entry was a joint project for the two students. It was a modern home which featured a hexagonal hub with angled wings on each side of the hub. Gary and Ronald spent about three weeks constructing the model.

Gary, the son of Lt. Cmdr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Worrall of First Colonial, is a sophomore at the college at either Cal Tech or MIT, majoring in some math or engineering field.

Ron, also a sophomore at First Colonial, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard R. Van Voorhis of Johnson Street. He plans to go to the University of Virginia and get a degree in electrical engineering.

Crises Are A.R.E. Topic

A week's conference on the subject, "Times of Crisis" will be held, June 8-14 at the Association for Research and Enlightenment, 67th Street and Atlantic Avenue. Lectures will take up distinctive facets of various crises that arose in older civilizations and relate them to crises confronting the world today.

Edgar Evans Cayce, younger son of the late Edgar Cayce, will lecture on "Atlantis" on Monday, June 9th at 8 p.m. Cayce has had a book published on the fabled Atlantis as treated in the Cayce readings.

On Tuesday, June 10 at 8 p.m. Mary Ellen Carter will talk on "Prophecy." Mrs. Carter has recently had a book published on "Edgar Cayce and Prophecy."

On Thursday, June 12 Warren Wild will talk on "Times of Crisis." Wild has recently come to Virginia Beach and opened a bookshop specializing in psychic material.

On Friday, June 13 at 8 p.m. Vincent DeSanti will talk on "Earth Changes." DeSanti is an experienced geologist. He will base his talk on the earth changes predicted in the Cayce readings.

All lectures are open to the public. Afternoon lectures daily on different aspects of the Cayce readings are also open to the public. Question and answer periods follow all lectures.

Three Get Commissions

Three Virginia Beach National Guardsmen have been accepted as officer candidates in the Virginia National Guard Officer Candidate School, announced Virginia Adjutant Gen. Paul M. Booth. They are Joseph C. McCormick of Goodview Drive, David M. Riley of West Little Neck Road, and Anthony P. Renaldi of Thunderbird Drive.

They will begin a year of training on June 7 when they will report to the State Military Reservation for the first of two consecutive summer annual field training exercises. Each encampment will last two weeks.

Revenue From Tolls Goes Up

April was a good month financially for the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway with substantial increases in traffic and revenue over the same month of a year ago.

Toll revenues resulted in a profit increase of nearly 400 per cent, with $174,599 over expenses being realized. Traffic increased by 37.6 per cent over April of a year ago.

The first four months of this year resulted in net revenue totaling $621,030, which equaled 1.37 times the earned interest on the Expressway bonded debt.

Virginia Beach Circuit Court

Decisions May 23 to 29

Russell McParrson (aka) Russell McPherson, Old Virginia Beach Blvd., Virginia Beach, appealed a charge of driving under the influence, found guilty, fined $200 and costs, drivers license suspended for 12 months.

Frank E. Greene, Millard Street, Virginia Beach, appealed a charge of reckless driving, found guilty of improper driving, fined $50 and costs.

Douglas S. Reldal, Raintree Road, Virginia Beach, indicted for malicious wounding, charge nolle prossed.

Virginia Beach Juvenile Court

Case Summation May 23 to 29

The court held hearings on 103 juvenile petitions which concerned persons accused of violating state laws or city ordinances. Included in these hearings were 12 cases involving felonies, five of which were continued to future dates, one was continued generally, three ended in periods of probation, one ended in a commitment to care of the State Dept. of Welfare and Institutions, and the remaining two were forwarded to a grand jury.

Other cases which the court settled involved 26 on alleged traffic law violations and 10 on family domestic problems. There were five cases of parental non-support during the above calendar dates.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC
Notice is hereby given to the public that Aragona Utilities Corporation has filed with the State Corporation Commission revised rates, rules and regulations for sewerage service rendered in the vicinity of Aragona Village, area of the City of Virginia Beach, which involve increases over the charges now being made. The proposed rates, filed to become effective upon the order of the State Corporation Commission and after commencement of delivery of effluent to Hampton Roads Sanitation District are as follows:

A Two-Part Rate
Treatment Charge: The exact charge of each individual customer as billed by Hampton Roads Sanitation District on their rate schedule which is based on metered water usage; and Service Charge: For transportation to Hampton Roads Sanitation District, maintenance, service and collection. To each residential customer $18.00/qr.

To each apartment customer $13.50/qr.

To each commercial customer a factor times the residential base rate of $18.00. Said factor would be the customer's 1967 water usage divided by the average 1967 water usage of a residential customer, or, in cases where there is no record for determination of 1967 water usage, the actual or estimated water usage for such customer as appropriate.

"An investigation of the proposed charges has been entered upon by the Commission, and a hearing on such rates has been set for 10:00 A.M. on July 17, 1969, in the Courtroom of the Commission, Blanton Building, Richmond, Virginia, at which time and place members of the public generally may appear and present such relevant data as may be desired and may be heard."

ADVERTISEMENT
The City of Virginia Beach,

Virginia, hereby invites bids for the franchise proposed to be granted in the following ordinance, duly passed by the Council and approved by the Mayor on the 12th day of May, 1969, which bids are to be in writing and delivered to the presiding officer of the Council of said City in open session, to be held in the Council Chamber in said City on the 23rd day of June, 1969, at 10:00 o'clock A.M., the right being reserved to reject any and all bids; and BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that the successful bidder shall pay the cost of advertising the franchise.

AN ORDINANCE
To provide for the grant by the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, to a person or persons, or to a corporation, its successors and assigns, hereafter to be ascertained in the mode prescribed by law, of the right for the term and upon the conditions herein stated, to use the streets, alleys and public places of said City, and to acquire, erect, maintain and use, and if now constructed to maintain and use, poles, towers, wires and facilities over and along, and to acquire, construct, maintain and use, and if now constructed to maintain and use conduits, pipes, mains and other facilities, including necessary manholes, and to run cables and wires in, under and along the streets, alleys and public places of said City, and to use the property of other persons, corporations and organizations to use its property upon such arrangements as shall be agreed upon subject to the conditions herein set forth, for the purpose of providing all types of telephone, telegraph and other electronic service at any point within the corporate limits of said City, as the same now exist or may hereafter be extended or altered.BE IT ORDAINED BY THE COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF VIRGINIA BEACH, VIRGINIA
1. That there shall be granted in the mode prescribed by law for franchised grants and upon the conditions hereinafter specified, the rights and privileges on, over and under the streets, alleys and public places of the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia embodied in the following draft of an ordinance entitled:"AN ORDINANCE
To grant to its successors and assigns, the right for the term and upon the conditions herein stated, to use the streets, alleys, and public places of the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, and to acquire, erect, maintain and use, and if now constructed to maintain and use, poles, towers, wires and facilities over and along, and to acquire, construct, maintain and use, and if now constructed to maintain and use conduits, pipes, mains and other facilities, including necessary manholes, and to run cables and wires in, under and along the streets, alleys and public places of said City and to use the property of other persons, corporations and organizations to use its property upon such arrangements as shall be agreed upon subject to the conditions herein set forth, for the purpose of providing all types of telephone, telegraph and other electronic service at any point within the corporate limits of said City, as the same now exist or may hereafter be extended or altered.BE IT ORDAINED BY THE COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF VIRGINIA BEACH, VIRGINIA
Section 1 (a). The right is hereby granted unto hereinafter referred to as the "Grantee", its successors and assigns, for the term and subject to the conditions and limitations hereinafter stated, to use the streets, alleys and public places of the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, hereinafter referred to as the "City", and to acquire, erect, maintain and use, and if now constructed to maintain and use, poles, towers, wires and facilities over and along, and to acquire, construct, maintain and use, and if now constructed to maintain and use conduits, pipes, mains and other facilities, including necessary manholes, and to run cables and wires in, under and along the streets, alleys and public places of the City, and to use the property of other persons, corporations and organizations to use its property upon such arrangements as shall be agreed upon subject to the conditions herein set forth, for the purpose of providing all types of telephone, telegraph and other electronic service at any point within thecorporate limits of the City, as the same now exist or may hereafter be extended or altered and in accordance with authority granted by the State Corporation Commission of Virginia.
(b) The City may require that any lines, cables, conduits, or similar facilities of the Grantee which are to be constructed on City property after the effective date of this ordinance be installed beneath the surface of the land and in accordance with sound construction practices relating to such installation.
(c) Prior to doing any work, other than minor repair or construction which will not interfere with use of the City's property, pursuant to the terms of this ordinance on property owned by the City, the Grantee shall apply to the City Department of Public Works for work, stating the nature of the work and the location in which it is to be performed. The City shall promptly authorize such work unless it clearly appears that the proposed work will unreasonably interfere with the health, safety, or welfare of citizens of the City. In an emergency, work may be performed by Grantee without such a permit, subject to the provisions of sections 4 and 6 of this ordinance.
(d) When Grantee's facilities are located on property owned by the City and the City reasonably requires that such facilities be relocated, Grantee will at its expense move such facilities to an alternate location reasonably suitable to Grantee's purposes and provided by the City at the City's expense. This provision shall not apply to removal or relocation of facilities required by any State or Federal agency, except where the facilities to be relocated are located on public property which has been dedicated or acquired for street or road purposes, including uses incidental thereto.

Section 2. From and after the date on which this ordinance shall become effective, the poles and other facilities in, under and along the streets, alleys and public places of the City, authorized by this ordinance to be located and constructed, shall be located at reasonably suitable and convenient points. If and when requested by the Mayor or other proper administrative officer of the City, the Grantee shall, from time to time, file with the City plans showing the location of proposed additional poles or structures, and obtain a permit therefor prior to their construction in, under and along the streets, alleys and public places of the City.

Section 3. In the location and erection of the poles, conduits and other facilities and fixtures herein authorized, the Grantee shall have the right, after reasonable notice to the City Department of Public Works, to trim, cut and keep clear of the wires and fixtures of the trees in and along the streets, alleys and public places of the City, but shall not cut or otherwise injure said trees to any greater extent than is reasonably necessary in the construction, maintenance and operation of the said poles, wires, fixtures and other structures of the Grantee as herein authorized and provided.

Section 4. In the event the Grantee shall, in the construction or repair of its works, injure any pavement, sidewalk, sewer, water or other pipe or works belonging to the City, it shall, upon notice thereof from the Mayor, promptly repair the same at its own cost and expense.

Section 5. The Grantee shall, when so requested by the Council of the City, permit its poles, towers and other structures to be used without compensation by the City for the purpose of placing thereon any traffic lighting, fire or police alarm, telegraph or telephone wires which may be necessary for the exclusive use of the police or fire department of the City, provided that such use by the City shall not interfere with the proper use of said poles, facilities and fixtures by the Grantee, and that the location and character of said wires and fixtures of the said City shall be subject to the approval of the Grantee herein, and provided further that the City shall, and it hereby agrees to, indemnify and save harmless the Grantee from any and all loss, damage, cost or expense to, or which may be incurred by Grantee, or to which it may be subjected by reason of or as a result of the use of said poles and structures by the City as in this section provided.

Section 6. The Grantee agrees and binds itself, by the acceptance of this ordinance, to indemnify, keep and hold the City free and harmless from liability on account of injury or damage to person or property growing out of the construction, improvement, maintenance, repair and operation of its lines or works, and in the event that suit shall be brought against the City, either independently or jointly with Grantee on account thereof to it by the City, will defend the City in any such suit at the cost of Grantee, and, in event of a final judgment being obtained against the City, either independently or jointly with Grantee, the Grantee will pay such judgment, with all costs, and hold the City harmless therefrom; but nothing herein contained shall be construed to render Grantee liable for the negligence of the City, its agents or employees or of any other person or corporation.

Section 7. The Grantee shall operate and maintain an efficient telephone service system at reasonable rates for use of inhabitants of the City during the term of this franchise.
Section 8. All the rights and privileges hereby granted to Grantee may be exercised by any successor or successors, assignee or assignees of the Grantee, but the successor or successors, assignee or assignees shall be subject to all the provisions, obligations and stipulations and penalties herein prescribed.
Section 9. The rights and privileges hereby granted shall continue for the period of thirty years from and after the day on which this ordinance becomes effective as provided in Section 10 below, unless the same be sooner voluntarily surrendered by the Grantee, with the consent of the Council of the City, or unless the same be sooner forfeited as provided by law.Upon expiration of the term of this grant and upon the termination of the rights hereby granted, by surrender, forfeiture or otherwise, all of the poles, wires, conduits, lines and other property of the Grantee in the streets, alleys or public places of the City may be removed from the streets, alleys and public places of the City at the expense of the Grantee within a reasonable time after the expiration or termination of such rights and privileges, such time to be prescribed by the Council of the City.
Section 10. This ordinance and the rights and privileges hereby granted and conferred shall become effective when the Grantee has filed with the Mayor of the City its written acceptance thereof, and has entered into a bond in the sum of One Hundred Dollars ($100), with surety satisfactory to the Mayor, conditioned to the effect that the Grantee will construct, maintain, or if constructed, will maintain, the poles, wires, conduits, lines and other facilities provided for herein and reasonably necessary for the exercise of the rights and privileges granted in and by this ordinance, in good order throughout the terms of this grant, and will comply with the terms, provisions and conditions of this ordinance in all respects.Section 11. This ordinance shall be in force from its passage.
II. That upon the approval of this ordinance by the Mayor of the City it shall be the duty of the City Clerk to cause to be advertised once a week for four successive weeks, in some newspaper of general circulation in the City, the draft of ordinance contained in the foregoing sections, and in addition he shall, by such advertisement, invite bids for the privileges and rights proposed to be granted by such ordinance, which bids shall be in writing and shall be delivered to the presiding officer of the Council of the City in open session at the day and hour of the next regular meeting of the said body to be held next after such advertisement is completed; and the bids shall then be presented to the Council by the presiding officer to be dealt with and acted upon in the manner prescribed by law for franchise grants. The advertisement shall expressly reserve the right to reject any and all bids, and the successful bidder shall be required to pay all costs of advertising the franchise in addition to the sum bid by it.III. This ordinance shall be in force from its passage.

Camper Solution Hoped

Those who wanted to talk about the proposed camper ordinance banning parking in driveways and in small side-yards had to wait almost two-and-a-half hours Monday before City Council got around to it.

But their number did not dwindle, nor were their comments and arguments less forceful from the wait. Just before and actually during a vote to defer the matter again the comments from many of them were becoming heated and out of order.

The matter had been deferred so that the committee headed by assistant City Attorney Stanley Phillips could again discuss the proposed ordinance. The committee reported back that it could see no way to change the proposal.

The basic difference between what the committee has been trying to do in its proposals for over a year and what many residents and some Councilmen want comes about sideways.

The city now has an ordinance banning campers, camp trailers and large boats and recreational equipment from being parked on city streets, in driveways and in sideyards. But the 3,000 campers parked there are a mute testimony that the ordinance is not being enforced. Attempts to satisfy safety and aesthetic complaints have bogged down, mostly because the owners of such pieces of equipment cannot get it in a side yard or to the back yard on small RS-4 zoned lots.

The new ordinance says it cannot be parked even on a sideyard, if it is taller than six feet and cannot meet structure sideyard regulations. This affects about half the lots in the city. The lots in many areas are also too small to provide parking behind the homes.

Readers Agree On Acquisition

SUN SURVEY readers were almost unanimous in their replies to last week's question regarding the acquisition of school sites.

Of those who answered, 94 per cent said "Yes" to the question, "Should the School Board of the City of Virginia Beach move ahead with all dispatch with condemnation proceedings for school sites where bargaining fails to bring about a favorable negotiated price?" Only 6 per cent said "No".

Most comments added to the replies were of the opinion that while the landowner has the right to charge any reasonable price for his land, some concession should be made to the School Board. Those who replied in the negative, however, said they did not feel any concession should be made and that a landowner should be able to get the most he can. (See "Letters to the Editor", p. 4)

While the public opinion poll does not profess to represent the thinking of all residents of Virginia Beach, it does represent the thinking of a cross section of those who took time to clip it and return it to us.

Your attention is called to this week's SUN SURVEY question also, which appears below in the box at the lower left corner of this page.

Each week a new question will appear and the results will be published the following week. The questions will be timely, and the more answers we receive the more responsible the opinion.

SUN SURVEY

QUESTION: Should the city take positive action toward establishing a fully paid municipal fire department, instead of relying mostly on volunteers, regardless of increased cost to the taxpayer and in light of shortage of volunteers at certain times of day?

Your comments and signed letters would be appreciated also.

Clip and return to: VIRGINIA BEACH SUN, Box 657, Virginia Beach, Va. 23451.

Members of the committee feel that to allow the sideyard regulation to be done away with would not satisfy the complaints. But Councilman Larry Marshall noted he was against the side restrictions. After the often violent opposition the matter was delayed again until a compromise could be reached. That compromise is most likely expected at the next regular meeting. It is expected that the sideyard provision will be removed, but that parking on streets and driveways in front of the frontmost part of a house will be restricted.

In other action Council approved $380,000 of the $700,000 School Board surplus back to the schools for new school buses and other services. The new budget was then reduced by $235,000, the cost of buses which had been budgeted in the next fiscal year.

An ordinance was passed which prohibits open fires on the Atlantic Ocean beaches from the Back Bay Wildlife Refuge to Sandbridge. Between 11 p.m. and 9 a.m. Now the same regulations apply from the game preserve to Fort Story.

Council also re-instated its disorderly conduct laws which were abolished by the 1968 session of the Virginia General Assembly and reenacted in 1969.

Dr. Stuart Ashman, Mrs. Foster I. Gilbert, Dr. Madge May, Mrs. Louise Wilson, E. Bruce McGuire and Mrs. Emma Hairston were appointed to the Community Mental Health and Retardation Program Board.

A new Circuit Court building, possibly housing two new courtrooms was also discussed informally, after recommendations to convert the first floor of the old Courthouse Building for at least one, failed to get judicial approval. The building committee promised recommendations on the building matter soon.

Apts. Delayed Again

City Council was zipping quickly through its 28-item zoning docket Monday when it once again was stalled by Wayne McLeskey's application to build apartments near the entrance of Chesapeake Colony, on land already zoned for multiple family housing.

The controversial application has been batted back and forth from the planning commission and City Council for about eight months. Similar applications to rezone adjacent land at the entrance to the restricted neighborhood have failed to win approval. The present application, however, is only for a use permit for 60 apartments, as recommended for approval by the planning commission.

The development drew much opposition from Chesapeake Colony residents. City Council zoned the land for apartments recently in an area-wide study of Virginia Beach Blvd. property. McLeskey said he would rather see it commercial but that he must develop the land now because of new tax assessments, and if Council wants apartments, that is what he will build.

Councilman Murray Malbon, a Chesapeake Colony resident, recommended cutting the number from 60 to 40. McLeskey said this density could not satisfy the financial requirements. On Malbon's motion, after nearly a half-hour of discussion the matter was deferred for 60 days for more study.

In other zoning matters a 54-unit motel at 21st and Pacific was approved on an application of J. B. Kesser and L.P. Burman. Several small apartment projects were also approved.

The largest single item approved was on an application of David I. Levine for rezoning and a use permit for 384 apartments on South Lynnhaven Road near Salina Drive in Princess Anne Plaza.

Bid Accepted For Two Roads

The State Highway Commission has awarded contracts for improvements of two Virginia Beach roads.

Ames & Webb, Inc. of Norfolk submitted the low bid of $2,022,856 for Routes 165 and 190: 1.6 miles of dividing on Route 165 from South Parliament Road to Edwin Lane and 1.3 miles on Route 190 from Witch Duck Road to Providence Road.

Levine said he also plans a small shopping center there. The name of the apartment development will be Moss Apartments.

Governor To Review Guard Sat.

Gov. Mills E. Godwin, Jr. will review the 2,275 troopers of the Virginia National Guard Saturday during Governor's Day ceremonies at Camp Pendleton.

Some 1,000 guardsmen are currently undergoing their annual two-week encampment training at the State Military Reservation just south of Croatan Beach.

Residents of the city who hear loud booming sounds and gunfire during the next week in that area need not fear. It's only the National Guard practicing on the different weapons ranges.

The Governor's Day ceremonies will include the honoring of several of the Guardsmen, who come to Virginia Beach each year from all over the state. A full parade will follow as the Governor and the Adjutant General of Virginia, Maj. Gen. Paul N. Booth review the troops of 22 units.

City Council Backs Volunteers

The 450-man volunteer fire and rescue department force in Virginia Beach that makes up 12 separate departments won solid praise from City Council Monday, following some sharp implied criticism offered by a supplement to a Norfolk newspaper.

Because of the front-page article in the BEACON, a supplement for Virginia Beach residents inserted in both Norfolk newspapers on a semi-weekly basis, Councilman Lawrence Marshall asked City Manager Roger Scott during the informal session preceding the regular meeting just what the status is of a study called for about a year ago.

Scott told Marshall and the rest of Council that consultants had been contacted about studying the entire part-paid and part-volunteer fireman service in the city, the location of existing and future stations and about equipment. At least two new stations are now pending.

He said no further action had been taken on hiring a consultant until proper information on zoning and future land use plans in the entire city are completed by special groups and the city's planning department. These studies are expected to be completed this summer, and Scott indicated that at that time a complete study will be undertaken.

New interest in such a study was generated by a front-page article in the BEACON which told of the always existing problem of keeping the volunteer departments up to proper staff during the daytime hours, when most of the volunteers are employed in their regular jobs.

The article then proceeded to cite a single case in which an accident victim had to wait 17 minutes for an ambulance. A picture was included. In that picture a Virginia Beach police officer can be seen in the background. Vice Mayor Robert Cromwell said he had come upon the scene of the accident in question moments after it had occurred and that a policeman had arrived very quickly. The officers are trained in first aid and emergency procedures.

In this particular case the victim's life was not in danger, as was stated in the BEACON article, but his injuries were serious enough to demand attention. The dispatcher had difficulty reaching someone at the closest volunteer rescue squad, and contacted the next closest, which responded.

City officials do not deny the shortage of personnel during the day at times in certain departments, and there has been talk for some time of hiring one or two men to serve as full-time employees of each department. This will likely be the outcome of any study that is made. There is little doubt that the services of the volunteers will still be required. Some feel the volunteers, with supplementary paid employees can serve another 20 years.

Councilman Dewey Simmons defended the volunteers, calling them "the greatest bargain in the city". It was pointed out that the volunteers cost Virginia Beach residents about $2 per capita, and that a paid department would cost about $13 per capita, or about $1.25 million per year. The Beach Borough now has a paid department and volunteers. The other areas are served only by volunteers. The City supplements the volunteers.

Several officials of the fire departments were also critical of the BEACON article. They said the article coming at the height of their annual fundraising drive, in which they ask a penny a day per family, had seriously hurt their efforts.

Several Councilmen said they too were irked by the article that did not mention how quickly a fire vehicle or emergency vehicle ordinarily responds in an emergency.

"There wasn't any mention of the majority of calls they answer in three or four minutes," said one Councilman. "This kind of reporting is irresponsible and makes the citizens feel the volunteers are not doing a good job."

To a man, Council praised the volunteers. Only a casual mention of the informal discussion was made in open Council meeting, attended by several fire department spokesmen. That casual mention was again praise.

The Virginia Beach Fire Council, which serves primarily in negotiations between men of the various Volunteer fire departments of Virginia Beach and city officials, during Monday night's regular meeting passed a resolution calling for the placing of paid firemen in each of the volunteer fire

Crystal was more interested in the cameras trained on her, but her parents listened attentively to the resolution honoring her, read by Mayor Frank A. Dusch.

Council Surprised by Check

Two important events took place at the beginning of Virginia Beach City Council's regular meeting Monday afternoon.

In one, a child was honored; and in the other, money was given to City Council. That was called "an almost unprecedented move."

Frank W. Kellam, chairman of the Virginia Beach Industrial Development Commission and Alfred W. Craft, Jr. appeared on behalf of the Industrial Development Authority to repay $50,000 to the city, which had been loaned to the Authority for the purchase of the Lynnhaven Industrial Park.

Kellam said that he was happy to be able to repay half of the loan at this time since he had been there to ask for money several times. He told Council that the 23-acre park had been sold except for two parcels, that construction is now underway there and that planned construction also should put about $900,000 worth of improvements on the land for city taxation.

Crystal Cason, 3, appeared awed by it all and was shy when offered the hand of the Mayor, but she was presented a Council resolution for her prompt action in calling adult help when Jenny Ross, 2, almost drowned near London Bridge on May 23, 1969. The child's action upon seeing the incident is credited with saving the other child's life, since rescue equipment was called quickly and was able to revive the child.

Garbage Postponed 2nd Time

Norfolk garbage trucks are still not ending their runs in Virginia Beach, but based on the latest reports, they should be dumping the Norfolk refuse at the Virginia Beach landfill on Monday.

The problem has been the new heavy equipment needed to handle the additional 700 tons a day that will be generated by Norfolk. It had been hoped the equipment would be ready for service by June 2, but it did not arrive in time.

The equipment is expected to arrive in time for the June 16 start. Under the terms of the contract between Norfolk and Virginia Beach, Norfolk will bear the cost of the new equipment from its tonnage rate.

The contract is an interim one, to expire on Jan. 1, 1970, at which time Norfolk and Virginia Beach are expected to have completed negotiations on a water contract for the resort city and a garbage contract for Norfolk. At present each city is charging the other exactly double rates for water and garbage service outside the respective city.

Zoning Unsettled

The city planning department's plan for the Thoroughgood entrance was approved Tuesday by the Planning Commission at the monthly meeting.

The plan, which was introduced by Planning Director Patrick L. Standing, leaves the Thoroughgood entrance zoned commercial. One strip of land, 150' on the west side of Collier Drive was rezoned from limited commercial to residential in the plan.

The plan also included a new entrance to Thoroughgood, which would be made by extending Hermitage Road to Pleasure House Road.

Thoroughgood residents, represented by attorney Louis B. Fine, first approved of the plan with stipulations. When John E. Clarkson, attorney for Thoroughgood Corp. would not commit his clients to the stipulations, Fine withdrew the residents' approval, asking for the entire area in question to be rezoned to residential.

The Planning Commission denied the application by Russell W. and Elsie B. Chaplain for a change of zoning and use permit to allow construction of a 50-unit motel in the proposed False Cape park area.

The proposal for the motel was described by commission member Homer Cunningham as "premature," and Standing said it was another example of "leap frog" type of development. Standing went on to say that the City could not provide the necessary services at this time. The Commission approved an application of City Council to establish an ordinance to provide an increase in fees for the examination and approval or disapproval of zoning changes, use permits, street closures and planned unit developments. The new fees will be: zoning changes, $50; use permits, $25; street closures, $30 and planned unit development, $300.

An application by Princess Anne Properties, Inc. for a use permit for camping sites and related facilities was deferred for 30 days. Standing pointed out that there was not enough recreation area for the 500 campsites that would be located there.

The Planning Commission approved applications for the construction of 327 apartments, denied an application for construction of 32 units and deferred one application for 64 apartments.

(See 'Zoning' p. 2)

Gov. Godwin as he reviewed the National Guard last year during Governor's Day ceremonies.

GOP Optimistic About Election

The Republican party of Virginia Beach now has one candidate in the running for the Virginia House of Delegates, and is likely to have as many as three more before its city convention narrows the field down to two on July 12.

Walter F. Schwieger, a Norfolk and Virginia Beach businessman announced his intention of seeking the GOP nomination last Sunday. Schwieger, 43, said he earnestly feels that a two-party system in Virginia Beach is "long overdue."

The nominating convention has been set for 10 a.m. at the old Princess Anne Courthouse on Saturday, July 12, just three days before the Democrats go to the polls in the primary to pick their candidates. But who will be the Republican city chairman by then is not known. Reportedly John A. Field III, who has held the position, will leave politics on July 1 and become an assistant U.S. district attorney. Field has not denied or confirmed that fact.

Field, an unsuccessful House of Delegates candidate in the

Schwieger

City Councilman George Ferrell spends a few moments "warming up" as he prepares to enter the milking contest during the "Moo-In" held last Saturday at Norfolk's Industrial Park. Ferrell took first place in the contest by coaxing his assigned cow to give forth with slightly over eight pounds of milk within the contest's three minute time limitation. Municipal officials of Norfolk, Portsmouth and Chesapeake did not fare as well.

Missing Child Found Safe

A search party comprised of an estimated 500 men were combing the region around the London Bridge shopping center for a four-year old girl who was reported missing last Thursday night while the child was apparently safe and sound at the home of her aunt.

Wenna Fuentes, daughter of the C. V. Fuentes' of Peach Creek Lane, was reported missing shortly before 7 p.m. when she was discovered missing from her mother's car.

Mrs. Fuentes said she had earlier left the Oceana home of her sister, Mrs. Mildred Hardy, assuming her three daughters and Mrs. Hardy's daughter were in her car.

Later developments revealed that Wenna remained at the Hardy home during the shopping trip.

The alarm was sounded when the women returned from separate stores, found only three girls and notified police that Wenna was missing.

An alert from officials of a missing child brought response not only from police officers on duty, but all available of duty police officers who could be reached, members of the auxiliary police and civil defense units, members of the various fire departments of the city, Navy men from Oceana and Dam Neck, soldiers from Ft. Story, and residents of the region.

The search continued until nearly 2 a.m. Friday when Mrs. Hardy upon returning to her home found young Wenna there dressed in pajamas and completely unaware that she had been the center of concern during the night.

Word was relayed to Mrs. Fuentes who had been taken home earlier after being given a sedative, and Wenna was reunited with her parents.

Wenna returned to kindergarten Friday morning and calm was restored to the Fuentes household, and the minds of those involved in the alarm were eased.

Activity Increases In Political Race

With one month left to go before the July 15 Democratic primary, the activity of the four candidates seeking nomination to the two Virginia Beach seats in the House of Delegates is increasing markedly.

At a surprise meeting last Saturday called by independent Bruce Murphy, incumbent B. R. Middleton and his ticket-mate Rhae Adams agreed to limit campaign expenses if Richard Guy, the other independent, would agree. Guy was unable to attend because of a previous commitment. The agreement would have limited newspaper advertising and allowed no television or radio advertising. Guy, while saying he had no plans for radio and TV advertising at this time, rejected the idea.

Murphy's other suggestion, calling for each candidate assuming the responsibility of setting up four-way debates, was rejected by Middleton and Adams, who said their organization already had many forums set which would make it easier for the independents.

Last weekend also the Middleton-Adams ticket won the expected endorsement of City Treas., V. A. Etheridge, who is credited with putting the ticket together.

Guy continues to hammer away at this ticket, calling Middleton and Adams "machine-picked" candidates.

Middleton has again attacked campus unrest and advocated strong control legislation.

Adams has called twice for a Division of Consumer Affairs. Murphy says this is ridiculous. Guy has called for more consumer and taxpayer protection.

Murphy opposed the proposed Norfolk payroll tax which would tax Virginia Beach residents working in Norfolk. Murphy also has announced his youth group, known as Murphy's "Mod Squad", to be headed by Harold Ray Ammons, a 1969 graduate of First Colonial High School. Murphy said the squad would hand out campaign materials, assist in voter registration and work in the precincts.

Guy has attacked Middleton's voting record on a constitutional amendment recently agreed to which would allow Richmond to expand its boundaries. Middleton said Guy simply didn't understand the situation. He has also defended his voting record on other matters after charges by Guy.

The only statewide candidate to make more than one appearance in Virginia Beach in the last week was Andrew P. Miller, candidate for Attorney General, subject to the primary. He named Joseph Canada and James R. McHenry to head his campaign in Virginia Beach. Miller said he is the only attorney general candidate who has declared himself in favor of governmental economy. Earlier he and Bernard Levin appeared on the same program at a luncheon of the Mid City Democratic Women's Club.

It was also announced Monday that Guy would have a fund raising concert at the Dome the week before the primary. The concert at 8:30 p.m. July 9 will feature Lionel Hampton and comedian Phil Foster. According to a spokesman there will be no campaign speeches.

Hearing On Study Set

The District Engineer of the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers has called a public hearing on the proposed beach erosion and hurricane study for the Virginia Beach oceanfront from Rudee Inlet to 89th Street.

The public hearing will be held at the Virginia Beach Civic Center on Friday, June 27, at 2 p.m. All interested parties are invited to be present and to give their views of the plan. The Corps of Engineers conducted the preliminary survey and presented it to City Council last month. A committee was appointed to study the plan and ways of funding it. About $6 million in local or non-federal funds will be required.

City Council expressed interest in the project, but awaits the conclusions of the committee. The committee is expected to offer its findings on June 31.

Friend Passes 2 Guards

An Amelia resident drowned in the Atlantic Ocean off Virginia Beach last Sunday while his friend unknowingly rushed past two life guards while searching for assistance.

Donald Hopkins, 18, said he and George Lynn, 18, also of Amelia, were swimming off 36th Street near the Thunderbird Motel when Lynn began floundering in the water. It was his first time in the Virginia Beach surf. Hopkins indicated he went to Lynn's assistance, but every time he was able to grasp Lynn he was pulled under water in the struggle. According to Hopkins he finally was forced to swim ashore to summon help.

Hopkins said he failed to see anyone on duty at the first life guard stand he saw and ran about 150 yards to a second stand to sound the alarm.

The area of the beach where the drowning occurred is equipped with life guard stations at 34th, 35th, 37th and 39th Streets. There are no stations at 36th and 38th Streets since the streets do not extend from Atlantic Avenue to the beach, thus curtailing the number of persons who would normally use those sections of the beach.

Tom Miller identified himself as the life guard on duty at the 35th Street guard station at the time of the incident. Miller, who is now in his third year of service as a life guard on the Virginia Beach oceanfront, said the guard on duty at 37th Street had received permission to attend a 45-minute church service. He added this is a normal procedure when activity on the beach is slow, as he said it was at that time on Sunday.

"I had agreed to stand by for him and watch for both areas of beach covered by the two stations," he said.

As the guard at 37th Street was getting ready to leave Miller said he and the other guard were standing together by the steps near the 35th Street station when the guard from

City Hires Planners

The Virginia Beach engineering firm of Langley, McDonald & Overman has been hired by the Industrial Development Commission to lay out initial plans for the city's new industrial park at Little Creek.

The selection of the firm was made in a closed session last week. The preliminary survey will include topographical and subsurface analyses, evaluation of available utilities, availability of all modes of transportation, preliminary layouts of improvements and land use and a report to be used by the commission in the promotion of its park.

The cost of the survey is to be $2,700, and will not take into consideration any needs of prospective tenants. The firm suggests that engineering services should be retained for each one on an individual need basis and has offered to handle this also at an extra fee.

Two other proposals had been considered by the commission, one for a lesser price and one for a higher price, according to L. Dean Curtis, executive director of the commission.

The commission also decided at its meeting to add $8,000 in advertising to its budget, making the total budget $20,000.

The proposal calls for raising the height of the beach and widening it considerably, as well as for building a higher seawall than now exists at the boardwalk. The plan would raise the beach area above the level of any storm in the past 50 years.

With City approval or expression of interest and public approval the report will be sent to a higher Army headquarters, and finally with Congressional approval over a period of years, may receive enough federal funds to finance the major part of the project.

Miss Nancy Welton was among 81 students who received the first bachelor degrees awarded at Stratford College recently. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard F. Welton III, South Bay Shore Drive.

Hospitality House Opens Again

A flag ceremony by representatives of the armed services officially opened the Hospitality House in its new location at 18th Street and Arctic Avenue in the old Public Works Building.

Hours of the Hospitality House, used by servicemen for recreation and for showers and locker facilities for the beach, will be 1 to 9 p.m. Sunday through Friday and 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Saturdays.

Cookouts will begin on Saturdays and Sundays after this month, and dances are planned.

The Hospitality House, free to servicemen, has moved yearly since it was begun four years ago. It is sponsored by the Virginia Beach Ministerial Association and the United Communities Fund with aid from civic and military groups.

During the winter months the building will be utilized by the parks and recreation department.

Festival Is Largest

The number of competing bands in the Eighth Annual Music Festival June 16-19 has increased to 22 as compared to last year's 17 bands.

In addition there will be three other bands participating: the Davenport West High School Band from Davenport, Iowa; Honor Band; Hinsdale Township High School Concert Orchestra from Hinsdale, Ill., who will be guest orchestra; and the Princess Anne High School Band of Virginia Beach, which is the host band.

The Festival will actually get under way with a concert by the honor band at 4 p.m. June 15 at the Norwegian Lady, 25th Street and Ocean Front. At 7:30 p.m. there will be a Special Music Extravaganza at the Civic Center, 20th and Pacific Avenue by the Hinsdale Concert Orchestra, the honor band and the Navy School of Music Faculty Lab Band.

Competition will get under way Monday with bands being judged on sight reading, concert performance and marching. Opening ceremonies will take place at 3 p.m. in the First Colonial High School Stadium which will include a welcome by the president of the Chamber of Commerce and a concert by the honor band. There will be a parade beginning at 9 p.m. along Atlantic Avenue between 10th Street and 32nd Street.

The Festival will close with a concert at 8 p.m. Thursday, June 19 in the First Colonial Stadium followed by the presentation of awards. Concluding will be a special program by the School of Music Navy Show Band.

Participating bands are: Hinsdale Township High School Band, Hinsdale, Ill.; Lockport Dist. 92 Jr. High School Band, Lockport, Ill.; Plainfield High School Band, Plainfield, Ill.; Fort Madison High School Band, Fort Madison, Iowa; Grinnell Community Sr. High School Band, Grinnell, Iowa; Glasgow High School Band, Glasgow, Ky.;

Safety Council Plans Meeting

The Virginia Beach Safety Council will meet June 19 at Angelina's Restaurant on Plaza Trail just south of Virginia Beach Blvd.

Holmes High School Band, Covington, Ky.; Bossier High School Band, Bossier City, La.; Foxcroft Academy Band, Dover-Foxcroft, Maine; Highland Regional High School Band, Blackwood, N.J.; Cumberland Valley High School Band, Mechanicsburg, Pa.; Marple Newtown High School Band, Newtown Square, Pa.; Riverside High School Band, Ellwood City, Pa.; Shikellamy Sr. High School Band, Sunbury, Pa.; Central High School of Lunenburg, Va.; Falls Church High School Band, Falls Church, Va.; Charles Town High School Band, Charles Town, W. ## Volunteers

departments of the city. It is felt such a move would provide a better availability of men and is not designed to interfere with the normal manning of the fire stations by volunteers at night or on weekends.

Several of the volunteer firemen of the City who attended at the meeting were quick to point out this proposal is in no way designed to affect the present operation of the volunteer rescue squads connected with the various fire departments of the city.

Should the proposal be approved, the volunteer rescue squads and fire departments of the city would be dependent upon the residents of the city for financial support to purchase and maintain equipment.

Ivan Mapp, Fire Council President, said the final drafting of the proposal from Monday night's meeting is expected to be completed and presented to City Manager Roger Scott within the next week. Indications are, however, that no action would be taken on the proposal until the next City Council meeting on June 23. Both groups agree that the problem in a growing city with an ever-increasing population can be a serious one, but that it is by no means as critical as implied by the BEACON article.

Harris, general manager-executive director and Carolyn McAllen, women's editor. The presentation was made to emphasize Flag Day, June 14.

Flag Day Program Scheduled

In honor of Flag Day, June 14, Elks' Lodge No. 2268 will hold a Flag Day ceremony June 15 at the American Legion on Las-kin Road.

There will be a display there of the different flags that have flown over the United States.

The ceremony is part of a flag campaign being conducted by the Elks. The objective of their campaign is to see that every household and business in the city has a flag in their possession. The campaign motto is "buy a flag and fly it." The public is invited to Sunday's ceremonies, which will begin at 2 p.m.

Art Show Opens Sat.

The Woman's Club of South Norfolk will sponsor their fifth annual art show at Lakeside Park, Byrd Avenue and Bainbridge Blvd., on Saturday, June 14 and Sunday, June 15. The show is open to all Tidewater artists.

The show will be open from noon to 5 p.m. each day. A $3 entry fee will be charged adult artists, and junior and senior high school student artists will pay $1. Work will be judged in four classes: oils, watercolors, pastels and graphics and other media.

Cash awards worth $320 will be presented. Ribbons will be given for honorable mention in each class. Official entry blanks can be obtained from Mrs. G. Wayne Irby, chairman.

The Woman's Club and the Chesapeake Fine Arts Commission will co-sponsor a free concert by the Fifth Naval District Band No. 194 on Sunday at 2:30 p.m. Art awards will be presented at 4.

Council Director Picked

An executive director has been selected to head the Tidewater Regional Health Planning Council.

He is J. D. Moore, executive director of the Regional Hospital Planning Board in Cleveland, Ohio. Moore, 35, will assume his new job July 1.

With an initial federal grant of $60,363, supplemented by a like amount from the 11 cities and counties within the health planning region, the Council will have an operating budget of $121,000.

The Council's first year of operation will involve the drafting of an area-wide health plan. It will also interpret the various roles and relationships health agencies play in serving the needs of the people in the district. When the study is completed, the Council will suggest how public and private money can best be used among the health agencies.

5 To Attend Institute

Five Virginia Beach residents will attend the 11th annual Summer Science Institute at the College of William and Mary beginning June 16.

They are: Cecil C. Abbott Jr. of Heather Drive, Donald C. Rima of Hessian Court, Gerald P. Joyce of Lookout Court, Joseph W. Carlin of Hill Prince Road and Arthur F. Koepfen Jr. of Tudor Court.

Rabies Clinic Set

A make-up rabies vaccination clinic will be held this Saturday, June 14, at the Seaford Volunteer Fire Station. Owners of dogs which have not been inoculated are urged to bring the animal to the clinic between the hours of 2:00 and 4:00 p.m. The clinic will be conducted by the Virginia Beach Health Department with the cooperation of local veterinarians.

The City's Greatest Bargain

As was stated last Monday, Councilman Dewey Simmons, probably the greatest bargain the city of Virginia Beach has at present is its capable and efficient volunteer fire and rescue departments.

By having the dedicated volunteers the city is saving so much of the taxpayer's money that minor problems of the volunteers must be overlooked, but dealt with.

A recent newspaper article in the Virginia Beach supplement to a Norfolk newspaper showed a picture of an accident victim waiting 17 minutes for an ambulance. This is true. It happened. It was unfortunate that an ambulance did not get there sooner. But a policeman, trained in first aid, was on the scene in less than three minutes. And there were no pictures of an ambulance or fire vehicle arriving at the scene of an emergency in the three or four minutes it usually takes. Granted some of the stations have difficulty manning the operations properly during the daytime hours, but never once has a call for help gone unheeded. The article misrepresented the facts. The facts show the volunteers do an outstanding job and one that can be favorably compared at any time to that of a paid department.

Certainly a paid department in all sections of the city is coming, and it's going to cost us much more. But in the meantime the residents of this city should not only feel secure in the hands of the volunteers, but they should also be grateful for the fine job done.

We hope the problem of personnel can be worked out by city officials and the Fire Council members. They have always been successful in the past and there is no reason to suspect they will not be now.

Meanwhile there should not be anymore incriminating newspaper articles.

Long May It Wave

The observance of Flag Day on June 14 began more than 60 years ago with the wishes of the fraternal order of Elks wishing to take time to pay homage to the flag of our country. Through efforts of this dedicated group a date was finally set aside in 1916 by Pres. Woodrow Wilson for this purpose.

In the course of our country's history the sight of the flag flying on a distant battlefield, over public buildings or passing in review at parades has always managed to swell the pride of true patriots.

In recent years the flag of the United States has not always brought the same pride or the same homage. And this is extremely sad in a country conceived in honor and dedicated to freedom.

This Saturday is Flag Day 1969. The stars and stripes is still a symbol to be revered by most throughout the world. Let us re-dedicate ourselves to this symbol. Long may it wave.

For Even More Safety

An unfortunate incident over last weekend may have pointed to an hitherto unforeseen problem that does indeed exist. A young tourist drowned in the ocean surf off a densely populated section of the boardwalk while a companion said he had difficulty locating a lifeguard.

Investigation has shown that the victim would most likely have died anyhow by the time a lifeguard could have reached him following futile lifesaving attempts of his friend. Two such guards close by said they were not alerted by any cries for help.

The companion claims he passed one lifeguard stand in his search for help, but it was unmanned. Further investigation proved that two guards were very close to the stand but not on it. The young man, perhaps in panic, did not see them.

But whether, in his state of mind, he would have even recognized them as lifeguards had he seen them nearby is somewhat doubtful. Certainly they wear emblems on their swim trunks. And they have whistles around their necks. But is this enough? Can these privately employed lifeguards be easily recognized?

Perhaps those responsible for hiring and training these boys who have always done a good job should look into some method of making them more easily spotted. Perhaps some type of hat or armband or uniform swim trunks could be adopted.

We do not suggest that a poor job was done by anyone Sunday. But we feel it is up to those responsible for the guards to ensure as much safety as possible.

On Graduation Day

This week nearly 2,000 young men and women graduated or will graduate from our high schools in Virginia Beach. Hundreds more city residents graduated from colleges and universities nationwide.

We congratulate all of them and beseech them to continue their education in some way. Let us remember that commencement means the beginning, not the ending.

Whether these young graduates enter college, the armed forces, the business world or begin the serious life of homemaking, they offer all of us the hope of tomorrow. They will lead us.

Their formal education may be over, but now they face the challenges of adulthood. Hopefully that education will always remain the best that can be provided these future leaders.

PHREW!

For Campers

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:
In your issue of May 29, 1969 you had a picture on the front page with an article written under the picture stating that if the new city law is passed the man will not be allowed to keep the recreational bus in his yard.

I myself do not have a camper or do not intend to own one but this article made my blood boil. Who do the people that run the city think they are? Since January 1st they have probably increased this man's real estate taxes 100% and now they tell him he can not put his own licensed vehicle on his own property.

This man has approximately $10,000 invested in this vehicle. Each year he pays a large license fee to both the city and state plus several hundred dollars for insurance.

What do the city fathers expect all the owners of such vehicles to do, put them in their utility rooms?

You can ride around the city and see all kinds of $50 and $100 beach buggies sitting in yards with fenders cut out, no tops etc., but nothing is done about them. There are approximately 250 city owned school buses sitting on city streets seven days a week but nothing is said about them either.

The crime wave is on a steady increase. The use of narcotics in our city by teenagers is alarming. A large percentage of this is because teenagers are left home to run wild with nothing to do. Most of these people who have campers take their children off for the weekend and give them good clean fun and recreation.

Why then should people that enjoy good clean fun and outdoor living have to give up this way of life because they have no place to park their campers? I don't think it fair that these people should have to give up their campers because of a few Scrooges in the neighborhoods who call the police every time a dog barks or a kid sets off a firecracker. Charles Paulus

Thanks

Editor, VIRGINIA BEACH SUN:
I want to express my sincere appreciation for the complimentary manner in which you handled our "Atlantic By The Sea" press conference.

I particularly appreciate the editorial and the fact that you took the space to print a copy of the original rendering. The larger newspapers evidently did not feel that it had enough interested subscribers to place the picture in their papers.

Although I am not seeking any additional publicity, particularly for the next few months, I will always be happy to cooperate with your paper as regards my Virginia Beach operations.

In teaching a class in "Land Purchase and Land Development" at Old Dominion College, I recently made the statement that a developer, after reviewing the future of the four Tidewater cities, would be out of his mind not to concentrate his operations in the City of Virginia Beach, which has more to offer and one of the lowest tax rates in Tidewater. David I. Levine

Special Report

Neither Rain Nor Snow...

It is easy to tell that the primary is only a month away. One has only to look at the increased volume of mail from the candidates these days.

The Fred Pollard-Carrington Thompson-Guy Farley ticket leads in the mail race. The amount received from them is more voluminous than from the others, but, after all, there are three of them. The envelopes are an attractive red, white and blue.

Henry Howell is running a close second, with all of it coming in his gaudy envelopes, bearing the inscription in red, "Let's Keep the Big Boys Honest."

The William Battle mail is picking up these days, but is definitely running third in a field of three. His news releases are generally short and the information on his appearances is extremely succinct. The envelopes, in austere black and white depict scenes on a strip of 35 mm film.

In tasteful blue and white comes a considerable amount of news from Sargeant Reynolds. It is seeking the nomination as Lt. Governor. It is very well written and just the right length. One sometimes wonders if the Reynolds Metals public relations office may have tutored his campaign workers.

Eastern Shore philosopher Hardtimes Hunt is also seeking the same office. One well-put together campaign strategy letter bearing his picture has found its way into my mailbox. It must prove he is serious about his campaign after all.

Flip Hicks, running for Attorney General has some nice pastel blue envelopes, and the amount of mail from him is getting larger. Seems like it increased even more after House of Delegates Speaker John Warren Cooke, also from Gloucester, endorsed him.

The closest candidate for this office to us is Bernard Levin, but he has not sent one piece of campaign material in any kind of envelope, plain brown or otherwise. Possibly he's concentrating on areas much farther from home.

The mammoth amount of mail these days is more local however. Richard Guy, running as an independent for a seat in the House of Delegates subject to the Democratic primary has his picture on the envelope, and the volume of mail has been getting larger and larger. The other independent, Bruce Murphy, usually uses his own law office envelopes. He has complained about lack of campaign funds. This must be a part of it. Often his news releases, mostly on onionskin paper and hard to read fourth or fifth copies are hand delivered by someone or other.

But for sheer volume no one beats the mail that comes from the Middleton-Adams ticket. It comes in an envelope with a red, white and blue shield on it. Everytime one or the other says anything, a release is forthcoming. The newspaper's address is on a ready sticker, and we are obviously just run through an addressing machine. The others are more personal.

One cannot help but wonder, at the cost of the paper, typists, envelopes and postage alone. This alone would discourage the average man from entering politics. And think about the fact that someone has to dream up all those speeches and releases and get them down on paper for us.

But let us not appear to be upset or ungrateful by all this mail. It is read in full, digested and used. Sometimes it is used in edited form, but it is used. It is quite helpful to the editor in keeping up with the far-flung activity of politics and politicians.

But it certainly swells the morning mail these days. Meanwhile the jockeying goes on as every one of the major candidates tries for a share of the "Godwin Umbrella" that Pollard says he's happy to be under. If they don't want a large share, they want to prove that their opponent doesn't deserve any protection either.

Battle continues to deny his connection with the Kennedy forces and the Kennedy family. Pollard says he is the only man that can beat Holton in the fall. Battle says he is running ahead. Howell says he is.

One poll just taken in the Norfolk area has not been released, but reliable sources say a straw vote reportedly conducted by the newspapers in Norfolk showed Pollard ahead. No doubt that won't be released by the expected-to-be-Battle supporters there.

Between the polls and the mail, it's difficult to keep up with the issues.

Let's keep those cards and letters coming, folks.

SPOTS

By H. Joseph Lowenthal, Jr.

"You know, if school isn't out soon, I'll have to go to work dressed in a barrel," he said. "Just about everything I own needs some kind of repair."

"Well, tomorrow's the last day," she said. "But don't expect me to take a deep breath and dive right into your clothes."

"You wouldn't look too good in them anyway," he said. "No, I don't expect you to do that. But would you please fix one pair of socks, and put pockets in one pair of pants and fix the lining in one suit coat."

"Not right away," she said. "It's going to be a tough transition from teacher to housewife again. And I need to relax very badly."

"That's true," he said. "Maybe when you get up in the morning, you won't growl at me quite so loudly."

"I just don't like getting up in the morning," she pointed out. "And you're really exaggerating the condition of your clothes somewhat."

"No," he said. "As a matter of fact, I'm really underplaying how critical it really is. After all, you haven't sewed anything since before Christmas, you know."

"Give me a few days rest at the beach, and I'll get right to it," she said.

"Fine," he said. "I'll go with you. I can't go to work in those rags. So I'll put on my bathing trunks, and we'll go to the beach. They're not ripped...yet."

"You win," she said. "Tell me what's wrong, and I'll make a list now."

"All right," he said. "In the navy blue suit, there is no right hand pants pocket. In fact, make that 'ditto' for all trousers. The lining is hanging all alone in the black and white sport coat. The inside coat pockets in the gold sport coat and in the navy blue suit are rather large. They go all the way into the lining, except that the lining is ripped on the gold sport coat. The sleeve lining is hanging loose in the green suit. Had enough?"

"No," she said, writing it all down. "Go ahead."

"In most of the trousers there aren't any left hand pockets either. You'll just have to check them out."

"How'd that happen?" she asked. "You usually wear out the right hand pockets with all the keys and junk you carry in that pocket. But how come the left?"

"That's from transferring all that stuff into the left pocket months ago after the right one died," he said.

"Anything else?" she asked. "How about shirts."

"Yeah, I forgot about that," he said. "The collars need to be turned on about eight shirts that are in the back of the closet. And the cuffs need to be taken up on the four new ones."

"How about your handkerchiefs?" she asked sarcastically.

"Most of them have holes in them," he said, "from crying so hard into them about the condition of my other clothes."

"Well, I guess I'd better do your winter clothes too," she said, ignoring him. "What's wrong with those?"

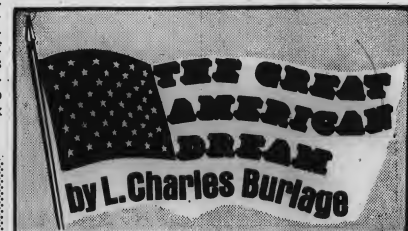

"The list is too long," he said. "Just get out everything and go to work on them."

"And I have to make the girls a complete wardrobe for fall and make myself some new clothes. Wonder if I can make any boy clothes for the baby?" she asked.

"I don't think you'll have time," he said. "My clothes alone should take most of the rest of June. But what else are you planning to do this summer besides go to the beach?"

"I have to get the house back in order and find everything the maid has put somewhere else from where I keep it. I have to potty train our son. I have to clean out the closets. I have to go to a rest home from working on your clothes..." she said.

"Very funny," he pointed out. "Say, I have a suggestion. In your spare time, why not teach summer school?"

In October 1929, after a decade of speculation and fast profits the Stock Market tumbled disastrously, marking the beginning of the Great Depression.

The small investor who originally became acquainted with securities in the War Bond sales of the First World War continued in the securities market with the coming of peace. Profits were huge and the temptation to speculate was great. An investor had to pay only $10 down in order to buy $100 worth of stock. This low 10% margin increased the demand for stocks, driving the prices of securities to unrealistic levels. The bubble burst in 1929 and many investors were ruined financially.

Today, an investor in stocks has to pay $80 to purchase $100 worth of securities. The marginal requirements are 80% instead of 10% as in 1929. Consequently, many astute market specialists say that 1929 could never be repeated.

There is an aspect to the current financial condition of the American public which compares quite unfavorably to 1929. In 1929 the average American earned $705 per year. The average American owed $29.12 in installment debt, for such things as household furniture, automobiles and clothing. That same year the average American paid $21.48 in personal taxes of all forms.

Compare these figures with the same figures for 1967. In 1967 the average American earned $3,159. $3,159 bought as much goods and services in 1967 as $1,628 would purchase in 1929. In other words, the cost of living had increased 194% since 1929. This means that in the meaningful language of purchasing power the average American only earned $1,628 in 1929 dollars in 1967. In 1967 the average American owed $408.72 in installment debt; he also paid $416.66 in personal taxes of all forms.

In 1929 after paying his installment debt and taxes the average American had $644.40 left. In 1967 after paying his installment debt and taxes the average American had $2,334.34 left, which dollars were worth $1,203 in terms of 1929 purchasing power. In terms of real income or purchasing power, the average American increased his average income by $558.50 between 1929 and 1967. From these figures certain alarming trends are to be noted.

First, while the average American's income, in terms of real purchasing power, increased 239% since 1929, his average installment debt increased 724% and his average personal tax bill increased 738%. While it is true that the average American has more of the material things of life than he had in 1929, he also appears to have more debt than he ever had before.

The interesting question is whether or not the increase in installment debt and personal taxes will one day have the same influence on the stock market as the 10% margin had in 1929. In a significant way it would appear that, whereas in 1929 the money was owed on margin for securities, the money today is owed for installment debt and taxes. Let's hope there is a difference.

Law Student Praises Program

A total of 43 law students from colleges throughout United States are on duty as summer police officers in Virginia Beach.

The success of the program and the high regard for the City's police department is proven in the fact that 11 of the men are spending at least their second tour of duty as summer officers.

A number of changes have been made in the program this year. The men are receiving training which concentrates more heavily on responsibilities which are unique to a police officer in Virginia Beach. This consists of classroom instruction on enforcing city ordinances and state laws, a complete familiarization with city court operations, radio communication procedures, and specialized fire arms training on the City's special weapons range.

Another change is the outfitting of the summer officers in uniforms identical to those of regular, fulltime police officers.

Stacey F. Garrett is a typical representative of the men who make up this force of summer police officers. Garrett is now in his third year as a summer officer. Garrett openly shows his pride of serving in Virginia Beach in the statement, "I think every law student should work as a summer police officer in a city such as Virginia Beach to obtain a better understanding of the workings of law".

Garrett this year is working a normal "patrol" assignment out of the 2nd Police Precinct, which exposes him to all phases of police work. His previous two years of service involved walking a beat and regular traffic duties as a motorcycle officer.

Garrett says he took on the job his first year on the advice of a friend and since that time he "hasn't thought about doing anything else with my summers". The value of such duty is pointed out by Garrett who said, "you can learn more about the application of law in one summer here than you can in four years of law school".

His three years of duty in Virginia Beach have also left lasting impressions with him about people. "One important thing the job teaches you", Garrett said, "is to be tolerant of people". He adds, "I feel one of the hardest things an officer has to learn is the unbelievable things some people will do without any regard for the law".

When asked to express his impression how the people of Virginia Beach felt about their police department, Garrett said he has found that "not only is the department respected by the people of the city, but the men of the department are highly respected too because they have a deep respect for the people of the city".

While a number of men who spend their summers as a Virginia Beach police officer return to a full time status with the department, others go into other phases of law enforcement.

Partners Open New Store

Expansion plans have been completed for Aldridge and Chambers, Inc., and the business will hold open house at its new location at 2325 Virginia Beach Blvd. on June 14.

Aldridge and Chambers began in March 1948 as a termite and pest control firm. Services were expanded, and in 1967 the firm began repairing lawnmowers. In 1968, 20 years after opening its doors, Aldridge and Chambers incorporated retail sales of lawnmowers, garden tractors and small engine parts.

The firm, which was formerly located at 2327 Poyner Lane, will have approximately two and a half times more space at its new location. This extra room has allowed the addition of a showroom. Products of well-known trade names such as John Deere, Yazoo, Snapper, Toro and Fox, will be displayed.

Open House will begin at 9 a.m. on June 14 with ribbon cutting ceremonies scheduled for 10 a.m. L. Dean Curtis, chairman of the Virginia Beach Industrial Development Authority, will officiate at the ceremony.

Cooper Attends VW Conference

Service Manager Willis Cooper of Hilltop Volkswagen, Inc., joined other area service managers in Myrtle Beach, S. C. recently for a three-day conference aimed at providing VW owners with the best in quality service.

Rudolf Tischer, general service manager for the VW distributor, said that meetings of VW service managers are held annually to review a broad spectrum of topics affecting service operations. Subjects range from quality control in individual service departments to the latest techniques of business management and personnel procedures.

BADGES & BANTER

By Les Lehig

Officer E. R. White assumed duty this week as a police juvenile division detective, and received an unexpected overwhelming welcome upon arrival at the office. White was greeted with written and verbal tributes from other members of the division assuring him of their being glad he is on their side.

Beach Borough Fire Chief E. B. Bayne is in South Boston this week acting as an instructor at a state sponsored fire school being conducted in that area.

The donning of the new Stetson type hats this week by Virginia Beach police officers brought varied reactions over the resulting change in the men's appearance. We might add, all the comments we've heard thus far are favorable. However we understand the hat has resulted in the unofficial dubbing of one 2nd Precinct police sergeant as "The Ranger".

Paul Gerard, of the Little Creek Naval Amphibious Base Fire Dept., has been honored by the Old Dominion Fire Fighters magazine. The current issue of the magazine contains a reprinting of one of several poems recently composed by Gerard.

Congratulations are in order for Jim Hundley of the Virginia Beach Fire Prevention Bureau. Hundley has just returned to duty after taking that long walk down the aisle with the former Miss Sharon Finney, and Jim tells us, "I sure like married life".

CPO H. M. Barkes is in the midst of final processing on his leaving service with the U.S. Navy. Barkes has spent the last 18 months on duty with the Virginia Beach Shore Patrol Detachment.

Volunteers from the Plaza, Knotts Island, Kempville, Ocean Park, Princess Anne Courthouse and Chesapeake Beach fire departments and the Beach Borough Rescue Squad have offered their services during the forthcoming Shiners Circus. Each of the units will have ambulances on stand by duty during the length of the circus in the event any medical emergency which may arise.

We understand Sgt. C. N. Kerlee, officer in charge of the police communications center and radio room, is pondering over the best method of completing a task confronting him. Kerlee has been notified the women dispatchers in the radio room are to be outfitted in newly designed uniforms by the first of the month, and Kerlee is debating over the most practical means of obtaining the necessary measurements to assure proper fitting of the uniforms.

Beebe Wins Scholarship

Christopher L. Beebe, a student at First Colonial High School has been awarded a Weyerhaeuser Company Foundation college scholarship.

Christopher, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis S. Beebe of Franklin Drive plans a liberal arts course at Duke University in Durham, N.C. in preparation for a career in writing.

He was selected from among 260 scholarship candidates in nationwide competition. Scholarship winners are determined on the basis of test scores, high school grades, character, qualities of leadership and citizenship, work habits and general range of interest.

As one of this year's 25 Weyerhaeuser Company Foundation scholars, Christopher will be eligible for a four-year college scholarship worth $2,000 to $9,000. The awards in excess of $2,000 are based on individual need.

The Weyerhaeuser Company Foundation is funded by Weyerhaeuser Company, Tacoma, Wash., a widely diversified international forest products firm. College scholarships are awarded to eligible children of employees of Weyerhaeuser Company, or its wholly owned subsidiaries.

Promotions Announced

At its meeting Monday, the Board of Directors of United Virginia Bank/Seaboard National promoted William I. Foster, Jr. to the position of Vice President. Announcement of the board action was made by M. Lee Payne, President of the bank.

A Virginia Beach resident, Foster received his BBA degree from the Norfolk Division of William and Mary where he was the recipient of the Cotillion Award presented to the student making the greatest contribution to the college. He has also received his graduate degree in banking from the Stonier Graduate School of Banking at Rutgers University.

In January of this year, Foster transferred to the bank's Marketing Division and assumed new responsibilities in the areas of sales training and national accounts coordination.

Active in civic affairs, Foster serves as a Director of Old Dominion Educational Foundation; President of Old Dominion Alumni Association and Kempville Meadows P.T.A. and serves as a baseball coach of the Pony-Colt League of Kempville.

The new entrance to Seaside Market.

Store Displays New Front

Seaside Market, a familiar sight at Virginia Beach since 1944, opened a new door this morning—one that faces Pacific Avenue instead of 23rd Street.

It hasn't moved from its location, but the market has been expanded, increasing the floor space almost 2,500 feet, Russell S. Marshall Sr., owner of Seaside Market, says that although the store will not stock any more products, the ones they have will be more accessible and better displayed.

It is hard to imagine the market carrying any more products, for the establishment has long been noted for its line of unusual and often exotic foods. Seaside probably has more gourmet foods than any similar store in the area.

Turkeys, roasts and hams are cooked on the premises, and Virginia cured hams are shipped all over the country from there (this special branch of Seaside Market is known as the Virginia Ham Company). Marshall, and his son, Russell S. Marshall Jr., have made special plans for the opening of the addition. Door prizes will be given to lucky customers, which include a 19" RCA color T.V. (grand prize) and smaller prizes such as turkeys and Smithfield hams. Any customer patronizing the store today, Friday or Saturday will be eligible for the prizes. The winners will be notified Monday morning.

Savage Is Representative

Cary L. Savage of Virginia Beach has become a Registered Representative with Wheat & Co., Inc. member firm of the New York and American Stock Exchange. The announcement was made by Alfred L. Wood, vice-president and manager of the firm's Norfolk office.

Savage came to Wheat & Co. after serving in the United States Air Force for 27 years. He attended William and Mary College, the University of Omaha, and the University of Oklahoma.

Savage and his wife, reside with their two sons on Shenstone Drive.

"I'm a builder. In my area, I've noticed a significant change of attitude toward electric heat... the acceptance is very good."

R. D. Wade, Charlottesville, Va.

Mr. Wade is a home-builder. A very successful home builder at that. For the past two years, over 95% of the homes he has built have been electrically heated. Since he had the choice of any type of heating system available on the market, he asked him why he chose electric heat. This is what he said:

"It was the cleanliness, the convenience, the ease of operation and maintenance that electric heat affords you."

Mr. Wade, do you have electric heat in your own house?

"Yes, I do."

And how do you like it?

"The big thing I think we enjoy is the fact that the electric baseboard is controlled in each room of the house, rather than in just two or three places in the house."

Are you bothered by any noise?

"Electric heat in itself makes essentially no noise at all."

What does your wife think of electric heat?

"She, too, likes electric heat very much. Of course, the thing she enjoys so much is the cleanliness of the heat."

Mr. Wade, as a builder, do you find that there's a trend toward electric heat in your area?

"Certainly there has been a significant change of attitude toward electric heat in our area. A few years ago many people had misconceptions about electric heat, primarily in the area of cost. Now... the acceptance is very good."

Mr. Wade is just one of the more than 43,000 satisfied electric heating customers in the Vepco service area. If you'd like to find out how easy and economical it is to convert your home to modern electric heat, just call your Vepco Authorized Comfort Conditioning Contractor. His number is in the Yellow Pages. He'll come out and give you an estimate. In dollars and cents. And of course, at no obligation to you. Once you learn about all the advantages of electric heat, and how reasonable the cost actually is, we're confident you'll be one more satisfied electric heating customer."

Loafing Isn't in Summer Plans of These College Coeds

By Yatta Jones

This is the time of year when suitcases almost take the place of furniture in those houses where college-age girls live. A year's accumulation of books, pictures, and new clothes are strewn around, hunting a new home.

For many Virginia Beach college students the bags are being packed to go again. Think about that all of you mothers who are busy taking them up and letting seams out. You know you have most of the summer to get the job done. What if daughter had barely gotten in the door before she were packed and gone again? At least you know that for the time being you are communicating...she says "I need" and you supply. Now that's an open, clear line with no static.

Seriously, a chat with four area college students reveals that trips, both short and extended, are in their summer plans.

The first student interviewed was Marilyn Martha (Mimi) Koster. She was a little hard to locate, but she was finally contacted at the beach where she was resting...before taking off again!

Mimi will be a junior at Radford College when she returns in September. She is the daughter of Lt. Col. (USMC Ret.) and Mrs. Edward A. Koster of Susquehanna Drive.

From June 20 until July 20 Mimi will be visiting ten European countries. Her trip is a study-tour and will emphasize art, history and music in the different countries. Mimi is scheduled to visit England, Holland, Belgium, Luxembourg, Germany, Switzerland, Liechtenstein, Austria, Italy and France.

Mimi says she is really looking forward to the trip since she has never been abroad before. When asked what she will be looking for in particular, Mimi replied, "The general conditions...the way people live...the differences between the way they live and we live...I'll also be looking for some good buys!"

Upon her return Mimi says she would like to find a job, or do some volunteer work with mentally retarded children. She is especially interested in the latter since she is presently considering changing her major, elementary education, to special education.

Susan Miller, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald D. Miller of Ravenswood Road, is a sophomore at Indiana University in Bloomington, Ind. Susan is planning to work this summer.

As with most students Susan would like to work in her field of study. However, Susan is a physical therapy major and she found out last year that jobs in her field are scarce in this area.

As a result Susan will go back to the job she held last year--reservations clerk at a local motel. Susan says that she will probably work there during the week only. She is going to try to get a weekend job as well. Right now she would like to work at Little Island during the weekends as a lifeguard.

According to how her plans work out, Susan may attend night school at ODC also.

Although Susan doesn't plan to take any long trips she does have a couple of short trips in mind. She has planned to go on a weekend trip in July with the pledge class of her sorority, and she may attend a National Swimming meet in Louisville, Ky. in August.

Suzette Marie (Suze) Izac is the daughter of Cmdr. and Mrs. Edouard V. Izac, of Spindrift Road. Suze will be a sophomore at the University of Tampa in Tampa, Fla. when she returns in the fall. At the present she is majoring in sociology.

Suze had just gotten off the plane when she was interviewed, so she hadn't been able to make any definite plans. She says that she would like to work, but she doesn't know where yet. Besides working she has set two goals for herself--to learn how to water ski and how to drive.

As far as recreation is concerned Suze plans to spend time at the beach and fish. She has a small 16' boat, "Snafu," and she intends to enjoy that a lot.

Suze would like to visit some of her Zeta Tau Alpha sorority sisters in New Jersey, but she doesn't know when that will be right now.

Esther Kathleen Beasley, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Beasley Jr. of Ridge Road, attends Hollins in Roanoke. Esther, a sociology major with a minor in education, will be a senior there in the fall.

Esther was hard to reach because her phone stayed busy. It's no wonder, for she is leaving Saturday for a two-month trip to Europe. She will be traveling with two other girls and they will visit France, Belgium, Denmark, Switzerland, Italy, Germany and England.

The trip is not a planned tour--one of her traveling companion's grandmother is familiar with Europe and helped the girls to map out their own tour. Esther says that she wants to try a little of everything while she is there, including a bicycle tour.

Right now Esther is completely occupied with packing...and unpacking. She says that everyone has told her to take what she will be wearing and two empty suitcases--to bring back what she buys. "I've gone through my clothes several times," she says, "and I keep sticking stuff back into the closet!"

After they finished discussing their plans for the summer, all four of the girls were willing to talk about the student unrest in their schools.

Mimi says that there is no real student unrest at Radford. "There was a petition sent around about academic freedom, but that's all...there are about 3,600 girls at Radford and we don't do much protesting."

Esther said approximately the same thing about Hollins. She said the school had introduced several new rules which liberalized the atmosphere some, but even this move was not motivated by the students. It was instigated by the school itself.

Suze said that there had been no big problem with student unrest at the University of Tampa, although there was a small sitdown staged at the end of the year. The sitdown was to protest the firing of one of the professors and to ask for more communication between the student body and school administration. "However," Suze added, "those students have been asked not to return...it's a small school and we don't go for things like that."

Susan says that there was some student unrest at Indiana University. The school fees were raised and the student body held campus rallies to discuss what could be done about rescinding the raise. All of the demonstrations were peaceful and had the support of the faculty until the SDS entered into the picture. After this happened the matter eventually died out.

"We soon realized the administration could do nothing about the situation...funds were withdrawn from the school," Susan added that the administration had done all they could for the students, including giving loans to anyone who could not return because of the fees being raised.

These girls are probably doing what most college students are doing right now--making summer plans and reflecting on what the past year was like in college. They are a busy group of intelligent, knowledgeable people on the go. Sometimes it's hard for their parents to keep up with them...but the challenge is stimulating.

Get That Tomato Out of My Bed

We've got a tomato vine creeping into our bedroom window. I don't know if it wants company or just likes air conditioning.

Really, it sort of frightens me. Remember years ago when the movie, "The Thing" came out? That was about an overgrown carrot that went around killing people. Now our tomato has not shown any aggressive tendencies yet, but you just never can tell. . . Sunday I spent out in the garden unwinding the pumpkin's tentacles from around my bachelor buttons. I think it tried to grab my arm.

I'd hate to wake up some night with a tomato vine wrapped around me. Thank goodness my husband sleeps closest to the window.

Recently I've read several articles telling how plants are influenced by their environment--and I don't mean dirt, fertilizer and water. For instance, it's been proved scientifically (so they say) that plants will grow faster or slower when different rhythms of music are played near them. Other "experts" say that talking to the plants encourages faster growth.

I don't know the answer. All I know is that we've got one tomato that is much taller than the other two and has literally climbed a ladder (it outgrew two stakes) to reach the window. I really do think it's looking for my husband--a father figure, no doubt.

He goes out every morning before he leaves for work and makes the rounds of all the plants. As soon as he gets home at night he walks around the yard again. He knows when they've grown a sixteenth of an inch.

Now I'm usually busy when he goes out, so I have no idea what kind of encouragement or threats he gives them, but I do wish he had planted the tomatoes by the television antenna so they could climb that.

My husband has a green thumb anyway. Actually, I think the plants grow in spite of rather than because of his care. He floods them almost daily, especially when it looks like rain. Our back yard is a marsh. He also transplants them at the wrong time.

In April he trimmed the pyracantha bushes and stuck some of the clippings down in the ground while a neighbor laughed and told him they couldn't possibly root at that time of year. They did. He also rooted a rose clipping, which I've never been able to do.

Maybe I'm just jealous. But I do hope that darn tomato stays on his side of the bed.

Mrs. George E. Mott, left, president of Princess Anne Woman's Club, presents a donation of $21,218.78 on behalf of the club to Dr. Madge May for the building fund of the Atlantic Mental Hygiene Center. Groundbreaking ceremonies for the center, which will be built on Wildwood Drive, were held last week.

Mrs. William Kellam, a blond, looks somewhat different while modeling a brunet wig.

Candidates Join Club Fun

It was wine and wigs Monday when the Mid-City Women's Democratic Club sponsored a Wine Fest, Wig Show and luncheon at the Shore Drive Inn.

The wigs were from Rice's, and the wig given as a door prize was won by Mrs. Richard Barnes of the Mayflower.

Among the candidates on hand were Bernice Levin and Andy Miller, both of whom spoke briefly before lunch. Miller commented that it was the first time he had ever been an hors d'oeuvre. Levin (who is almost totally bald) quipped that he was part of the wig show.

Spices Are Clue to Cuisine

The cooking pot has become America's modern-day "melting pot," as we mix and blend the cuisines of the world at our tables.

When the working wife has time to try something unusual she's as likely as not to make a dish of Italian, Mexican or Spanish origin, according to a survey of spice use made recently.

The meat, wheat or rice used in these dishes would give no clue to the nationality were it not for spicing. A chicken might be seasoned with rosemary for an Italian accent, with cumin and peppers for Mexican aroma or saffron to give it Spanish flavor. Most homemakers become familiar with the lesser known spices as they try foreign cooking.

Black pepper is used so regularly in American cooking that we find it is taken for granted on spice lists. We import more pepper, per capita, than any other nation. Next to pepper we have garlic and onion products as essential seasoners. After that such basic must-have spices as cinnamon, nutmeg, cloves, chili powder and paprika. Herb seasoning, curry powder and parsley flakes have a high rating in the American kitchen, too.

At this time of year nothing could be more popular in this country than a good, snappy barbecue sauce and picnic baked beans. Here are the recipes from the test kitchens of the American Spice Trade Association.

ALL-AMERICAN BARBECUE SAUCE FOR CHICKEN
1 can (10 1/2 oz.) chicken broth
1 can (6 oz.) tomato juice
3 tbs. lemon juice
1/4 c. butter or margarine
1 tbs. chili powder
1 tsp. brown sugar
1 tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. instant garlic powder
1/16 tsp. ground red pepper
2 (2 1/2 lb. each) broiler-fryer chickens, cut into serving pieces

Combine all ingredients except chicken in a small saucepan. Cook over moderate heat until butter is melted; cool slightly. Pour over chicken and marinate 4 hours or longer. Remove chicken from marinade. Place chicken on grill. Cook over a hot charcoal fire 40 to 60 minutes turning and brushing with marinade often. Yield: 2 cups barbecue sauce or 6 portions.

PICNIC BAKED BEANS
1 lb. dry white beans
1/4 c. mild-flavored molasses
3 tbs. brown sugar
2 tbs. instant minced onion
2 1/4 tsp. salt

'Shoestrings' Are Great With Steak

A satisfying, well-balanced dinner need not take an eternity to prepare.

Steak nights are favorites in American homes. The food is hearty and delicious and best of all, preparation takes just a short while.

Pik Nik home economists suggest serving heaping bowls of shoestring potatoes with a steak platter for a nutritious addition to the meal. Kids and grownups like the taste of the crisp potato morsels, and nothing could be easier to serve. Garnish the steak with parsley and grilled tomatoes, topped with mushroom caps set out salt and pepper and enjoy the good eating that lies ahead.

There's color afoot in today's shoe styles. Give cotton canvas sneakers the bright touch of color with easy-to-use fabric dyes. Dye sneakers in your washing machine, following directions on the dye package.

It's picnic time again—with barbecued chicken and old-fashioned baked beans. For tastier picnics this summer, keep a little set of favorite spices in the basket, ready to go.

1 tsp. powdered mustard
3/4 tsp. ground ginger
1/2 lb. salt pork

Soak beans in cold water to cover for 12 hours or overnight. Drain. Place in a large saucepan. Add water to cover (about 6 cups). Bring to boil and boil until tender and skins pop, about 30 minutes. Drain beans, this time reserving liquid. Place beans in bean pot or 2-quart casserole. Combine 1 cup of the reserved liquid with the molasses, brown sugar, minced onion, salt, mustard and ginger; stir into beans. Score salt pork making cuts 1/2-inch apart, 1/16 inch deep. Bury in center of beans, leaving rind exposed. Add enough of the remaining liquid to cover beans. Cover casserole. Bake in a pre-heated slow oven (300 degrees F.) 6 to 8 hours. Stir beans once or twice during cooking period, adding boiling water if necessary. Yield: 6 to 8 portions.

Good Cooks Know ABC's

Being a good cook is as easy as A-B-C.

Vitamins A, B and C, that is.

And other vitamins and minerals, too.

That's the word from the Health Insurance Institute, which points out that from a nutritional point of view, many American families are not really as well fed as they like to think.

In fact, recent government studies indicate that a family with a "poor diet" is not necessarily one with a poor income.

The situation—despite general national affluence—may be getting worse rather than better. (In 1965, a government study showed that only 50 per cent of the nation's households had "good" — meaning balanced — diets. A decade earlier a similar study showed 60 per cent of households were in that category.)

Switching a family from a "poor" to a "good" diet is usually a matter of knowing what to cook and how to cook it, so that nutritional values aren't left in the pot.

It's worth the effort. Good diets are essential for growing children. They're also needed by adults and teen-agers alike for the maintenance of good health.

Here's a list of some important vitamins and minerals, what they do and where to find them:

* Vitamin A. It's needed for growth, good vision and healthy skin. Found in fish, milk, butter, egg yolks and so-called variety meats (heart, livers, sweetbreads).

* The B Vitamins. These vitamins convert food into energy. Found in vegetables, grains, meat and milk.

* Vitamin C. Lack of it affects the blood and skin. Comes almost entirely from citrus fruits and juices.

* Vitamin D—the "sunshine vitamin." Lack of it affects the bones. This vitamin is manufactured by the human body from sunlight and also the chemicals found in fish, butter and egg yolks.

* Calcium and phosphorus. Essential for bone development. Found in milk and other dairy products.

Celery Crisp
Place 1 quart sliced celery, cut into 1-inch pieces, in a medium saucepan. Add 2 table-spoons water. Cover and cook over low heat 15 to 20 minutes or until just crisp-tender, adding additional water if needed. Transfer celery to a casserole. Combine 1/2 cup mayonnaise with 1/4 cup milk, 1/4 teaspoon salt and dash ground white pepper. Pour over celery. Sprinkle with 2 table-spoons grated Parmesan cheese and 2 table-spoons corn-flake crumbs. Bake uncovered in a preheated moderate oven (350 F.) 10 minutes or until heated thoroughly. Perfect as a hot or seafood accompaniment. Yield: 4 to 6 portions.

McCollum-White Wedding

Miss Alice Geneva McCollum of North Landing Road became the bride of Staff Sgt. James Walter White of Virginia Beach at 5 p.m. Saturday, June 7 in the Chapel of the Good Shepherd, Oceana NAS. The Rev. Robert DeWitt Byrd of Bethel Baptist Church, Chesapeake, performed the candlelight ceremony.

She is the daughter of John Curtis McCollum and the late Mrs. McCollum.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Bruce Farthing of Princess Anne and the late Walter Ford White.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore an original Alfred Angelo wedding gown in candlelight peau de soie.

Home economists at Mario Food Products have these serving suggestions.

* Use olives in coleslaw. Top home-made or commercially prepared slaw with sliced olives.

* Baking powder biscuits take on new dimensions when you add grated cheddar cheese to your favorite recipe. Form the biscuits. Then press an almond-stuffed green olive into the top. Bake as usual. Olive muffins are a great companion to salads.

* Curried ripe olives are a breeze to fix. To your favorite Italian dressing add curry powder to taste. Pour mixture over drained ripe olives. Refrigerate for several hours, then drain and serve the olives as snacks.

Childhood Varies Around World

Ways of rearing children vary widely over the world, and the experiences of their childhood affect greatly the kind of people children grow up to be.

For instance, the girl children of the Mundugumor tribe in New Guinea are not treated with the care and tenderness which we feel is every small child's right. Instead, as infants they are placed in crude straw baskets that scratch their skin; when hungry they are left to howl until tired before their mothers feed them; and in many other ways they are systematically frustrated throughout their young lives, until by the time a Mundugumorian girl reaches the age of marriage she has become a mean-tempered shrew, the ideal bride of the bachelor of the tribe.

Only a few miles away, parents of the Arawak tribe treat their children quite differently. The tribe deems it a tragedy when a child cries. Here children are never punished, and they are denied nothing, except freedom to hurt other children. Relatives and other members of the tribe join in the pampering, and all through their childhood these boys and girls are loved and "spoiled." What kind of people do they grow up to be? Not mean-tempered like the Mundugumorian girls, but gentle and easy-going like their own kindly parents.

Interestingly, when a baby is born, the Ashanti village in Ghana remains quiet. For two weeks there is no flurry, no indication that anything at all unusual has taken place. But on the 14th day, if all has gone well, a proud father may be seen walking from house to house in the village carrying the new baby in his arms--and receiving congratulations from each person he meets.

The peasants of China wait only three days before wrapping a new baby in a special red jacket--made from one uncut piece of cloth--and formally presenting him to his grandparents. On this day the new mother is presented with brown sugar and eggs in a ceremonial basket--and both mother and baby are praised highly by the senior women of the family.

Modern American parents will not be outdone by their counterparts around the world. Mothers and fathers are now returning to the Indian way of carrying a papoose on the back. A new product enables them to take a baby five or six months old, up to two or three years, anywhere they want to go. The featherlight carrier fits on the back. Baby sits in a seat facing forward, piggyback. Quick and easy to slip on, the Gerry Carrier, as it is called, is said to make an infant seem pounds lighter because his weight is evenly distributed.

A new adaption of an ages-old idea. The Gerry Carrier is a modern, light weight version of the traditional Indian papoose board.

Carried away in a different manner through the centuries, stern as well as indulgent parents in all countries have frequently sought means of bringing up and educating their children to be the kind of adults who best fit the parents' ideals. Children have been forced into the role of child prodigies by parents who would not take a back seat.

John Stuart Mill, for example, read Latin, Greek and calculus at an early age. Others, like the youth of Sparta, were given no "book-learning" but were taught the tenets of toughness and how to be effective fighting men. Present-day parents in almost every land want for their children the ability to read and write. Great strides have been made in raising the levels of literacy in countries where until the last few years it was very low.

Despite this diversity in upbringing, the needs and development of children are alike the world over. To have his needs met is a basic right of every child.

Several years ago, there seemed to be a requirement to think through and put into a compact statement the rights to which every child is entitled, no matter in what country, race or culture he may be born. The United Nations Committee on Social, Humanitarian and Cultural Affairs developed such a statement and adopted a "Declaration of the Rights of the Child," which proclaims the right of the child to "a happy childhood," to affection, security and education, and to protection against all forms of exploitation.

Which Came First?

(Editor's note: Here is another in the series on home horticulture by Wesley P. Judkins, Extension horticulturist at Virginia Tech.)

We received an interesting question in a letter the other day. Which comes first, the flower or the cucumber? This suggested that the writer had observed the petals of the blossom growing on the end of a small cucumber.

Actually, the small baby cucumber and the petals at the end are the flower. It is just a matter of where the petals are located in relation to the part of the bloom that develops into the fruit, or cucumber. Pumpkins, squash and melons develop the same way, with the petals at the end of the young fruit.

The cucumber has a long and interesting history. It is generally believed to be a native of southern Asia, probably in northern India in the region of the Himalaya mountains. Ancient literature reports its culture in western Asia more than 300 years ago.

The cucumber has been grown in many countries and is one of the few vegetables mentioned in the Bible. It was important in ancient Egypt and was introduced into China from Persia about 100 B.C.

Columbus brought cucumber seeds to the New World in 1494. They were cultivated by the Indians in Canada as early as 1535. DeSoto found cucumbers in Florida in 1539, and Captain John Smith found them in Virginia in 1584.

The statement "cool as a cucumber" is not just a catchy phrase. The inside of a field cucumber has a temperature about 20 degrees cooler than the outside air on a warm day.

Cucumbers are used in all sizes from the small gherkin pickles to the greenhouse varieties which grow two feet long. Also, did you ever hear of the Lemon cucumber? This unusual item is about the size and color of a large lemon. The flesh is white and has a delicious sweet flavor.

How about that Burpless Cucumber? This hybrid is especially suggested for people who have trouble from eating regular cucumbers. The Burpless cucumber is a fine, crisp, juicy slicing type which can be eaten with comfort by those who may not enjoy the common varieties.

We get letters rather frequently during the summer asking for a remedy for the bitter flavor of cucumbers. Unfortunately we have no quick and easy answer for that problem. The bitter flavor is the result of an organic compound which is present in all parts of the plant. It can now be detected by chemical methods. Most of the new hybrid varieties contain little or none of this substance.

As far as we know, there is no cultural practice or other treatment which you can follow to eliminate the bitter flavor in certain cucumbers. The undesirable flavor may become pronounced when the cucumber becomes dried out and starts to shrivel. The only solution we can suggest is to plant the newer varieties in the future, in which this problem has been reduced.

More Pepper

According to records of the American Spice Trade Association, 1967 proved the greatest single year for the importation of black pepper. Black pepper imports jumped from 33,939,000 pounds in 1966 to 51,417,000 pounds in 1967.

Mrs. Dickerson Heads Federation

Three of the new officers of the Norfolk Federation of Garden Clubs, Inc. who took office last week are from Norfolk.

They are Mrs. C. A. Dickerson, president; Mrs. George H. Hamilton, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Lamont A. Shinn, historian. Other officers are: Mrs. Charles L. Todd, first vice president; Mrs. Howard F. Barrett, second vice president; Mrs. Homer F. Lewis, third vice president; Mrs. Marvin O. Byrum, recording secretary; Mrs. H. E. Ramsey, assistant recording secretary; Mrs. Percy H. Carroll, treasurer.

The theme of the luncheon was "Service, Conservation and Beautification for Today and Tomorrow." In keeping with the theme, the Federation reported 69 clubs had undertaken conservation programs; bird programs, 75; bird feeders, 1,006; bird sanctuaries, 137. In addition, 2,162 trees were reported to have been planted; 3,914 shrubs, 545 vines, 1,825 bulbs, 23,956 annuals. Clubs reported serving 4,464 hours in garden therapy projects, 4,343 volunteer hours of service and work with 85 handicapped persons.

The Norfolk Chamber of Commerce presented a certificate of appreciation for the Federation's cooperation in the 1969 Azalea Festival.

Mrs. Gideon D. Overman Jr., left, outgoing president, hands her gavel to Mrs. Dickerson.

Wesleyan To Host Majorettes

Highlighted at this school will be "Miss Majorette of America"—1968 and Miss Lynda Martha of Pittsburgh, Penn. Miss Cookie Richards, Miss Majorette of America—1967, of Chester, W. V., will also add luster to this event. Those instructors scheduled for the school are Brenda Ooten, "Miss Orange Bowl", of Knoxville, Tenn. who is also a certified teacher and judge of baton, and Pam Needham of Winter Park, Fla., a University of Tennessee Band Majorette who will be a "specialty instructor".

The majorette school is sanctioned by the National Baton Twirlers Association and offers high quality instruction for youth eight to 18. Those attending will be housed in the college's air-conditioned dormitories, two to a room, with adult supervision at all times. Students will eat in the college dining hall.

Youth Camps, Inc., sponsors of the camps, provide the opportunity for the youth to enjoy these schools with emphasis upon top flight instruction set in a Christian atmosphere. The Christian faith phase of the program is coordinated by a full-time chaplain of Youth Camps, Inc., which conducts the cheerleader schools.

Additional information may be obtained by writing Youth Camps, Inc., Box 582, South Hill, Virginia 23970 or to Virginia Wesleyan College, Wesleyan Drive, Norfolk, Virginia, 23502.

field, Kansas for the past two years, Forsyth, 33, will assume the duties of athletic director now being handled on a part-time basis by Howard D. Mast, Mast, who has served in this capacity for three years since the college opened, will devote most of his time to his duties as Plant Manager. He will also coach tennis and cross country, as well as teaching in the physical education department.

A native of Howard, Kansas, Forsyth will coach basketball and golf and will direct the entire intercollegiate athletic and physical education program at Virginia Wesleyan.

At Southwestern, he has served as assistant football coach and tennis coach for three years. He became head basketball coach in 1967 and has compiled a 21-24 two-year record. Forsyth has eight years of high school coaching and teaching experience. He holds a B.A. degree from Southwestern College, and an M.S. degree from Kansas State Teachers College.

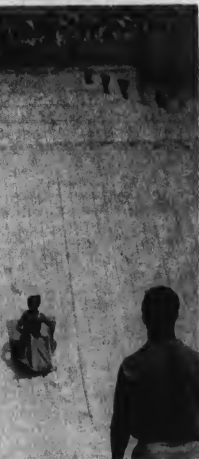

Virginia Wesleyan College is now participating in intercollegiate competition in soccer, cross country, basketball, tennis and golf.

'Buggies' Prohibited

Owners of beach buggies have been warned to keep the vehicles off the sand dunes of the Back Bay National Wildlife Refuge or face prosecution.

Robert E. Gilmore, refuge manager, has announced signs reading "Keep off the dunes" have been posted along the 4.5 miles of the refuge beach at points one-tenth of a mile apart, and that beach buggy drivers violating the warning will be given a citation requiring their appearance before U.S. Magistrate Gilbert Swink in Norfolk.

The posted section of the beach is located on that portion of the Back Bay Refuge running southward from Little Island Park in Sandbridge. Officials point out the area is under constant patrol by employees of the U.S. Bureau of Sports Fisheries and Wildlife.

Beach Dominates All-Eastern Team

Two Virginia Beach teams dominated the All-Eastern baseball team, chosen recently. District champion Princess Anne landed five on the first team and Kellam placed three.

The only unanimous choice in the voting was Kellam's star second baseman, Alan Clements, who ended the regular conference season with a whopping .420 batting average. He also hit three home runs.

Maury placed one pitcher on the honor team. Granby placed an outfielder and a pitcher. Lake Taylor placed the third baseman.

In the voting of the district coaches, Kellam pitcher Mike Futrell just missed the first team, as did Cox's catcher Pete Striffler and Princess Anne's third baseman Ray Roenker.

Two pitchers from Princess Anne, Mike Sweezy and Gary

Bishop, were honored. All first team pitchers were southpaws. Catcher Sammy Blacklock and outfielder David Trax of Kellam were voted to the first team along with Clements.

Eddie Diehl of Princess Anne, who also hit .420 in the regular season, was the shortstop choice. His Cavalier teammates Mike McCully at first base and out fielder Steve Barlow were similarly honored. Barlow hit .370 and McCully hit .350 in the regular season. Sweezy's ERA was .76, and Bishop's was 0.82.

Coaches Will Teach Tennis

Two area varsity tennis coaches will conduct instruction in tennis.

Harold Wheeler of Princess Anne High School and John Roberson of First Colonial High School will instruct at the Princess Anne High Courts. Instruction will begin June 16 and continue every Monday through Friday evening from 7 to 10 p.m. for the following seven weeks.

This instruction is open free to the general public and offers a tremendous opportunity to learn new skills, tactics, and techniques at any level of mastery.

These classes will be sponsored by the Virginia Beach Parks and Recreation Department.

Rn. 3. C. Robert L. Reece, USN, son of Mr. J. A. Reece of Bob Lane, is serving aboard the guided missile frigate USS Mahan.

Old, Young to Vie Sat.

Two track events will be held at Virginia Beach on June 14—the Second Annual Virginia Beach Masters Track and Field Championships and the Virginia State AAU Junior Olympic Track Meet.

The Virginia State AAU Junior Olympic Track Meet, sponsored by the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce and the Quaker Oats Co., is for boys and girls from ages 14 through 17. The meet begins at 1 p.m.

Medals are being awarded for first, second and third place winners. This meet will determine the participants for the Regional Meet, which will be held at College Park, Md. on July 19. Winners of the Regional Meet will qualify for the National Meet, scheduled to be at San Diego, Calif. Aug. 19-21.

The Masters Championships, sponsored by the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce, is open to men 40 and over. Entries have been received from all over the United States. One entry from Omaha, Neb. has entered the meet just for the 100 yd. dash.

One highlight of the Masters is the mile run. Four entries have run the mile in less than five minutes. One entry, 51 years old, ran the mile in 4:52 seconds at another meet in January.

The events will be at First Colonial High School; an admission fee of $.50 will allow spectators to view both.

Young Artists Get Prizes

Awards were made last week to several young area artists. The artists, students from area high schools, have their works hung in the Village Gallery at College Park Information Center. Judges for the exhibit were members of the Chesapeake Art Association, W. J. Summerlin and Thelma Larkin.

Best in the Show went to Pat Pantalo, a 17-year-old student at First Colonial High School. First place in Oil went to Linda Gibbons of First Colonial; second place was awarded to Andrea Dupre of Lake Taylor Junior High School; third place was won by Pat Pantalo and honorable mention went to Gray Lundy of Crestwood High School.

Winners in the Water Colors category were: Marsha Kurs, Princess Anne High School, first place; Pat Pantalo, second place; Linda Rutledge of Lake Taylor Junior High School, third place and Stanley O'Bannon of Great Bridge High School, honorable mention.

Younger Set Have Dances

The Fraternal Order of Police, Princess Anne Lodge No. 8, is sponsoring weekly dances for young people of the resort city who, because of their age, are unable to attend most dances staged in Virginia Beach. The dances, open to all children of school age in the city, are being held each Friday evening from 8:30 p.m. to 11:30 p.m., at the FOP Lodge on South Birdneck Road and will be chaperoned.

Admission is by a donation of $1 per person. Music is furnished by the misal group known as "The Souled Outs." These dances will be held weekly during the duration of the summer school vacation. FOP officials point out admission will be restricted to those under 18 years of age and no alcoholic beverages of any type will be permitted.

More Charges Made

Additional charges have been filed against a 17-year-old juvenile who several weeks ago attempted to escape while being taken from City Jail to the Virginia Beach courts. Youth authorities at Oakland, Calif. have requested Virginia Beach police to detain the juvenile on a fugitive warrant charging him with illegal flight to avoid prosecution in California. The juvenile also faces statutory burglary charges in Virginia Beach and Norfolk.

Belongings Recovered

Two men and two women from Cleveland, Ohio, are awaiting court proceedings in Virginia Beach in the reported attack and robbery of Army Sgt. Joseph R. Oliverio, 39, was discovered in his Sandalwood Road apartment by police investigating a complaint of a suspicious car. The accused were identified by officials as Donna Mary Kish, 27, Christine Johnson, 27, Curtis R. Scott, 33, and Samuel B. Vineyard, 33. Investigators said some $500 in personal belongings reportedly taken from the Oliverio home were recovered shortly after the arrest of the suspects.

Car Overturned

Final services were held Wednesday for two Virginia Beach residents who died in an auto accident last weekend outside Hags Head N.C. Police officials said Dirk Bunch, 19, Woodhurst Drive, and Gerald Smith, 20, Goldsboro Avenue, were killed Sunday morning when their auto careened out of control and overturned.

Burglary Investigated

Det. H. J. Coffield, Jr., is investigating the theft of $1,000 from Hilltop Volkswagen on Lusk Road. The money was taken from a safe after thieves forced their way through a door. The theft reportedly occurred sometime between 2:15 a.m., when police patrolling the area found the building secure, and 1:30 a.m., when employees arrived.

Upholstery To Be Taught

BE IT ORDAINED BY THE COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF VIRGINIA BEACH, VIRGINIA
Section 1 (a). The right is hereby granted unto hereinafter referred to as the "Grantee", its successors and assigns, for the term and subject to the conditions and limitations hereinafter stated, to use the streets, alleys and public places of the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, hereinafter referred to as the "City", and to acquire, erect, maintain and use, and if now constructed to maintain and use, poles, towers, wires and facilities over and along, and to acquire, construct, maintain and use, and if now constructed to maintain and use, conduits, pipes, mains and other facilities, including necessary manholes, and to run cables and wires in, under and along the streets, alleys and public places of the City, and to use the property of other persons, corporations and organizations to use its property upon such arrangements as shall be agreed upon subject to the conditions herein set forth, for the purpose of providing all types of telephone, teletype and other electronic service at any point within the corporate limits of the City, as the same now exist or may hereafter be extended or altered and in accordance with authority granted by the State Corporation Commission of Virginia.
(b) The City may require that any lines, cables, conduits, or similar facilities of the Grantee, which are to be constructed on City property after the effective date of this ordinance be installed beneath the surface of the land and in accordance with sound construction practices relating to such installation.
(c) Prior to doing any work, other than minor repair or construction which will not interfere with the use of the City's property, pursuant to the terms of this ordinance on property owned by the City, the Grantee shall apply to the City Department of Public Works for authority to perform such work, stating the nature of the work and the location in which it is to be performed. The City shall promptly authorize such work unless it clearly appears that the proposed work will unreasonably interfere with the health, safety, or welfare of citizens of the City. In an emergency, work may be performed by Grantee without such a permit, subject to the provisions of sections 4 and 6 of this ordinance.
(d) When Grantee's facilities are located on property owned by the City and the City reasonably requires that such facilities be relocated, Grantee will at its expense move such facilities to an alternate location reasonably suitable to Grantee's purposes and provided by the City at the City's expense. This provision shall not apply to removal or relocation of facilities required by any State or Federal agency, except where the facilities to be relocated are located on public property which has been dedicated or acquired for street or road purposes, including uses incidental thereto.
Section 2. From and after the date on which this ordinance shall become effective, the poles and other facilities in, under and along the streets, alleys and public places of the City, authorized by this ordinance to be located and constructed, shall be located at reasonably suitable and convenient points. If and when requested by the Mayor or other administrative officer of the City, the Grantee shall, from time to time, file with the City plans showing the location of proposed additional poles or structures, and obtain a permit therefor prior to their construction in, under and along the streets, alleys and public places of the City.
Section 3. In the location and erection of the poles, conduits and other facilities and fixtures and in stringing the wires as herein authorized, the Grantee shall have the right, after reasonable notice to the City Department of Public Works, to trim, cut and keep clear of its wires and fixtures the trees in and along the streets, alleys and public places of the City, but shall not cut or otherwise injure said trees to any greater extent than is reasonably necessary in the construction, maintenance and operation of the said poles, wires, fixtures and other structures of the Grantee as herein authorized and provided.
Section 4. In the event the Grantee shall, in the construction or repair of its works, injure any pavement, sidewalk, sewer, water or other pipe or works belonging to the City, it shall, upon notice thereof from the Mayor, promptly repair the same at its own cost and expense.
Section 5. The Grantee shall,
when so requested by the Council of the City, permit its poles, towers and other structures to be used without compensation by the City for the purpose of placing thereon any traffic lighting, force or police alarm, teletype or telephone wires which may be necessary for the exclusive use of the police or fire department of the City, provided that such use by the City shall not interfere with the proper use of said poles, facilities and fixtures by the Grantee, and that the location and character of said wires and fixtures of the said City shall be subject to the approval of the Grantee herein, and it hereby agrees to, indemnify and save harmless to the Grantee from any and all loss, damage, cost or expense to, or which may be incurred by Grantee, or to which it may as a result of the use of said poles and structures by the City as in this section provided.
Section 6. The Grantee agrees and binds itself, by the acceptance of this ordinance, to indemnify, keep and hold the City free and harmless from liability on account of injury or damage to person or property growing out of the construction, improvement, maintenance, repair and operation of its lines or works, and in the event that suit shall be brought against the City, either independently or jointly with Grantee on account thereof, the Grantee, upon notice to it by the City, will defend the City in any such suit at the cost of Grantee, and in event of a final judgment being obtained against the City, either independently or jointly with Grantee, the Grantee will pay such judgment, with all costs, and hold the City harmless therefrom; but nothing herein contained shall be construed to render Grantee liable for the negligence of the City, its agents or employees or of any other person or corporation.
Section 7. The Grantee shall operate and maintain an efficient telephone service system at reasonable rates for use of inhabitants of the City during the term of this franchise.
Section 8. All the rights and privileges hereby granted to Grantee may be exercised by any successor or successors, assigns or assignees of the Grantee, but the successor or successors, assignee or assignees shall be subject to all the provisions, obligations and penalties herein prescribed.
Section 9. The rights and privileges hereby granted shall continue for the period of thirty years from and after the day on which this ordinance becomes effective as provided in Section 10 below, unless the same be sooner voluntarily surrendered by the Grantee, with the consent of the Council of the City, or unless the same be sooner forfeited as provided by law.
Upon the expiration of the term of this grant and upon the termination of the rights hereby granted, by surrender, forfeiture or otherwise, all of the poles, wires, conduits, lines and other property of the Grantee in the streets, alleys or public places of the City may be removed from the streets, alleys
and public places of the City at the expense of the Grantee within a reasonable time after the expiration or termination of such rights and privileges, such time to be prescribed by the Council of the City.
Section 10. This ordinance and the rights and privileges hereby granted and conferred shall become effective when the Grantee has filed with the Mayor of the City its written acceptance thereof, and has entered into a bond in the sum of One Hundred Dollars ($100), with surety satisfactory to the Mayor, conditioned to the effect that the Grantee will construct and maintain, or if constructed, will maintain, the poles, wires, conduits, lines and other facilities provided for herein and reasonably necessary for the exercise of the rights and privileges granted in and by this ordinance, in good order throughout the term of this grant, and will comply with the terms, provisions and conditions of this ordinance in all respects.
Section 11. This ordinance shall be in force from its passage.
II. That upon the approval of this ordinance by the Mayor

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC

Notice is hereby given to the public that Aragona Utilities Corporation has filed with the State Corporation Commission revised rates, rules and regulations for sewerage service rendered in the vicinity of Aragona Village area of the City of Virginia Beach, which involve increases over the charges now being made. The proposed rates filed to become effective upon the order of the State Corporation Commission and after commencement of delivery of effluent to Hampton Roads Sanitation District are as follows:

A Two-Part Rate
Treatment Charge: The exact charge of each individual customer as billed by Hampton Roads Sanitation District on their rate schedule which is based on metered water usage;
and Service Charge: For transportation to Hampton Roads Sanitation District, maintenance, service and collection.
To each residential customer
$18.00/qr.
To each apartment customer
$13.50/qr.

To each commercial customer a factor times the residential base rate of $18.00. Said factor would be the customer's 1967 water usage divided by the average 1967 water usage of a residential customer, or, in cases where there is no record for determination of 1967 water usage, the actual or estimated water usage for such customer as appropriate.

"An investigation of the proposed charges has been entered upon by the Commission, and a hearing on such new rates has been set for 10:00
A.M. on July 17, 1969, in the Courtroom of the Commission,
Blanton Building, Richmond, Virginia, at which time and place members of the public generally may appear and present such relevant data as may be desired and may be heard."

Mr. James R. McKenry,

Take Truth in Lending, for instance. Reputable banks here in town have been truthful about lending for years. And other types of lending institutions have been boasting about it for some time.

That's great. It's nice to know that everyone is abiding by the law of the land.

But unfortunately, Truth in Lending legislation won't ensure that you'll get sound advice about borrowing money. Any more than highway signs ensure that there'll be no speeding.

All Truth in Lending really does is make sure you know how much a loan is going to cost you. Details about payments you'll have to make. Things like that. But that's not enough.

People not only need this Truth in Lending. They also need good advice in borrowing.

They need straight talk.

Straight Talk like you get at First & Merchants. You see, we have this philosophy that says if a loan isn't good for a customer, it isn't good for us, either. And the only way we can make sure a loan is going to be good for you is talk to you, straight from the shoulder. At least that's the best way we've found so far.

Then we'll work out loan terms that'll be best for you. And maybe start you on a security-building savings program at the same time.

First chance you get, drop by and talk to one of the Straight Talk People at F&M. Tell him about yourself. And where you want to go financially. He'll work out the best way for you to get there. He might even come up with some suggestions you'd never have thought of.

But whatever we suggest, remember the Straight Talk People might give you some food for thought. But never any baloney.

FIRST & MERCHANTS NATIONAL BANK
The Straight Talk People.

IF "MONEY TALK" SOUNDS LIKE A BUNCH OF BALONEY TO YOU,
YOU NEED STRAIGHT TALK.

Political Up roar

Howell and Etheridge Clash in Conflict Of Interest Matter

Democratic gubernatorial hopeful Norfolk State Sen. Henry E. Howell pushed aside all other political activity in Virginia Beach this week at the opening of his campaign headquarters here Monday night.

Howell said he had written to his opponent, William Battle, concerning the activities of one on Battle's key aides, Virginia Beach City Treasurer, V. A. Etheridge of conflict of interest in a real estate transaction in 1961. Howell produced a copy of a contract signed by Etheridge and on which the name of several well-known Norfolk and Virginia Beach real estate developers also appeared. The contract promised to pay Etheridge $5 for every lot in a development tract for which Etheridge could help secure valid titles.

The contract also states that Etheridge had already assisted in securing title to 5,662 lots as listed and shown on an exhibit. Howell said that figured out to more than $28,000. "And that ain't hay," he said.

Etheridge said before when the same issue was brought out in 1967 that all he had done was operate within a "clean-cut" business deal.

Howell said he was "asking Battle what he thought of this since Battle had expressed such an active interest in stronger conflict of interest legislation. Howell added that he did not think that a City Treasurer with a list of people who had paid taxes on property should be working with realtors and that constituted conflict of interest. Battle did not comment on the matter immediately.

Etheridge called Howell's accusations full of "half-truths and innuendos." He added that Howell was motivated politically in his charges. Etheridge went on to say the contract in question was never completed partly because the 5,662 lots was not correct, but he said he did not remember how many he had searched. Etheridge also said the work was done not for real estate developers but for a law firm, on his own time in the office of the Clerk of Courts. Clerk of Courts John Fentress said in the 1967 campaign that Etheridge should not have been in the office after hours and on weekends as Etheridge claimed.

Unbothered by it all, Howell continued to call on Battle for his opinion of what he called Etheridge's "hanky-panky."

In other political activity House of Delegates hopeful Bruce Murphy called upon all four candidates for Attorney General to give an opinion whether pari-mutuel betting is illegal in Virginia under present statutes. Murphy is an advocate of racing and pari-mutuel racing.

Richard Guy and B. R. Middleton continued during the week with charges and counter-charges of machine politics. Guy attacked Middleton's record in the House of Delegates, which Middleton defended. Middleton accused Guy of being part of the old Organization. Guy said there are 53 names on his committee, the most independent names of any on the race. Guy then accused Middleton of being part of the Etheridge political machine.

Wednesday night Guy started a new group, the "Teens for Guy" at his headquarters. He said the youthful group would help out in distributing literature and help in precinct work. Meanwhile Middleton and Adams called upon Murphy and Guy to say who they support in the gubernatorial race. Middleton and Adams actively support Battle. Both their opponents have said in the past they could work with any one of the three chosen in the primary and are limiting their campaigning to the House of Delegates race.

High Court Agrees To Review Conflict

The Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals has agreed to review a Virginia Beach conflict of interest case rejected earlier this year by the Virginia Beach Circuit Court.

No date has been set for hearing arguments in the case, now almost a year old, filed by Virginia Beach Commonwealth's Attorney Andre Evans. The case seeks to recover $215,479 from Richard S. Holland, because Evans says the sale of emergency equipment to the city by Holland's firm constituted conflict of interest. Holland then headed the now-defunct Police and Trial Board. Evans filed the suit last July 22.

The case was dismissed by Judge Robert S. Wahab on grounds that Evans had no legal right to bring the action, which he said must be initiated by the state comptroller under Virginia law.

In oral arguments on the appeal Evans told the high court it should resolve the issue. Although the court has agreed to hear the case, there is still some speculation that the matter may not be resolved fully until the 1970 session of the Virginia General Assembly meets.

The legislature is expected to draw a new conflict of interest law, based on recommendations.

Volunteers Tie with Paid Men

For the first time in the history of the SUN SURVEY, there is a tie. A large number of replies were received to last week's question, larger than usual in fact, and when they were tabulated exactly half voted "Yes", and half voted "No".

If the public opinion poll is any indication, last week's question, "Should the city take positive action toward establishing a fully paid municipal fire department, instead of relying mostly on volunteers, regardless of increased cost to the taxpayer and in light of shortage of volunteers at certain times of the day?", is far from settled.

One who replied in the affirmative added the comment, "...Will gladly pay the tax increase." But one who replied in the negative said "...The volunteers here are better than any paid fire department in any other place where I have lived."

While the public opinion poll does not profess to represent the thinking of all residents of Virginia Beach, it does represent the thinking of a cross section of those who took time to clip it and return it to us.

Your attention is called to this week's SUN SURVEY question also, which appears below in the box at the lower left corner of this page.

Each week a new question will appear and the results will be published the following week. The questions will be timely, and the more answers we receive the more responsible the opinion.

Two Drown Over Weekend

Two Kellam High School students drowned last weekend in unrelated tragedies in the city of Virginia Beach.

Another student, identified as Richard Shurtz, of Plaza Trail, reportedly discovered Lundy's body at the bottom of the pool a few moments after he was discovered missing about 2:30 a.m. Saturday morning.

Lundy reportedly was attending the party with an estimated 150 other persons following his graduation from Kellam Friday night.

The second drowning occurred shortly after 3:00 p.m. Sunday afternoon, when, according to officials, 15-year old Edward G. Lothes drowned in a borrow pit off Old Forge Road in the Windsor Woods section of the city.

Officials said Lothes was swimming with several companions when he showed signs of being in trouble. Although his companions went to his aid Lothes reportedly disappeared beneath the surface of the water before they could reach him. The body was recovered about 15 minutes later by members of the Princess Anne Plaza Volunteer Rescue Squad.

Lothes was also a student at Kellam High School where he had just completed the ninth grade.

Impact Fight Readied

Virginia Beach school officials are adopting a wait-and-see attitude concerning President Nixon's recent proposal to cut federal impact funds for the education of military dependents living off bases.

In what was considered a surprise move Nixon proposed to cut the funds drastically. The entire impact fund setup is under review by the federal government and no drastic change had been expected until the investigation was completed. In Virginia Beach alone, which should receive about $2.75 million, the largest amount in Tidewater, the funds would be reduced by $2.25 million to about $500,000. The only amount that would remain would be for education of dependents living on a military base.

School Superintendent E. E. Brickell said the move would be disastrous to Virginia Beach, since the funds had been budgeted already and had been expected in this time. He and other school officials of Virginia Beach and other cities to be affected are now working with legislators from Virginia in an effort to restore the funds.

(See 'Impact,' p. 2)

Rodgers Dismisses Vagrancy

Alvin L. Rodgers, Virginia Beach Chief Justice of the Peace, has instructed all J.P.s of the city to cease issuance of vagrancy warrants until further notice.

Rodgers said he took the action as the result of the recent dismissal of virtually all vagrancy charges on the dockets of Virginia Beach courts. This apparently stems from confusion over the validity of that section of the city code of Virginia Beach dealing with vagrancy.

The General Assembly in 1968 repealed that portion of the state code dealing with vagrancy, but Attorney General Robert Y. Sutton, on Feb. 12, 1969, ruled that in his opinion the Virginia Beach vagrancy ordinance was still enforceable. Sutton's opinion was in response to a request from Virginia Beach Commonwealth Attorney Andre Evans to clarify the status of vagrancy laws. Rodgers said he is hoping the next session of the General Assembly will settle this question on the vagrancy section of the Virginia Beach City Code.

City Council Hears Money Problems

Money problems continue to plague the city of Virginia Beach. City Council Monday heard several requests for financial aid and heard a note of caution about the rising money market.

The city's financial advisor, Lawrence Wales of Wheat & Co., noted that the municipal bond market is approaching the legal limit in Virginia. He said that the 20-bond index last week was 5.82 per cent. The state of Virginia limits municipalities from paying more than 6 per cent interest. In the past the city of Virginia Beach has consistently received bids on its bonds far below this rate, mostly about 4.5.

But Wales warned that the increasing interest rates could bring to an end the public works projects across Virginia. Many, such as several in Virginia Beach are paid for on short term notes. Virginia Beach has $1.5 million in such loans outstanding for sewer and water projects. The notes are due this fall. The issuance of future bonds for this purpose is in doubt because of the rising money market.

Wales did tell City Council in its informal session Monday that the city is in good financial shape in spite of the present economy. His discussion with Council was mostly for information purposes and no decisions were made on future arrangements at the meeting.

Commissioner of Revenue Ivan Mapp and several members of his staff then also discussed money with Council. Mapp said that nearly all of his employees are paid by state funds based on a scale set by the State Compensation Board. This scale is considerably below the one used for paying city employees. Mapp would like to see his employees subsidized by the city to bring about 29 persons in his office on a level with similar city positions.

Employees in the offices of all Constitutional officers are paid according to the state scale. A spokesman in Mapp's office said that the State Compensation Board might also help in the pay raise if the city goes along with it.

After a long discussion Council instructed City Manager Roger Scott to study the request. Next came representatives of a corporation which is preparing to build a $2 million motel in Virginia Beach. They too want city financial help.

Tommy Kyros, one of the principals of the S.S.S.R. Corp. which plans to build the 110-room, high-rise luxury motel, The Fountainhead between 6th and 7th Sts. on the oceanfront, gave a detailed report to Council in seeking the money.

He said that bids for the motel had exceeded original estimates by about $400,000, and that the corporation is trying to pare down the costs. One of the costs involved is the building of a bulkhead in front of the motel, as required for getting a loan. The bulkhead would have to be built on city property, but by the corporation. Kyros asked the city for $46,300 to build the bulkhead, which would, in effect, extend the boardwalk one block southward.

He said that the city subsidizes other industries by offering paved streets and utility connections, and asked that this aid be given to the resort industry. He pointed out the benefit to the city by extending the boardwalk also.

The bulkheading cost is holding up construction, according to principals. The motel was scheduled for a June 1 start and will be completed in about 11 months.

The corporation has already hired a manager for the motel and will spend about $30,000 in advertising during construction. Kyros said benefits to the city in taxes and licenses during the first year would be about $52,470 and about $36,000 the second year. He said he felt this more than justified the request for aid.

Council took the matter under advisement, and is expected to act on it next Monday.

Approximately $40,000 in public funds will also be needed if a sewer project is approved in Birdneck Point. The Cavalier Yacht and Country Club, now rebuilding and adding facilities, cannot by law have a septic tank or other private sewer. The only alternative is city sewers, not available to the area.

Not enough signatures have been gathered in the area to request the city to furnish the sewers, although there has been a considerable problem with septic tanks in the area, causing health problems.

The cost of running a line from Laskin Road to the club is estimated at $900,000, about $50,000 of which is expected to be recovered from the club and residents along Cardinal Rd., who would hook on to the line and pay a fee for this service. In the future other Birdneck residents would eventually pay the $40,000 back in hookup fees.

GOP to Pick Head

The Republican Party of Virginia Beach meets tonight to select a new city chairman to succeed John A. Field, III.

campaign manager last year, or Elbert L. Johnson, Jr., as the new chairman.

The Virginia Beach GOP almost did not have a place to hold its city convention to name nominees for the House of Delegates. City Manager Roger Scott earlier said the municipal courtroom would not be available for the scheduled July 12 convention, but has changed his mind.

The practice of using the courtrooms for city conventions of both major political parties or for other political meetings has been accepted for a number of years, and up until Scott's order last week there had been no notice of a change in policy.

Scott, in receding the order has put both parties on notice this will be the last such meeting there because they "...might tend to reduce the dignity of the court at its next session." Scott said he had discussed the matter with the judges and with City Council.

So far the GOP has only one announced candidate for the two available seats. He is Walter F. Schwieger, who announced his intentions of seeking the nomination two weeks ago. Others are expected to announce

Field resigned his position, effective July 1, to accept an appointment as assistant U. S. Attorney for the Eastern District of Virginia. The resignation had been expected for some time because of speculation of the appointment. He is also giving up his interest in a Norfolk law firm to accept the post. Tonight's meeting at 8 p.m. at Emmanuel Episcopal Church is expected to name either Jimmie Fant, who was the Nixon

Rain Dampens Governor's Day

Rain shortened the Governor's Day ceremonies of the Virginia National Guard at Camp Pendleton last Saturday, but the 2,250 guardsmen passed in review for Governor Mills E. Godwin anyway.

A few minutes before the scheduled start of the ceremonies a heavy rain shower swept across the State Military Installation filling the canvas above the reviewing stand to capacity. The stands were full of dignitaries and invited guests. Many were wet by the drooping canvas contents.

Then the Governor was late, also because of the weather. His state plane bringing him, his wife and official party from Miami, Fla. and a meeting of the Southern Regional Education Board which he had chaired for two days, could not land at NAS Oceana for about 45 minutes.

Finally the ceremonies began about a half hour late under threatening skies. The troops marched in and lined up. The low ceiling caused smoke from the 19-gun salute to engulf the troops for a few moments. Then the Governor and the National Guard Commander, Maj. Gen. Paul N. Booth, adjutant of Virginia, and other military dignitaries climbed aboard open reviewing jeeps for an inspection.

About half way through the inspection, another heavy shower sent military aides scurrying for umbrellas to greet the official party on their return. Spectators dodged the rain-swelled canvas again.

The rest of the program was cut, including the presentation of awards. Later at the luncheon the 90th Army Band of Roanoke received the Governor's Trophy for the sixth consecutive year.

A scheduled fly-by of F4 jets of the Virginia Air National Guard was also cancelled, as was a scheduled demonstration of aerial tactics by another Guard unit.

The General's reception for the Governor and invited guests went ahead as planned but with everyone huddled under tents.

The scheduled buffet lunch was served instead by an improvised serving crew of Guard officers and enlisted men. The band played through it all.

Almost as soon as it was over, the rain too ended.

Governor Godwin is helped from the reviewing Jeep and under an umbrella after the rains came during his review of National Guardsmen at Camp Pendleton Saturday.

Capt. Payne Graduates, Assumes Duties

Police Captain Charles H. Payne has assumed his new duties as Inspections Aide with the Virginia Beach police department following his graduation last Saturday from the Police Administration Training Program of the Traffic Institute at Northwestern University in Evanston, Illinois.

Payne graduated from the nine-month training program with a 91.28 average in the field of Police Management. The course included such subjects as law, personnel management, police department operations, sociology, semantics and budgeting.

While attending Northwestern University, Payne qualified for one of eight grants-in-aid of $2,300 each which were offered the class of 55 students by the Automotive Safety Foundation. During graduation services Payne was presented a gold key, symbolic emblem of completion of what has been described as one of the most demanding training programs in the field of law enforcement, by James M. Slavin, Director of the Traffic Institute.

Police Chief Col. W. W. Davis was in Evanston for the graduation ceremonies. The position which Capt. Payne now occupies is a new one within the administrative section of the police department, created by Davis. Payne will be concerned with coordination of the department's various phases of operation, thus acting as assistant to Davis in departmental planning, organization, financing, and personnel management.

Of the course he just completed, Payne said, "I think the course did a lot to prepare me for a job which is new to our department. Perhaps the biggest benefit to myself, and the department, was learning what other law enforcement officers think about solving problems which we may have, the solutions they've tried, and their evaluation of the overall results."

Magistrate Gilbert Swink because the government did not offer any evidence in the hearing.

He declined to comment further.

The Virginia Beach arrests came after Tom Eager, 19, notified agents of the bogus money and described the bills. The three arrested gave a local address of the Traymore Sea Colony.

Indications were the bogus $20 bills found in the trunk of the car stopped by investigators in Virginia Beach were manufactured in a printing plant located in Milwaukee, Wis. Federal Agents reportedly raided the plant early Sunday morning resulting in the confiscation of more than $850,000 in bogus bills in denominations of $5, $10, and $20, plus a set of plates and a printing press allegedly used in the manufacture of the counterfeit money.

Officials also said three residents of Milwaukee were arrested in connection with the case shortly after the raid.

Conflict

Sen. Harry F. Byrd has sharply criticized the Nixon Administration for the proposal and has vowed a fight to restore the funds. Byrd, always an advocate of fiscal economy, said that placing the burden on the localities instead of the federal government would be merely a transfer of the problem.

The matter is not expected to come to a vote in Congress immediately and many say they feel that most of the funds can be restored or that the Nixon proposal be beaten.

Last year President Johnson proposed a sharp cut, but was overruled by Congress.

Fire Chiefs To Meet On Budget

Fire Chiefs of the 12 volunteer fire departments of the city and of the paid fire department of the Virginia Beach borough will meet next Monday to begin preparation of a budget to finance equipment needs of the departments during the next five years.

The meeting, which will be held at the Princess Anne Plaza Volunteer Fire Dept. and Rescue Squad headquarters, is being held at the request of City Manager Roger Scott who earlier requested the appointment of a committee by the Virginia Beach Fire Council to study the financial needs of the various fire departments.

Fred Quist, chief of the Chesapeake Beach Volunteer Fire Dept. and Rescue Squad, has been appointed chairman of the committee. Quist said the meeting will likely be the first of several.

He said, "It will likely take about two or three months to complete the study, depending upon the number of meetings which can be held."

Rotary Club To Install

The Virginia Beach Rotary Club will hold its annual installation of officers banquet tonight at the Americana at 7 p.m. It is also ladies' night. The new officers will be installed by Harold Kellam, past Governor of District 760, Rotary International.

The new president of the organization is Dr. John J. Krueger. Other officers are: B. H. Bridges, Jr., vice president; William H. Brown, secretary; R. Dean Lee, treasurer; Dr. John Waller, A. B. Midgett and Adam Orgera, directors; and the immediate past president, Dr. James N. Williams, ex officio director.

NARCE To Meet

NARCE Virginia Beach Chapter no. 974 will meet on June 26, 2 p.m. at St. Francis Episcopal Church on Rosemont Road.

There will be a speaker.

Winners of the 1968 Music Festival, the Davenport-West High School Band, at the opening ceremonies concert for the 1969 Music Festival. They gave the concert June 16 at the Civic Center.

Band Festival Ends Tonight

The 1969 Band Festival continues in spite of the bad weather that has plagued the affair and upset some of the planned activities.

Events such as the Monday's Opening Ceremonies had to be moved. The ceremonies were originally scheduled for First Colonial High School stadium, but the threat of rain caused the ceremonies to be held at the Civic Center.

Luckily the weather cleared up and the Grand Festival Parade went on as scheduled Monday night.

The 22 high school bands finish the four day Festival today with the Closing Program and Awards Ceremony, beginning tonight at 8 p.m. The public is invited to attend this event, which will be held at First Colonial High School Stadium. Participating in the program are last year's Festival winners, the Davenport-West High School Band of Davenport, Iowa.

and the School of Music Navy Show Band.

Princess Anne High School

Band, directed by Ronald J. Collins, has served as host band for the Festival this year.

Hospital Fund Drive Headquarters Opened

Officials of the General Hospital of Virginia Beach have announced the opening of a headquarters office in their current drive to raise $1 million in public contributions towards the financing of the hospital's expansion program.

The office is located in the former hospital annex at 25th Street and Arctic Avenue. Anyone desiring further information on the fund drive is invited to phone 425-9444.

Fund drive officials say that hospital board members, doctors, and other staff members have already pledged some $250,000 towards the drive.

The overall cost of the expansion program is estimated at $3.6 million, and the hospital officials indicate plans to borrow $2.5 million.

Hospital officials earlier said their request for Hill-Burton federal funds to finance the project had been denied.

Council is also expected Monday to give formal approval to a resolution which could someday cost the city about $6 million, but city officials will be looking to state and other aid in the meantime to defray part of that.

A special City Council committee has given approval to a $17 million U.S. Army Corps of Engineers planned project to raise the level of the oceanfront beach and widen the beach considerably from Rude's Inlet to Fort Story. The federal government would bear about $10.5 million of the project over a period of years if approved by Congress, to guard against erosion and storm damage. The engineers asked for city endorsement before sending the plans to a higher headquarters. A public hearing is also scheduled at 2 p.m., Friday, June 27 at the Dome on the matter. The city resolution does not actually promise any funds at this time, it only gave endorsement of the plan.

Scouts Make Mountain Trek

Forty-five PAVAB District Explorer and Senior Scouts and eight adult scout workers returned last night from a "Boots and Paddle Mountain Trek." The Trek began June 14 and was held in Shenandoah National Park. It included a 40-mile white water canoe trip on the Shenandoah River from Elkton to Luray to Front Royal and a 20-mile back-packing trek between Luray and "Big Meadows."

TAHB Will Hold Groundbreaking

The Tidewater Association of Homebuilders has set groundbreaking ceremonies for its new headquarters building for 3:30 p.m., Monday, June 23. The building will be located at the association's present site at 5665 Virginia Beach Blvd. in Norfolk. Realtors representing the four Tidewater cities will be on hand. The Mayors of the four cities are also expected to attend, as well as a number of Tidewater public officials.

Jack Knoop Joins Firm

Jack Knoop of Virginia Beach has joined Capital Advertising, Inc. as Account Executive.

William P. Gaspar, President, who made the announcement, stated, "The rapid and extensive growth of our agency warrants the addition of another professional to our staff."

A retired Navy Commander, former business editor of the Armed Forces Newspaper Corp. and commercial artist at the American Museum of Natural History in N.Y. City, he brings to Capital a highly qualified background in advertising, journalism, commercial art and photography.

School Board Seeks Lawyer

After considering two alternative plans the Virginia Beach School Board decided Tuesday to hire a lawyer for the city attorney's office to work on School Board legal matters.

The plans were presented by City Attorney Harry Marshall, who said that his office could not give enough attention to school problems. Marshall also said that although it is the city's responsibility to represent the Board in legal matters, his next fiscal budget does not have the money to hire the lawyer. He stated that he will ask for such funds in the next budget.

The alternative plans suggested by Marshall involved either hiring a private firm on a retainer basis or hiring an attorney to work directly under the School Board, which would involve equipping an office and legal library at the expense of the Board. Under the plan adopted by the Board the attorney hired by them will work in the city attorney's office, agreeing to give first priority to school matters.

The Board voted to allocate $12,000 of the school budget for the lawyer. An objection to the Board's action was raised by Board member James L. Kitchen. Kitchen said the Board would "be behind the eightball."

Cavalier's 'Cactus Flower' Is Fast-Paced, Funny Production

The present bill of fare at Cavalier Dinner Playhouse, "Cactus Flower", by Abe Burrows, is a very funny, highly improbable comedy. But the way it is mounted on the Cavalier stage makes it a memorable evening in the theatre.

Despite long scene changes (13 of them) the production is fast-paced, beautifully directed by G. F. Rowe to get the absolute most from the situation and well-acted by a cast which works together in harmony.

The plot deals with a 35-ish dentist who tells his wealthy young mistress-girlfriend he is married (he isn't) to avoid getting married to her. When she decides to end it all in more ways than one, he decides to marry her. She insists on meeting the wife he says he'll divorce. He provides his computer-type nurse-secretary, whom it turns out is in love with him all along. Her development from computer to uninhibited contender, from cactus to cactus flower, consumes the rest of the action.

The professional performance of Barbara Ellberg as the computer is highly restrained. And it's a good thing. She walks away with the show as it is. Her comedy timing is magnificent to watch and hear. Tom Matthews is too young to play the dentist to perfection, but does a workmanlike job.

Lynda Clark is remarkably sweet and innocent as the young girlfriend, and provides a refreshing characterization.

Jack Weisman, as the dentist's lady-killer friend, is very funny and handles the role well.

But it is left to Vi Ragan, as one of the dentist's patients, and Hank Mauro as an again Latin lover, to add the icing on the cake in some hilarious and well-acted cameo roles.

Bentley Anderson, as the Bohemian who lives next to the young mistress, is not terribly consistent in characterization, but is technically convincing. The cast is complete by a brief appearance of Phyllis Guinazzo, as a friend of the lady-killer.

Jan Ewing's sets are intricate and well-planned, as well as good looking.

The production is one which wins the audience over early and never loses them. HJL

Wesleyan Wins Approval

The State Council of Higher Education has granted provisional approval to Virginia Wesleyan College to confer the baccalaureate degree in June 1970.

According to Dr. Prince B. Woodard, director of the State Council, Virginia Wesleyan is the first college to receive such approval since the State Council of Higher Education took over the responsibilities for state accreditation of educational institutions from the State Board of Education.

"Provisional approval," according to Dr. Woodard, "is granted to a four-year institution which has not had time to put into effect a full four-year program, but which has met in a satisfactory manner all requirements for its stage

Mini-bikes Stolen

Police recovered a mini-bike stolen from the London Bridge firm of Aldridge and Chambers, Inc., last Friday night only to have the same mini-bike stolen again during another break-in at the same firm Wednesday morning. Authorities said thieves also made off with two other mini-bikes during the Wednesday break-in, which raises to four the total number of mini-bikes taken from the firm. Authorities are requesting anyone approached in an unusual-type sale of mini-bikes to contact police officials. The missing mini-bikes were manufactured by the Fox Company and are all brand new. The colors of each of the missing bikes were listed as being blue, yellow, orange and white, and blue and white.

Two Injured

Hospital officials Wednesday listed Glenn Fann, of Norfolk, in critical condition under intensive medical care after being injured in an accident on Sandbridge Road Monday night. Fann, 19, reportedly received head injuries when his auto skidded off the road and flipped over in a ditch pinning him beneath the wreckage of the car. A passenger in the auto, identified by police as 18-year old Allen Bishop, of Chesapeake, was listed in serious condition from internal injuries received in the accident.

Father Killed

The father of 18-year-old Randolph Silvers was fatally injured in an Eastern Shore accident last Thursday morning while returning to Virginia Beach for his son's graduation from Bayside High School. According to police investigators, 39-year-old William J. Silvers, Sr., was killed when his auto left the highway and slammed into a utility pole in Nassawadox. Silvers had just completed 22 years service with the U.S. Navy and was returning from New Jersey, where he contemplated going into business, at the time of the accident.

Charges Dismissed

Municipal Court Judge P. B. White last Friday dismissed

charges against two 19-year old defendants charged by police with possession of marijuana. White made the ruling on grounds the prosecution failed to produce sufficient evidence that Glenn E. Miller and Dennis P. Stewart had exclusive possession of the marijuana. Police investigators said the drugs were discovered May 13 in an auto being driven by Stewart at the time. Defense attorney's argued that the drugs could have been placed in the auto by hitchhikers, and there was no evidence to prove the drugs were the property of the defendants.

Woman Electrocuted

A Freedom, Pa., woman was accidentally electrocuted last Saturday while camping with her family at Sandbridge. According to investigators Mrs. Barbara E. Ralston apparently received an electrical shock when she touched the doorknob of her camping trailer while still wearing a wet bathing suit. Joseph Ralston, her husband, said he received a mild shock when he placed a key in the lock of the trailer when the family returned to the North Bay Shore camp on Colechester Road after swimming.

Residents File Petition

Members of the Birdneck Point Community league have filed a petition in Circuit Court, requesting overruling of the May 12 City Council approval to the Birdneck Point residential region. Residents are seeking legal blocking of plans by the Linkhorn Land Corp. to build a 60-unit motel at that location. The City Planning Commission earlier recommended denial of the corporation's application to construct a motel on the site in question.

"Golden Years"

The Golden Years Club will hold a meeting June 26, 11 a.m., at First Presbyterian Church on 36th Street and Pacific Ave. The club is sponsored by the Virginia Beach Department of Parks and Recreation. For further information call 497-4884.

L. Ray Meekins, left, receives the squadsman of the year award from past captain C. T. Dickson. The award was presented at the Virginia Beach Rescue Squad installation banquet.

Rescue Squad Holds Installation

The Virginia Beach Rescue Squad installed active and advisory officers at a banquet held June 14 at the Cavalier Hotel.

The highlight of the banquet was the presentation of the squadsman of the year award to L. Ray Meekins. Meekins was honored for his tremendous contributions to the squad and its activities. He answered 223 rescue calls in the past year and spent countless hours of his time performing his duties as squad sergeant. He also qualified as a Red Cross instructor, and during the past year devoted many hours to the instructing of civilian and military personnel in the Virginia Beach area in standard and advanced first aid courses.

Advisory officers installed were: Dr. W. A. Dickinson Jr., president; J. R. McKenry, vice president; J. F. Gallagher, legal advisor; Dr. N. Turner Gray, medical advisor; Dr. F. J. O'Connor Jr., medical advisor; Dr. R. W. Waddell, medical advisor; Dr. J. J. Charlton, trustee; R. B. Pulley, trustee; and B. T. Murphy, trustee. Elected active officers for the 1969-70 year are: R. A. Langhorne, captain; D. W. Owens, first lieutenant; L. R. Meekins, second lieutenant; J. W. Dickson, plans and training officer; J. E. Brammer, sergeant; F. W. Twyman, secretary; L. O. Clark III, treasurer; J. A. Trinder, public relations officer; and G. A. Causer, chaplain.

The Virginia Beach Rescue Squad will hold its annual fund raising drive during the month of August. During this time residents of Virginia Beach Borough and Lynnhaven Borough which are served by the squad are solicited for contributions.

Last year members of the Rescue Squad answered a total of 2,222 calls during the year.

SAM to Check Service

A new plan to measure what customers think about their telephone service is being introduced on July 1 in Virginia Beach, according to an announcement by L. Floyd Patrick local manager of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company of Virginia.

The new Service Attitude Measurement plan, known as SAM, is designed to have telephone customers tell the telephone company how they feel about their service in order that the company can insure its customers that they receive the kind of service they want. SAM is designed to furnish the company with pertinent, current information that will supplement internal measurements designed to keep telephone service at a high quality level.

Each month, a representative number of questionnaires will be obtained from customers who have had a recent contact with their local telephone business office. In like manner, questionnaires will be secured from those who have had telephone work done on their premises and from those who have had occasion to have repair work done. Questionnaires will also be obtained each month from a cross-section of customers to determine their experience with long distance, information, billing, public telephones, telephone directories and other matters concerning communications facilities.

Information developed will be used to help mold telephone service into the kind of service that customers want.

Impact Problems—Again

For the past several years Virginia Beach and other similar localities throughout the United States have been forced to fight long and hard through Congressmen and Senators to continue receiving their fair share of federal impact funds.

Now the most serious threat ever posed to that all-important program comes from the Nixon Administration, which proposes virtually to do away with the program. The loss of nearly $3 million for the education of military dependents in Virginia Beach would seriously cripple the School Board and the city budget.

The impact program is 15 years old and has proved its worth. It is not a giveaway situation where the city reaps a financial windfall. Quite the contrary, it is a necessity in the education of those from whom the city collects little other revenue. To do away with the program now, when this city and all others are feeling the pinch of a runaway economy and when the funds are more desperately needed than ever before, only transfers the problem from the federal government to the city government.

The entire situation is supposed to be under federal study, but in the meantime the funds are expected and have been taken into account in budgets. To cut off this source of revenue would be the worst mistake the Nixon forces have made so far.

Virginia's Senators and Congressmen have before fought a winning fight to retain the funds. They are now waging a new battle. Hopefully they will win again. But what a shame we have to fight so hard every year for the funds that are so needed and are really our own in the first place.

Tragic Lessons

Two more drownings over the weekend in Virginia Beach have focused sharp attention on the need for more water safety, particularly in a city where water is such an integral part of our lives.

But these two drownings came where they should not have happened . . . one in a private swimming pool at a large party and the other in a borrow pit where one is not supposed to swim.

Carelessness and failing to heed the precepts of good common sense are responsible for more such accidents and near accidents than would seem possible. And the bulk of them occur just at the beginning of the summer season when the rush for fun is treated with too much abandon.

Let us only hope that these lives lost will serve new safety lessons for all of us.

Investigation, Please

The most recent conflict of interest charges hurled at City Treasurer V. A. "Jack" Etheridge by gubernatorial hopeful Norfolk Sen. Henry Howell are still unresolved.

Howell charged that Etheridge received a considerable sum of money for title search work done for real estate developers, using records available to him because of his high office, and that he signed a contract with these developers for much more.

Etheridge claims he was merely moonlighting to educate his children, using records of the clerk's office, all a matter of public record. He also says the contract was never fully executed, but he does not deny receiving the large sum of money. The Clerk of Circuit Court says Etheridge had no business in that office at night or on weekends, the times Etheridge said he did the work.

This same matter came up in the election campaign of 1967, and has now been raised while Etheridge is a key campaign manager for William Battle's gubernatorial aspirations. Battle advocates strong conflict legislation; thus Howell's questions as to the conflict propriety of one of his key aides. This charge is only one of several that have been rumored about Mr. Etheridge's affairs, financial and otherwise, in recent years, and which have never been resolved.

It would seem that if the Treasurer would like to stop these recurring rumors and charges he should call for a complete investigation of all of them to clear his name and to keep any clouds of doubt from surrounding him, his office or his association with candidates or high officeholders.

Up, Up and Away

You may have noticed that little green slip in your telephone bill recently informing us about the utility tax increase imposed by the city of Virginia Beach on June 1. The cost of the other utilities also increased on that date because of that tax hike.

And don't forget those mortgage payments will be going up on July 1 because of the new real estate appraisals. For you smokers who have not heeded the health warnings, cigarettes are also going up because of an additional city tax.

Actually it's been quite a race. It's still doubtful which will get to the moon first. . . astronauts or taxes.

Mt. Trashmore

Editor, VIRGINIA BEACH SUN:

Your story of Mt. Trashmore on page 2 of the June 5 issue has a sequel. Since around 1820 or 1825 the City of Charleston, S.C. has been engaged in a similar landfill operation. They have filled in about 1500 acres of mud flat, let the trash set for 7 to 10 years before re-leveling it and selling the building lots.

This has disposed of the city's trash at a profit for 140 or 150 years, and there are enough mud flats left in Charleston County to last them until around 2075.

The profit from sale of lots has paid all costs of trash collection, and about one-quarter to one-half of other city operation costs. In Charleston the tin cans buried in the landfill all seem to rust out in 10 years or less, and there has never been any serious settlement in any area that was allowed to set for 10 years before it was re-leveled and sold.

And there is an indirect benefit: as mud flat the land brings in little tax money; as building lots it brings in instant money and steady revenue as property taxes. In Charleston they piled the trash to 60 feet above sea level, and after the cans had rusted out, etc., the finished yards of the houses were about 40 feet above sea level. At least that is how they did around 1940 when I was there.

Special Report

What Is 'Hanky-Panky'?

The pace of all campaigns is quickening considerably as June draws on. This is evident not only in the statewide contests, but also in the House of Delegates races locally.

In Virginia Beach the only Democratic gubernatorial candidate who showed up in the last little while is Henry Howell, a Henry-come-lately to the city. He opened his headquarters, ironically enough on Kellam Rd., on the first anniversary on the campaign trail trying to keep the big boys honest.

The big boy he tackled at the opening was City Treasurer Jack Etheridge. He accused Etheridge of a little "hanky-panky" conflict of interest in working for some real estate developers searching titles using city records.

Etheridge, hurt by such accusations, said he was just moonlighting to educate his children. He never said "how much money he received, but Howell said a signed contract he had showed he would have collected at least $28,500, and most likely more. . . certainly a good start on the education of children.

Etheridge says the contract was never consummated, and also denies any wrongdoing. So the matter remains up in the air. All this got into the gubernatorial campaign because Howell wrote to William Battle, asking him what he thinks of one of his key aides, (Etheridge) doing all this, while he (Battle) advocates strong conflict of interest legislation. Battle was slow in replying.

Meanwhile last weekend Battle, Howell and Pollard appeared together at a seminar of the Virginia Press Association. Howell continued to jibe Battle about his poll which he said was paid for by a soft drink company. Battle emphatically denied this, but Howell produced the last question which allegedly asked which of two major soft drinks the consumer preferred.

Just what all this has to do with being Governor of Virginia is not known, unless there are some plans afoot to serve one or the other on Inauguration Day.

Now Fred Pollard, steering clear of the Battle-Howell clashes, says he's running out in front, and he continues to run hard to prove it.

Locally the B. R. Middleton-Rae-Adams ticket is picking up much steam. The number of releases from them has picked up considerably. So have the accusations against their opponents.

Independents Richard Guy and Bruce Murphy, both of whom have said they could work with any one of the three who wins the gubernatorial nomination, are being pressed by Adams and Middleton to line up with somebody, since they've already lined up with Battle. That was almost a must, since Etheridge put together the ticket and is so high in the Battle organization himself.

Incidentally since last week Murphy has started sending his releases in white envelopes with his picture on them in Irish green. Seems the printer took a long time to get them finished. Concerning a report last week that Murphy was against an office of consumer protection, he says he is not, but he is against such an office being under the Attorney General, as Adams has proposed.

While Middleton and Adams obviously have a finely-honed precinct organization working for them, Murphy and Guy keep turning up on the same platform with them with great regularity, thanks to a public that wants to be informed by all.

That public was confused rather badly by one newspaper ad which appeared for Middleton and Adams. The names of Etheridge, Andre Evans and Middleton's names did appear in large type, but the uninformed could never be able to tell which one was running for what. The informed reader thought he was in the twilight zone and the Etheridge-United Forces were doing a replay of the 1967 campaign. And nobody needs that again.

SPOTS

By H. Joseph Lowenthal, Jr.

"Yes, it certainly is nice having you home again," he said. "I didn't realize just how much things changed while you were teaching."
"Why, thank you," she said. "It's nice to know you appreciate me."
"Of course I do," he said. "I knew you were back and the maid was gone this very morning when I opened the drawer and couldn't find any socks to wear."
"They're all dirty," she said. "You wear too many socks."
"Only two a day," he said. "And the maid always saw to it I had clean socks. Most of the time the two she made a pair of didn't match, but they never do when you do it either."

"All right, you've made your point," she said. "I'll wash your socks tonight, and put them in the dryer before I go to bed. You can find them there in the morning."
"The maid always put them in the sock drawer," he said. "One more comment about the maid and I'll sock it to you," she pointed out.
"All right," he said. "But will you also do some underwear for me too. There was only one set left clean this morning. And the maid . . . Well forget it."

"Why must you wear so much underwear?" she asked. "I only wear the amount required by propriety and comfort," he said.

"But aren't you at least glad I'm home when you get to the dinner table?" she asked. "I've started cooking good meals again, haven't I?"

"I have to admit that," he said. "But I can't eat them. In the four days you've been cooking big meals again, I've gained four pounds."

"At last," she said. "I've found my place in life. You have just admitted that I'm a good cook, whether you realize it or not."

"Okay, I admit it," he said. "But your being a good cook won't pay the bills. So I guess I can go on a diet in September when you go back to teaching."

"Who says I'm going back?" she asked.

"The mortgage payments, the car payments, the payments on the clothes you bought so you would look nice in school this year . . .," he said. "Want to hear more?"

"No, that's all right," she said. "I guess I'm going back in September."

"Incidentally I had trouble getting the car in the garage this evening," he said. "All the kids' toys must have been in the way. When the maid was here . . ."

"I told you not to say that again," she said. "Besides I can't do everything. I was too busy fixing you a good meal."

"Thanks," he said. "I'll remember that the next time I try to get in the garage around two bikes, a stroller and a rocking horse."

"I don't think you're being fair," she said. "After all I have to get back in the routine after being used to the maid doing everything."

"Now you mentioned her," he was quick to point out. "Is that all right?"

She ignored him. "Don't you worry," she said. "I'll get around to doing everything I used to do before I started teaching."

"Including putting off doing all the ironing until it takes over the walk-in closet?" he asked. "Seems to me that was why you went to teach in the first place. So we could afford to pay someone to do the ironing that was piled up."

"I don't remember the ironing being that bad. Was it?"

"He ignored her. "You know we've got our guests coming this weekend," he said. "Don't forget to change the linen in the guest room."

"I wish the maid were back," she said.

"You mentioned her again," he said.

"Would you please vacuum the guest room for me then?" she asked. "I'm too tired from trying to organize all this."

"I wish the maid were back," he said under his breath.

THE GREAT AMERICAN DREAM

by L. Charles Burlage

The foremost question confronting Richard Nixon as he accustoms himself to the presidency is Vietnam. The country is more divided over this war, than any one since the Civil War. In bombing "selected targets" in North Vietnam we found that it took more than planes and bombs to subdue the Viet Cong. At the same time, a substantial portion of our population is violently opposed to an escalation of any sort in this war, and in fact, are insisting on de-escalation. We are told that if we bomb Hanoi or Haiphong we may hit Russian ships and precipitate World War III, or bring Red China into the conflict.

As of the date of this writing, the war is being fought in the South, while we are not bombing or fighting in the North. It appears that to "win" we will not only have to bomb all military targets in the North, but actually send an invading land army there as we did in Korea. This would almost certainly bring Red China into the conflict. At that point, we would be engaged in a full-scale land war in Asia which is the very situation General MacArthur warned President Johnson against before he died. It appears that our only policy at present is to remain in the South and let our young men die and be wounded.

There is a strong argument that in reality Vietnam is a Civil War much like our own Civil War, and that we have no right to interfere in the internal affairs of another country. Another part of the conflict is the religious difference between the Catholics and the Buddhists. The government of South Vietnam does not appear to be popular with the people of South Vietnam and it further appears to be riddled with corruption.

There also appears to be a serious question as to whether or not the Gulf of Tonkin incident was not deliberately staged in order to further escalate the war. In any event, our country is completely confused, divided and frustrated over a war we cannot win, except at the risk of starting World War III. Meanwhile, inflation has created a serious economic problem at home.

Time is on the side of democracy and freedom and not on the side of Communism and tyranny as Khrushchev stated. This means that if we act with restraint and keep from blowing up each other in the future man could well work out his political differences. DeGaulle of France, with considerable experience in Indo China, found his country similarly involved in Algeria. Against the advice of his generals he pulled French troops out of Algeria. Today, France is stronger economically in Algeria than it ever was.

It is a painful conclusion, but America should pull out of Vietnam. This would frighten Russia because this action would free Red China to argue further with Russia about territorial differences. Vietnam is also afraid of Red China and does not want Chinese troops on its soil. The alternative seems to be a financially ruined and divided United States with a never ending number of killed and wounded Americans. It is impossible for America to police the world; each nation is going to have to fight for its own freedom; our nation cannot continue to furnish it for the whole world at the cost of the lives of young Americans.

'Black Comedy' Is Fine Innovation

Lake Wright Playhouse is presenting an excellent production of the theatre innovation, "Black Comedy" by Peter Shaffer.

Despite some slow moments in the early part of the production while the plot is being unfolded, the short play is cleverly directed by Timothy Jones. In fact, without the rather intricate movements he provides his cast with throughout the play, it would really end up being a bore.

The plot itself is only secondary to the movement. As the action begins the stage is in total darkness. A starving, but cunning sculptor and his weak-brained debutant girlfriend move about the stage freely talking about the impending visit by her rich father and a richer art lover coming to see the artist's works. They speak of colors, but the audience sees nothing. Only when use of the record player blows the main fuse in the apartment house is the stage bathed in light. Then the actors begin to grope, as in darkness.

At all times they maintain the illusion of darkness, and the only time they can see at all is when a candle or flashlight is lit, darkening the stage partially.

Ken McGon does a nice job as the sculptor. His mugging and groping in the dark are outstanding. His inability to see is totally believable.

Elektra Lobel is pleasing as the debutante. She is very convincing as the brain-lacking, trusting soul.

Phyllis Black is pleasing to look at and is very sophisticated as the former girlfriend who returns in the dark and is recognized instantly by touch.

James Cade is thoroughly boorish, as he should be, as the military father of the deb.

Jane Garrison, as a spinster neighbor and daughter of a minister, who mistakes the gin bottle for bitter lemon in the dark, provides some of the high moments of the production.

But without the talents of Gonzalo Madurga, as the campy neighbor across the hall, the production would not be half so refreshing. He is very funny and very consistent.

Oliver Lewis provides a nice bit as the intellectual electric company repairman.

Michael May is badly miscast as the rich art lover. He is a young man, far too young for the role, but it does not detract too badly, since he is only on stage a few moments.

The entire production provides an interesting experience, and is well worth seeing. HJL.

Cdr. Hope Takes Command

Command of Attack Squadron 85 changed hands last week when Cmdr. Herbert A. Hope Jr. relieved Cmdr. Charles B. Hunter in ceremonies aboard the Naval Air Station at Oceana.

Cdr. Hunter will leave the squadron to assume duties as the A&A (Intruder) Program coordinator for the Chief of Naval Operations in Washington, D. C. During his tenure as Commanding Officer, Attack Squadron Eighty-Five completed its third consecutive combat cruise to the Western Pacific and is presently preparing for a fourth one.

Cdr. Hope has been serving as the squadron's Executive Officer since his arrival in September of 1968. Among other accomplishments, he was awarded the Navy Commendation Medal for heroic action during the tragic fire aboard the USS Forrestal in 1967.

Vice Adm. Robert B. Pirie, guest speaker at the ceremony, retired from the Navy in 1962. His last tour of duty was as Deputy Chief of Naval Operations for Air. Cdr. Hunter served as his Aide at that time.

Student Wins

Timothy Wright of Union Kempsville High School has captured first prize for Virginia in the eighth annual "Q-Tips" Art Awards competition conducted in junior and senior high schools throughout the country by Chesapeake-Popd's Inc.

Wright, who lives at Weldon Street, will now be entered in the final judging and is eligible for one of the three top awards in the 1969 "Q-Tips" Art Awards competition. First prize is $500, Second, $250, and Third, $100.

A veteran of 23 years in the Navy, he is married to the former Joan Vickers. They have eight children.

This Young Man Is Involved

Whitley, who is only 25 years old, has held this position for almost two years. He moved here from Norfolk where he graduated from Maury High School and attended Old Dominion College. Prior to his present job Whitley worked three years as an account executive for The Virginian-Pilot and one year as assistant advertising manager for the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN.

Whitley and his wife, the former Carol Collins, have been residents of Virginia Beach for three years. They live with their one-year-old daughter in the Bow Creek area of the city.

Active in civic affairs, Whitley is an officer and on the board of directors of the Virginia Beach Sports Club. He is also an assistant district commissioner of the boy scouts and a member of First Presbyterian Church.

Sports of all kinds interest Whitley. He plays tennis at least once a week, and he also plays volleyball and "Flag League" football. He says that football is his favorite sport, however. Last year he drove 1,000 miles to see the Super Bowl game, spent one night, and drove back the next day.

Travel is nothing new to him. In fact, it is one of the aspects he enjoys most about his job. He says there is about one month per year involved, "just enough to make it exciting... not too much, not too little." The traveling he does for the Chamber of Commerce takes him all over the country telling of the virtues of Virginia Beach.

This year he has already been to New York, Cleveland and Cincinnati, spending a week in each place. While he was there he visited travel shows, travel agencies and newspapers.

Whitley describes the Chamber as "An organization, made up of businesses, that are dedicated to making Virginia Beach's business community prosper and grow."

The various committees that are organized under the Chamber are coordinated by Whitley. Some of the committees Whitley works with are the Agriculture Committee, which sponsors the annual Virginia Beach-Chesapeake Junior Steer Show, and the Contact Club, made up of volunteer members of the Chamber who seek to enlarge the Chamber of Commerce membership.

In addition to the committees Whitley also coordinates special events such as the Music Festival, Children's Week and the Track Meet which was held here last weekend.

Since Whitley has been with the Chamber of Commerce he has started the monthly publication, "The Lighthouse," which is sent to each member. He also speaks to civic clubs and organizations on the Chamber of Commerce's work.

Whitley has nothing but praise for his job. "It's something different everyday... things get hectic when it's time for the events, but everyone in the office works well together."

He also says that he gets to meet a lot of interesting people. He recently had an opportunity to meet all kinds of interesting people -- the Chamber of Commerce had to find lodging for over 700 people during Memorial Day weekend; people who had come here with no reservations. The Chamber placed them all.

Whitley predicts a bright future for the Virginia Beach tourist industry. "Last year business was up 34% and by all indications this summer promises to be the best we've ever had." He says inquiries are 10,000 above what they were at this time last year.

The city itself has captured Whitley's admiration. He commented, "When I left Norfolk I was somewhat depressed, but then I came here and saw how fast the city was growing, and the people that were making it grow, and I think it's the best city in the world now... The progress is overwhelming... it is a young city where a young man can really get involved... things are happening all around."

He is right. And it is the young men like him here who are optimistic and eager to advance progress that make things happen all around.

State Parks Have New Image

Virginia's state parks have a new image--not the opinion kind of image but a symbol the Division of Parks has adopted.

The new "trademark" will be used in all state parks and other areas operated by the Division. It is now being attached to trucks, and park personnel will wear it on uniforms. Other uses include signs, informational literature, and nature interpretation leaflets.

Designed for easy identification, the round symbol shows a mountain and body of water emphasized by a double row of symmetrical waves. The name Virginia State Parks follows the top curve in bold letters. The standout feature is a stylized eight-point star at the center, resembling a geographical compass.

Three colors are used, with the mountain shown in green and two shades of blue representing the water. The lettering and compass are colored yellow, and a yellow border circles the design. The sky above the mountain is light blue.

"You can interpret the symbol both in literal and figurative senses," said Ben H. Bolen, Virginia's Commissioner of Parks.

"The lush green land and sparkling blue water stand for the scenic beauty of our parks from Southwest Virginia to the seashore," Bolen explained. "They represent the vast outdoor setting for recreation which state parks offer in an atmosphere that is clean and clear. After all, Virginia's sky is blue most of the time."

The compass may be interpreted several ways. For one thing, it depicts the scattering of parks in all directions of the state. The prominence of the star also represents the growing importance of vacation travel in Virginia and--from the Division's standpoint--state parks as the destination.

The green lines dividing the compass into several parts can also mean that Virginia's park system is made up of individual units tied closely together.

"Everyone looking at the emblem might get a little different shade of meaning," the commissioner said. "But that is appropriate, because parks mean many things to different people. So whatever interpretation you want to give it is all right."

BADGES & BANTER

By Les Lehigh

Four men of the Virginia Beach police department are undergoing training in the Central Police Training School at State Police Headquarters in Richmond, and four others have just returned to duty on their successful completion of the course. Those in training now include patrolmen S. F. Bennett, M. O. Palmer, W. W. Taylor, and G. T. White. The most recent graduates of the course include Det. D. C. Watson and patrolmen G. L. Bryon, D. L. Rinick, and J. D. Kersey. Watson had the dubious honor of graduating on crutches, after he reportedly broke an ankle during a class basketball game a few days prior to graduation.

A. C. LeBlanc has assumed duties as Acting Chief of the Princess Anne Plaza Volunteer Fire Dept. LeBlanc will be serving during the absence of Chief Bert Witham who is on leave of absence to fulfill an assignment with the U. S. Navy deployment to the Caribbean. Congratulations to police Youth Division Det. E. R. White and his wife Patricia on the arrival of their second daughter, which took place last Friday. Miss Edith Louise White weighed in at 8 pounds 3 ounces on her arrival. We understand the entire White family is doing fine.

Men of the Chesapeake Volunteer Fire Dept. and Rescue Squad are engaged in making repairs to the department's amphibious DUKW. Chief Fred Quist says the DUKW encountered operational difficulties while on a mission about two miles off shore last Sunday. The DUKW should be back in service by this weekend.

The topic of conversation around Central Services Division in police headquarters at Princess Anne Courthouse is which one of the 43 law college students serving as Summer Police Officers in Virginia Beach has caught the eye of a certain young lady employed in the Division.

Lt. C. R. Bailey, attached to 3rd Police Precinct, emerged victorious from a field of 71 contestants in the annual Tide-water Police Golf Tournament. The tournament involved officers from local, state and federal law enforcement agencies. Although the tournament was held last Friday at the Kempsville golf course, Bailey said he was kept in suspense over the outcome of the competition until a tournament official walked into the precinct building Monday and presented him with a half-dozen golf balls as his prize for scoring the highest number of bogeys in the 18 hole play-off. Bailey says he feels he is now ready to issue a challenge to the special attention of Lt. E. L. Knowles, and Sgt. D. Creelman, Jr., and C. R. West for an 18 hole rematch. Bailey added, however, he feels anyone responding to the challenge should spend some time practicing in order to adequately face the strain of competition.

Seaside Season Begun

Seaside Amusement Park has begun its fifth season of Teenage Dance Nights at its Frolics Room dance pavilion, the longest running activity of its kind at the resort city.

The park reserves Monday and Wednesday nights each week for teen dancing to live music from 8 P.M. to Midnight. Only soft drinks and food refreshment are served and all ages are welcome. Admission is $1.00.

Responding to current trends in popular dance music, the park's booking agents have gone to Nashville, Tennessee to find a 5-man group billed as "The George Washington Bridge," who took over the bandstand in the "Frolics Room" Wednesday, June 11, for nightly appearances the remainder of the summer season. They are exceptional musicians who have played sessions with country ballad singer Johnny Cash, folk-rock artist Bob Dylan, and local Nashville groups who are blending the appeal of country music with the hard beat sound of the younger set. The group consists of three guitarists, an organist and drummer, who have put enough musical equipment on the Seaside "Frolics" bandstand to equip every combo at Virginia Beach. The drummer alone plays 5 tiers of percussion instruments, including 7 drums.

New Business Starts Here

Groundbreaking ceremonies were held June 12 for the new Unico Corporation building which will be located in the 4900 block of Cleveland Street in the Chinese Corner area.

Mayor Frank A. Dusch officiated at the groundbreaking ceremony. Attending the ceremony were Donald Keefer, management consultant for Unico; Morris Kopelove, chairman of the board; Leonard Meakin, vice president; Robert W. Gray and Robert L. Mott, developers. The complex, covering approximately 10,000 sq. ft., will house offices and a distribution warehouse for Unico's restaurant operations. These operations include Carroll's Hamburgers, Yogi Bear Honey Fried Chicken and Arthur's King of Beef. Contractor for the complex is R. L. Mott Construction Company.

According to Leonard Meakin, vice president of the Corporation, the Virginia Beach site was chosen because of its convenient location. Meakin said, "This site is a hub to serve the area...it is at the crossroads of the interstate highway system and will allow our delivery trucks and personnel to get from one unit to another in the quickest and easiest manner."

At the present Unico has 12 operations in the Tidewater area as well as one in Salisbury, Md. Within the next year there will be 15 more units under construction in this area.

Masters, Junior Olympics Meets Held

Approximately 200 athletes gathered at First Colonial High School last Saturday to compete in the Junior Olympics and Masters track meets sponsored by the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce. Although the competition was held under cloudy skies, and intermittent rainfall, the enthusiasm of the competitors remained undampened.

"Old Timers", ranging in age from 40 to 63, stole the spotlight during the meet as they competed in various track and field events in the Masters category.

Top billing of the day unquestionably went to 63 year old Pat Speer of Washington, D. C. Speer, who appeared as the only contestant in the mile jog for athletes 60 years of age and older, breezed over the course in a time of 8:29.

Dr. Richard E. Bergenback and Art DeLePorte, both 42, distinguished themselves by capturing multiple victories in several events.

Bergenback, from Chattanooga, Tenn., took first place in each of the four field events; shot put, javelin, discus and hammer throw.

DeLePorte, from Marion Ind., chalked up victories in three of the track events. Competing in the 40-49 age bracket DeLePorte captured first place in the mile run with a time of 4:50.3, and the 880 with a first place time of 2:12.7. DeLePorte then finished second in the three-mile run, which was opened to all age brackets.

The first place winners in each event in the Masters competition were: 100-1 (tie) Hlawatha Windley (Portsmouth) and William Thomas (Arlington), 11.9; 440-1 William Thomas, 59.5; 880-(40-49)-1 Art DeLePorte, 2:12.7; (50-59)-1 Ray Gordon (Wash., D.C.), 2:31.3; Mile-(40-49)-1 Art DeLePorte, 4:50.3; (50-59)-1 Ray Gordon, 5:11.0; (60-up)-1 Pat Speer, 8:29.0; Three Mile-(open)-1 Baxter Barryhill (Balt.), 15:45.1; Shot put-(16 lb.)-1 Richard Bergenback, 35-2 3/4; Javelin-1 Richard Bergenback, 177-0; Discus-1 Richard Bergenback, 100-3; Hammer throw-(16 lb.)-1 Richard Bergenback, distance was not recorded.

The running of the Junior Olympics featured competition among high students in two categories; boys aged 14-15, and aged 16-17, and girls aged 14-15 and aged 16-17. A number of the Olympics contests included running of various distances in track events, and field events including shot put, long jump, high jump, discus, and the pole vault.

These "oldtimers" show the strain of competition which prevailed during the "Masters" running of the 100 yard dashes.

A participant in the Junior Olympics Track Meet, held June 14 at First Colonial High School, braves the muddy field as he competes in the long jump.

Bluefish Face Anglers This Weekend

The weather and the bluefish did not cooperate with fishermen off the coast of Virginia Beach last weekend, but this weekend things are supposed to be better.

The opening of the sixth annual Norfolk-Virginia Beach Bluefish Tournament last weekend brought anxious anglers to the area with baited tackle. They were even helped along by a spotter plane piloted by Bill Gardner who radioed and dipped his wings to notify fishermen he had spotted a school of blues.

But the blues, elusive as usual, were not biting well. Small craft warnings on Sunday forced an early curtailment to the blue fishing also. A number of storms during the weekend sent small and large boats scurrying for shore.

The bluefish tournament closes July 6, and 14 prizes will be awarded in several categories for men, women and children for the prize catches. Registration, at all marinas, costs $2.

So far the largest official blue weighs in about 18 pounds, but indications are that the larger fish are either just off the Virginia Beach coast or on the way.

The best fishing spots so far have been just off the reef in sight of the Chesapeake light tower. Later the fishing will move more Southeast.

She Came to Visit ...And Stayed

By Yatta Jones

One of the newest additions to the Virginia Beach Extension Service staff is Miss Ingrid Tifenberg.

Ingrid, or Inger as she is called, moved to Virginia Beach from Syracuse, N. Y. She graduated from Plattsburg State University at Lake Champlain, N. Y., in June, 1968 with a B.S. in Home Economics education.

After graduation Inger worked in the special education field, teaching retarded children. She found that although the work is important, it did not suit her, requiring a different background from what she had. "It is difficult," she comments, "it takes training and a special kind of person to work with these children."

Inger visited her sister during the 1968 Christmas holidays and found that she liked it here very much. She kept extending her length of stay until she decided to find a job here.

There was an opening in the Home Economics Division of the Extension Service here and Inger was hired April 1 to fill the position. She trained for two months in Nasemond County before she started working at the office here which is located at Princess Anne Court-house.

Inger finds her work as an Extension Agent extremely rewarding and stimulating. She describes Extension Home Economics as "an adult education program for the homemaker, with emphasis on consumer education, management and family economics."

"With these definite goals in mind each agent has the freedom to work toward the goals as her wishes," she says. "I think it's marvelous when you do this in a job. I think you can work better when you know you are working on your own ideas."

Extension work is carried out through classes and on an individual basis, as well as through mass media. If enough people request the same thing, Inger says, classes are then formed. Anyone may get needed information simply by calling the VPI Cooperative Extension Service.

"Extension has an awful lot to offer people, but many people don't even realize we exist," Inger says. There are numerous pamphlets and booklets that are available simply for the asking. Inger particularly recommends an information sheet, "Dollars and Sense," that is put out every month and sent to anyone who requests it.

Miss Ingrid Tifenberg

Another service that Inger finds to be helpful is "Teletip." This is a one minute telephone recording that covers a different topic every day. The number to call for this service is 427-4680.

Inger was born in Germany, where her Latvian parents had gone during World War II. When Inger was three her parents brought her and her sister to the United States. She has lived in New York state most of the time since coming here. Most of her family still live in Latvia and Inger says she would like to go there for a visit sometime. . . but just for a visit. "I'm 100% American," she says.

Now that she has been here for almost a month Inger finds that her feeling for Virginia Beach has not diminished in any way. "I'm very happy living here. . . I think it's fantastic!" She says that she gets as much sun as possible--and she has a beautiful tan to prove it.

Inger is single and, as she says, "foot-loose and fancy-free." She says that once you get to know people here there's no problem with dating at all. "There certainly are lots of available bachelors." Any man who wants to date Inger would do well to dress unconservatively for Inger says she is happy to see men's clothing become bright. "I like to see a colorful, well-dressed man," she comments.

Right now Inger is busy trying to straighten out her apartment. She has been in it almost a month and has just now gotten her furniture out of storage. Inger describes her furniture as "odds and ends. . . without a matching set of anything." Her taste, she says, is expensive and she finds that old furniture is very interesting.

Whenever she has time Inger enjoys making her clothes. She estimates that she makes about 50% of her wardrobe. In addition to sewing Inger lists her hobbies as reading, sunbathing and water sports.

Inger Tifenberg is a welcome addition to Virginia Beach. Her enthusiasm for her job and her new home make her a valuable asset to the community.

Lake Joyce Club Is 'Legal'

Lake Joyce Garden Club has come of age.

Members officially celebrated the club's 21st birthday with a gala luncheon last Wednesday at the Shore Drive Inn which featured pink champagne and a large birthday cake.

Among the many guests at the party were Mrs. Charles T. Benjamin, past Virginia Federation of Garden Clubs president; Mrs. Frank Lukanich, past Tidewater District president, and Mrs. Gideon D. Overman Jr., past Norfolk Federation president.

Also attending was one charter member, Mrs. Carey J. Fox, and Mrs. Jesse White, an honorary member who installed the first slate of officers. Mrs. M. K. Crockett Sr. is president of the club.

Since the club was organized in June 1948, it has compiled a long list of accomplishments including establishing a bird and wildlife sanctuary in Lakes Shores for which the club won a state and national award. It has won a national conservation award and a national scrapbook award.

All members are life members of the District or State Federation. Three members are Master Flower Show Judges.

Their big project each year is their greens sale held right before Christmas.

Campus Riots Hit Close to Home

Campus rioters start in the cradle--or soon after.

I learned one lesson the hard way--never pay a child for doing chores. The eight-year-old, much to my delight, several months ago began volunteering to wash the dishes. The six-year-old, not to be outdone, wanted to rinse and dry them. Naturally I was pleased by their offer--in gratitude I gave the older one a dime and the younger one a nickel. That's a day I'd like to forget.

Never again did they volunteer--except for a price when they wanted money for something special. Then it got to the point that they didn't even want to set the table when I asked them to. "Will you pay me?"

With hot weather here too, I've been pestered recently with demands for dimes for this, that and the other. Finally I got fed up when again the eight-year-old objected to setting the table free. "Why should I if you don't pay me?" First I pointed out that I had asked her to do it, and that if she was going to take that attitude that next time I would tell her, not ask.

Next I asked her how much she was going to pay me for cooking her meals, making her clothes, washing and ironing, etc. "That's different," I immediately asked her why. "You're my mother." I replied that she was my daughter and she ought to help me, since I help her all the time.

Anyhow we hit on a solution that works to everybody's satisfaction. I put a chart of chores for the week on the wall. If they complete all their jobs (and they have so far without reminding) the eight-year-old gets a quarter and the six-year-old a dime at the end of the week. They must make their beds, pick up their clothes and clean their room daily. In addition they have to help with the dishes once a week and set the table whenever requested. No gripes yet, either. It's certainly better than yelling at them to pick up clothes and junk.

But the five-year-old felt left out. Unfortunately I can't claim as good luck with him. He is the only child I know that is still eating breakfast when lunch is ready. So I made a chart for him to show which meals he finished at the same time as the rest of the family and promised him a nickel for completing a week successfully. He was highly enthusiastic. He even ate breakfast--the first day. We became a little suspicious when he began finishing lunch so fast--that is until we discovered his cache behind the refrigerator which was literally running over with leftover sandwiches.

The next day he finished again--only this time the sad remains were hidden under a box in the trash can. He has such an innocent face too! He hasn't earned a cent yet.

Oh well, you can't win every time.

DAR to Dedicate Marker

The Princess Anne County Chapter DAR will dedicate a marker at the Lancaster Lovett House, June 28, at 2 p.m.

The house, which is located close to Princess Anne Court House was built on land that was a part of an original land grant to Lancaster Lovett. As was the custom this land was granted by the King of England to Lovett when he brought three new settlers into the Colony. The house was built by either Lancaster Lovett or his son John. Lancaster Lovett was still living there in 1803 and the house has always been known as The Lancaster Lovett House.

John Peters lived here around 1840 and it was once the parsonage of Nimmo Church; Judge John J. Woodhouse lived here for many years. At least two additions have been made to the house.

Lancaster Lovett was Church Warden on Nov. 15, 1650. His family married into the most prominent families in Princess Anne County and many of his descendants still reside here.

The chimney on the left-hand side of the house bears the date 1776; the original lock on the double Dutch doors retain the crest of the King of England.

Mr. and Mrs. Maury Riganto now own the home, which is 193 years old.

Bridal Fashions Go Sentimental

When it comes to selecting your wedding dress, go ahead . . . be sentimental. The occasion demands it, and fashion favors it.

Designers of bridal fashions have risen to the occasion with summer collections that can only be described as dreamy, romantic, feminine, and frankly sentimental.

Gossamer cotton organdy and demure dotted swiss are the fabrics summer's dreamiest bridal gowns are made of. And they're daintily embellished with eyelet ruffles, cotton gupere lace, or white-on-white embroidery.

You'll find the most popular style in summer wedding dresses is the fitted look. . . with a sculptured Empire bodice underscored by an embroidered inset or a high belt. Sleeves are long and circled with eyelet ruffles at the wrist or short and puffed with embroidered cuffs. Skirts follow the A-line, flaring at the back into sweeping chapel-length trains.

While you can -- and should -- indulge in sentimentality when selecting that all-important wedding dress, add a dash of practicality as well. Decide in advance the type of wedding you're going to have and the style dress you want to wear. Then you'll be able to give the bridal consultant or sales clerk a clear idea of what you're looking for.

When you go to try on wedding dresses, be prepared. Wear or take with you the type shoes you plan to wear in the wedding as well as such underpinnings as a waist cincher, girdle, etc. Arrange your hair the way you will on your wedding day, too, before trying on veils and headresses.

Choose your wedding gown

Gossamer sheer cotton organdy encircled with ruffles of eyelet embroidery creates a romantic look for summer weddings. Designed by William Cahill of California, the dress is styled with sculptured bodice and flaring A-line skirt that sweeps into a chapel-length train.

Planned Parenthood Meets

Another meeting of Planned Parenthood was held last Friday to establish a Virginia Beach chapter.

A committee was formed to contact interested people during the summer months; the committee will meet again Sept. 17. It was decided that a large, open meeting will be held after that date with a nationally-known speaker.

Anyone interested in the program should contact Mrs. C. Philip Snodgrass of Planned Parenthood at 397-8331.

"Mod Marms" Moonlight

The "Mod Marms," products of Virginia Beach's "little red school houses," have become popular convention and banquet performers in the resort city.

Debuting on the retirement program of Frank W. Cox, former superintendent of schools in Virginia Beach, in February of 1968, the "Marms" never planned to continue as a group said the spokesman of the trio, June Turner. However, requests continued to roll in; as a result, they have entertained for the retirement programs of former City Manager W. Russell Hatchett and former Police Chief Ed Moore as well as many conventions held at the Civic Center.

Miss Turner said, "We were delighted recently to appear on the WAVY T.V. program This Afternoon as part of the Memorial Day talent show presented by M. Dick Lamb."

The "Mod Marms," June Turner, Belle Landrum, and Diane Sanderlin, are heads of music at their respective Beach elementary schools: King's Grant, Thoroughgood, and Kempsville Meadows.

Each lady individually has her own claim to fame.

Miss Turner, born in Carmel, Calif., calls herself an "army brat." She holds a B.A. degree in Music Education from the University of South Carolina. Miss Turner played leading roles in "Oklahoma," "South Pacific," and the Columbia Lyric Theatre's production of "Fantasies" while in college. Also, she has appeared in "Patience" and Christmas concerts with the Virginia Civic Chorus.

In 1967 Misses Turner and Sanderlin toured Europe as members of the "Virginia Belles" entertaining American servicemen. The "Belles" were eight local vocalists, all music majors in school or music teachers, who took three months' leave from their jobs or studies to entertain the troops.

Belle Landrum, a native Virginian, was born in Richmond and graduated from Madison College with a B.A. degree in Music Education and voice. Her long list of accomplishments include roles in "Kiss Me Kate," "Oklahoma," "The Merry Widow," "The Marriage of Figaro," "Amahl and the Night Visitor," as well as appearing in the Virginia Beach/Princess Anne Jr. Women's Club Annual Cabaret Follies for the last three years. Recently, Miss Landrum shared the lead female role of Marion in the "Old Dominion College Opera Workshop production of "Music Man." Weekends she is busy as soprano soloist at Freemason Baptist Church in Norfolk.

Diane Sanderlin, another beach import from Gadsden, Ala., attended Westminster Choir College and holds a B.A. degree from Old Dominion College. Miss Sanderlin, an honor graduate from Norview High School, was an active member of the "All Virginia Chorus" and an entertainment group known as the "Tidewater Teens." She was president of the Dramatics Club and a member of the Thespians Society. As a member of the Westminster Choir College, she had the unique experience of performing in Carnegie Hall and New York's Lincoln Center. Miss Sanderlin's church activities include soloist at Epworth Methodist Church, contralto soloist at the Church of Epiphany, and currently, a choir member at the First Lutheran Church of Virginia Beach.

Before long Virginia Beach may be noted not only for its convention facilities, but also for its own convention entertainers--the "Mod Marms."

Candy was a rare treat in the Middle Ages and candy-making was a laborious, uncertain process. Critical mixing, melting, cooking and casting steps were all manual and depended on the skills and dispositions of the operators.

Candy Dates to Middle Ages

Candy--that wonderful sweet treat, by gum--has a history as chuck full of fascinating problems as a box of chocolate has fillings.

It all began thousands of years ago in ancient Egypt when, according to the papyrus, mummies and dads gave good children a honey-based confection made with nuts, figs and spices.

Oriental, however, came up with another sweet thought--assorted fruits preserved in a honey solution.

In the Middle Ages a confection, concocted from sugar, rose water, and "gum dragon" was administered only to those who were ill, and the medicine was mixed in with the sweetness.

Later, Europeans preferred a more elaborate recipe which is still popular today. It was marzipan, prepared--then as now--by pounding almonds and pistachios into a paste and blending this with sugar and egg white.

Historians do not bother to mention whether "sugarplums" (so popular in nursery rhymes) were actually made with genuine plums, but we know they were enjoyed in England in the 17th century. The English were

WOMEN PAST 21 WITH BLADDER IRRITATION Suffer Many Troubles

After 21, common Kidney or Bladder Irritations affect twice as many women as men and may make you tense and nervous from too frequent, burning or itching urination both day and night. Secondly, you may lose sleep and feel old, tired, depressed. In such irritation, CISTEX usually brings fast, relaxing comfort by curbing irritating germs in strong, acid urine and by analgesic pain relief. Get CISTEX at drug stores. ## Revue Displays Fashions

It's smarter! It's better! It's cheaper! And it's fun! What is? Making and modeling your own clothes.

That is the way 4-H girls feel who take part in the state-wide 4-H Dress Revue program which credits not only best choice of attire, but also sewing ability.

The girls are taught modeling finesse so when they show off their handwork they will sit, stand and walk in a graceful and poised manner.

To help them acquire these talents is Simplicity Pattern Co., Inc., sponsor of the national 4-H Dress Revue program for 23 years. In cooperation with the Extension Service, Simplicity stylists work with clothing specialists and local volunteer 4-H leaders. Area fashion shows are presented where 4-H girls model professionally made clothes and their own garments.

Learning to choose the right patterns, fabrics and accessories is one of the main goals of the program. Annual awards are given by Simplicity.

anies transform all these confections annually into 4 billion pounds of candy, and a total of 20 pounds per capita, it is predicted, will be consumed within the next 12 months.

According to the "candy scientists" at Atlas Chemical Industries there are three good reasons for the great American sweet tooth. 1-Candy (understandably) has never tasted so good. 2-Teenagers (who are top consumers) keep increasing in this country, and the more we have, the more they eat. 3-The shelf life of candy has been prolonged considerably, and this is an essential because large candy makers are shipping greater distances than ever before. Now their product can withstand rough handling and temperature changes with two "miracle" ingredients--an Atlas Sorbitol solution and a chocolate emulsifier blend which enables the candies to withstand rough handling and temperature extremes and to preserve color, texture and flavor far longer than ever before.

So the sweet problems of candy have been boiled down to achieve much sweeter solutions--which makes the "boiled sweets" (the English term for confections) a true "sweetest story ever told."

NWCA No. 241 Plan Meeting

Davis-Ellis NWCA No. 241 will hold their monthly social meeting on June 24.

The meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the Little Creek Sunday School building (bldg. no. 3339). All members and guests are invited to attend. For more information call 464-1033.

Bridge Gap with Coffee

To bridge the generation gap at a bridal shower buffet, offer perfectly brewed coffee--hot or cold, plain or fancy; and a choice of two elegant fruit and wine desserts. A fruit compote of pear halves and quick thawing, frozen strawberries generously laced with lake country white wine and their own syrup is a delicious middle-of-the-road compromise. Appealing to the young and young-at-heart are these glamorous "Lake Country Jewels" of cherry flavor gelatin accented with red dinner wine of a delicate and fruity flavor and bouquet.

The coffee is rich, creamy and frothy in Coffee Alexander, a dessert in a glass that quite handily becomes an after-dinner drink with the addition of brandy. It's a luscious drink to be sipped and enjoyed leisurely.

For all cooling coffee drinks, it is best to begin with freshly brewed, extra-strength coffee. Then when the hot coffee is poured over ice cubes to chill, the robust coffee flavor will not be diluted. Brew the coffee by using only 4 ounces of water to each Approved Coffee Measure of coffee. In other words, to make 4 cups of extra-strength coffee, use 4 measures of coffee to 2 cups of water.

PEAR AND BERRY WINE COMPOTE

- 1 can (1 lb. 13 oz.) Bartlett pear halves
- 1 c. Lake Country White dinner wine
- 2 pouches (10 oz. each) frozen strawberry halves

Drain pears, arrange in shallow serving dish. Pour wine over pears, chill at least 1 hour. Just before serving, thaw berries as directed on package; add to pears. Serve at once. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

LAKE COUNTRY JEWELS

- 2 pk. (3 oz. each) cherry flavor gelatin
- 2 c. hot water
- 1/2 c. cold water
- 1 1/2 c. Lake Country Red dinner wine
- 1/2 lb. white seedless grapes
- 1 egg white, unbeaten
- Granulated sugar

Sewing with cool, summery fabrics like cotton voile, dotted Swiss, or cotton eyelet, calls for a little extra care with seams. They should be as invisible as possible, neat and narrow. The French seam is the best choice. Check sewing books for exact instructions for stitching this seam.

Save Dishes In Kitchen With Carpet

Guess where all the family action is today? It's in the kitchen. It's all due to the new designer look in kitchen decor, housewares and exciting innovations in appliances. Just as exciting are the new breed of easy care kitchen carpets--as much a part of kitchen planning as the range, refrigerator or kitchen sink.

Mushroom Salads Sliced fresh mushrooms, raw, are an excellent addition to salads of many kinds. The spongy mushroom slices absorb the well-seasoned dressing and distribute it evenly throughout the salad.

Here's why: Carpeting does away with tedious mopping, polishing and waxing. With modern carpet fibers such as Herculan® olefin fiber, most spills such as milk, catsup and eggs completely disappear.

A choice of freshly brewed coffee--hot or iced--and very elegant fruit and wine desserts bridge the generation gap at pre-wedding parties.

Dissolve gelatin in hot water. Add cold water and wine. Pour into crystal wine glasses. Chill until firm. Garnish with clusters of Sugared Grapes.

To make Sugared Grapes: Wash grapes, snip into small clusters. Dip each cluster of grapes first into egg whites and then into sugar, turning to coat evenly. Dry on waxed paper.

COFFEE ALEXANDER

- 3 c. freshly brewed coffee, 4-6 ice cubes
- 1 pt. coffee ice cream
- 1/4 c. brandy

Place coffee and ice cubes into blender and blend at medium speed. Add ice cream and brandy; then blend at maximum speed. Pour into an attractive carafe and serve in punch cups.

Home Gardening Is Big Business

(Editor's note: Here is another in the series on home horticulture by Wesley P. Jenkins, Extension horticulturist at Virginia Tech.)

Home gardening is really big business. A recent survey revealed that there are about 85 million home gardeners in the United States. The building of new homes adds about one million new gardeners each year.

The women outnumber the men by almost two to one as gardeners. The figures show that about 64 per cent of the gardening is done by women and only 36 per cent by men. The men indicate their decline in gardening is due to more overtime work, crowded highways which require more time to get to and from work and more business traveling which keeps them away from home.

The recent trend in gardening is toward the production of more vegetables and fruit and less emphasis on flowers. Several factors have influenced this change. With the continued increase in the price of food, the home grown vegetables and fruit help reduce the budget. The easy and quick availability of vegetables from the garden cuts down on shopping time.

Vegetables and fruit from the home garden may be harvested at the peak of maturity. They thus taste better and are more nourishing. A real advantage of growing your own vegetables is that you may select the varieties you prefer which may not be available on the local market.

Young married couples seem to be more active as gardeners than was true for previous generations. They are planting larger gardens to help stretch a tight budget. Gardening is a hobby they can enjoy together, and at a lower cost than many other recreational activities. Also, you don't have the trouble and expense of a baby-sitter when having your fun in a garden at home.

Flower growing is still a very important part of home gardening. The rose is the most popular and widely grown flower in the U.S. today. The zinnia is second in popularity, followed by lilac, day lily, snapdragon, azalea, gladiolus, petunia, marigold and daffodil.

Garden clubs are flourishing and have many more women members than men. They promote continued interest in gardening and are involved in many educational programs. They make major contributions to all aspects of community beautification.

Home gardening involves very direct and important improvements in the beauty, usefulness and value of the residential property. It makes our living more enjoyable and provides a place where we may entertain our friends with pride. Some real estate dealers estimate that landscaping and gardens may add as much as 20 or 30 per cent to the value of a home.

Rose Care Is Minimum

Out in the suburbs, the rose still ranks among the top favorites in gardens large and small. In fact, there is hardly a home setting that doesn't include one or two plants.

Rose popularity comes from the fact that they can do so much for the garden. Roses give color throughout the season, with beautiful splashes during spring and fall.

But some people may still hesitate about planting too many roses, feeling they need a lot of fussing and special care for good results. Not so, according to the garden experts at the Gely Chemical Corp. They have developed a product for effective rose insect control that makes it possible to follow a "minimum-care" program that will give more flowers and healthier plants.

What does a "minimum-care" program consist of?

First would be housecleaning. In the Spring, cut off the dead and weak branches and "clean-up" the plant. There is hardly a winter when some branches aren't killed back by Jack Frost.

In your quest for a neat garden, you would be cleaning up the plants, anyway. However, all stems and leaves you remove from the roses should be removed from the surrounding soil and thrown out in the trash because they could harbor insects and diseases.

The second step would be seeing that the plants are fed and watered. Watering is no prob-

Empty garbage cans left in front of properties are unsightly. Many property owners and summer residents are not aware of the provisions of the Virginia Beach city ordinance having to do with garbage collections. Put your covered garbage cans on the inside line of the sidewalk in front of your premises by 7 a.m. of the morning for collection. Be sure to remove cans as soon after collection as possible. Always use garbage receptacles with tight fitting lids (City Ordinance, Sec. 17). Help keep Virginia Beach clean and neat—do your part.

Color in the kitchen -- Now that easy-upkeep materials have come of decorative age, a kitchen can be as charmingly color-coordinated as any room in the house. A dramatic print in tones of pink, raspberry, and grape acts as the pace-setter in cotton-laminated shades, valances, and matching wallpaper. Completing the scheme are raspberry-colored splashboards and counter tops, a grape-toned top for the dining island, and pink window frames and telephone.

Gardens Need Food, Water

The two most critical needs of your garden during the warm summer months are water and fertilizer. You must supply adequate quantities of both if you expect to produce large, well-colored flowers and succulent, delicious vegetables.

The plants in your garden use about one inch of water each week. In farming terms this means the equivalent of an inch depth of water over your entire garden and lawn area. This is 700 gallons for a 40 by 30-foot garden.

The reserve water in the soil will keep plants growing for several weeks. Watch your plants carefully for wilting during any dry period. When this occurs apply enough water to wet the ground to a depth of at least six inches. Light sprinklings may give your plants some temporary relief, but a good soaking will do more good and will take less work and water in the long run.

Try to apply water uniformly over your entire garden. Water moves for only very short distances sideways in the soil. A rotary sprinkler or special plastic hose with small openings is a satisfactory way to irrigate your garden.

Your garden may also need some additional fertilizer to maintain vigorous growth of plants during the middle and late summer. This is particularly true of vegetables, especially sweet corn.

If the leaves of your plants become somewhat light green or yellow in color, apply a side-dressing of 5-10-5 fertilizer. Use about two pounds per 100 feet of row scattered evenly between the rows of plants. Scratch the fertilizer into the top inch of soil. For quick action, water the garden thoroughly to dissolve the nitrogen of the fertilizer and move it down to the root zone of the plants.

The roots of your flowers and vegetables grow vigorously in well-drained fertile soil. On most plants they extend beyond the lateral spread of the branches. They usually completely overlap each other in the space between the rows in your garden. Therefore the water and fertilizer you apply should be evenly spread over the entire garden for best results.

The roots of plants grow much faster than most people realize. Did you know that the roots of vine crops such as cucumbers and melons extend as far out as the ends of the vines and sometimes farther? Squash or watermelons which grow to a length of 15 or 18 feet, will have roots that extend to the same

Vegetables Are Helpful In Slimming

Slimming for new spring and summer fashions need not be a chore.

Salads can be the delicious answer to a weight problem since they are a filling, good-tasting substitute for the high caloric foods so abundant on our tables during the winter months.

For a crisp, different tasting salad try this one made with LaChoy fancy mixed vegetables.

Drain and rinse with cold water one can of fancy mixed vegetables. Chill thoroughly. Add shredded cabbage or lettuce which has been broken in small pieces. Add chopped green onion. Toss with creamy garlic or Italian dressing.

You feel a little edgy, or maybe cross.

Sooner or later, that day comes. The day when a woman feels she's changing. It's not a good feeling either. And she could use a good old-fashioned medicine then.

You might even have what we call hot flashes and feel sad and slightly off-balance. Whatever you feel, we have something for the day you need a little comforting. Lydia E. Pinkham Tablets. They're made with gentle, natural ingredients that work to help you feel better. When you start changing, you could use a good old-fashioned medicine for an old-fashioned problem. And you don't run any chance of the kind of unpleasant side effects you can get from some of the newer drugs.

All Saints Episcopal Church

Church Moves into Building

All Saints Episcopal Church began services in their new building May 11.

The church, which began as a mission, has been meeting in John B. Dey school since Jan. 8, 1967. There were 10 people at the first service; now the church membership is made up of approximately 165 communicants and 275 baptised members.

Pastor of the church is the Rev. Joseph Pinder. Sunday School begins at 9:30 a.m. and church services at 10:30 a.m. at the church, which is located on Woodside Lane.

Beginning in September, 1969, a kindergarten and nursery will be held in the new building. The school, All Saints Day School, old children. The school will follow the public school calendar. There will be no transportation provided for the school.

Director-teacher of the school is Mrs. Thomas C. Betterton. Mrs. Betterton, a 1957 graduate of the State University of New York at Oneonta, holds a B.S. degree in Early Childhood Education. She has had five years teaching experience and holds a Collegiate Professional Certificate to teach kindergarten and elementary grades in Virginia.

Registration for the nursery and kindergarten may be made by calling Mrs. Betterton at 464-9137.

Lombardo Appearing At White Sands June 25

Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians will appear Wednesday evening, June 25, at the White Sands Country Club.

Lombardo, who began studying music when just a toddler, organized his first band while still in grammar school. The four-piece band included Guy on violin with brothers Carmen and Lebert Lombardo and Fred Kreitzer. All three musicians still play with Guy and his Royal Canadians today.

Carmen Lombardo is key instrumentalist for the band and a noted songwriter. Carmen has composed such standard favorites as "Seems Like Old Times," "Boo-Hoo," "Little Coquette," "Sweethearts on Parade," "Powder Your Face With Sunshine," and "Return to Me."

Victor Lombardo, the youngest of the four brothers, joined the band in 1930 and plays the baritone and soprano sax, as well as the clarinet.

Also appearing with the band will be Cliff Grass and Tony Coutreau.

Showtime in the White Sands Rainbow Room is 9 p.m. "The sweetest music this side of heaven" will continue from 10 p.m. to 12:30 a.m.

Quarterly memberships for tourists are available for $3.00 at the White Sands. Those wishing reservations should call the Club at 340-1040.

Addresses Are Cause Of Returns

Some 7,500 checks worth about $655,000 were returned to the Veterans Administration last month because of the failure of veterans to notify both the VA and the Post Office of their change of address.

In some instances, E. P. Brosnan, Manager of the Roanoke VA Regional Office, points out that failure to receive a monthly pension or compensation check from the VA creates a hardship for the family or individual involved.

Va. Beach Work As Well as Play

The tourist season at Virginia Beach is now in full swing, but not everyone taking advantage of the beautiful surf and sand is a vacationer.

C. of C. to Publish Book

"The Virginia Beach Story" in words and pictures will be published in book form by the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce, president Frank W. Kellam announced this week.

"We're going to put a new sales tool in the hands of the Chamber," Kellam said. "This book will tell the whole story of Virginia Beach and will give us a chance to put our best foot forward in attracting new industry, telling of our great tourist attractions and attracting new residents."

"Cost of publishing the book will be underwritten by advertising space purchased by members of the Virginia Beach business community," Kellam explained.

The decision to publish a book was reached by the Board of Directors of the Chamber when this program was presented to the Board for approval by Windsor Publications, specializing in the preparation of books on cities throughout the United States.

An editorial team from Windsor will soon begin gathering facts and shooting pictures in Virginia Beach. They will cover transportation, utilities and commerce in the city, plus the schools, churches, residential and recreational areas of the city.

The entire project will be directed by a special committee of the Chamber of Commerce. Serving on the committee, in addition to Kellam, are Lawrence A. Sancio, Robert H. DeFord, Jr., T. Lewis Johnson, Albin R. Mailhes, L. Dean Curtis and Mrs. Laura Lambe.

The Good Old Days. Recollection #2

This is an electric washing machine. Circa 1920. The end of scrub boards and elbow grease. Just connect it to any electric light socket: its agitators removed washday dirt and its wringer removed water (and buttons). All for a mere 71¢ per kilowatt hour.

Of course that was 49 years ago, and you'd hardly expect electric rates to be the same today.

They're not. Now you pay only 2¢ a kilowatt hour. And you get cleaner clothes. With buttons.

He'll Never Rust Away

It's a good thing Stanleigh Jones retired in 1965... otherwise he would never have time for his activities.

First of all there's his wood-working. He says he doesn't work on anything big; cobbler's benches and tables with tiletops are the largest jobs he tackles (except for some shelves he made once). But the variety of the objects he makes is overwhelming. He builds bird feeders, sewing caddies, milking stools and folding tray holders among other things. Last Christmas he built 67 bread warmers.

Many of the smaller items Jones makes show original thought and planning. He has made trivets from the trunks of willow, apple and cherry trees—all of which were blown down by hurricane Donna. Visitors to the Jones household will find a wooden napkin ring there for them, with their names burned into the ring.

Jones usually works in pine or cypress. He prefers heart of pine. "But," he says, "you just can't get it any more." He has solved that problem... he buys lumber from old buildings and builds with that. Right now he has a "woodpile" of lumber from two very old buildings that were torn down. One building would be 116 years old if it were still standing; the cornerstone of the other building was laid in 1864.

Once Jones gets the lumber his job is only partially done. He then has to make the boards. He has a fully equipped workshop to work in. The workshop contains a saw and joiner, a planer, a belt and disc sander, a drill press, 10" and 15" bandsaws, a radial saw and a lathe. It's quite a step up from the small "all-in-one" tool Jones started with in 1958.

At that time the Joneses had a garage apartment built on the property next to their home. Jones had a storage area and the workshop room built under the apartment. "When I started," he says, "I couldn't drive a nail or saw a board straight... some of the first things I did were very, very crude, but I thought they were beautiful at the time... I would toss them into the woodpile now." He says that a lot of people think it takes an inborn talent to be able to work with wood, but he doesn't believe it. "If you make up your mind to do something you can overcome problems and do it," he commented.

The Joneses moved to Virginia Beach 17 years ago... and they love it. "It's so peaceful," Jones says, "we could never live in the city again." They have a house close to the north side of Rudee Inlet. The yard is full of flowers and bushes that they have lovingly cultivated, and one large section is set aside for a bird sanctuary. The sanctuary is full of wild cherry trees and an undergrowth of blackberries and honeysuckle. Distributed throughout the yard are four bird baths, seven feeders and several shelters, as well as a purple martin house. Jones watches the birds closely and attends to their needs. Recently he found out that the larger birds were getting all of the food so he put out a feeder that the smaller birds alone could use. He even has a hummingbird feeder.

Stanleigh Jones talks to Jo-Jo, the "Kingpin" of the Jones household. Beside Jones' chair is one of the tables he has made.

Jones enjoys the antics of many of the birds. "In a certain way they have human characteristics," he says. He has seen the martins house-hunt just like a newly married couple. The male and female will inspect the house, chatter about it, and move on to another one if that particular house doesn't suit their purposes. Right now Jones is worried about the purple martin population. There are no tenants in his house... they are dying off because of predators and lice.

Jones is keeping a close eye on the Grosbeaks that are eating in his yard late in the afternoon. He says that he has only seen the males, which means they may be nesting in the area. If this turns out to be the case it will be an extremely rare event because the birds normally nest in northern U.S. and Canada.

The Joneses have a parakeet, Jo-Jo, who has the run of the house. Jo-Jo is nine years old and has a vocabulary of 100 words. He is the fourth parakeet Jones has trained. Jo-Jo was taken from the nest when he was five or six weeks old; as soon as he started feeding himself, Jones says this is the best time to get a parakeet and start training it. Jo-Jo speaks English and a little Japanese, which was taught to him by the Joneses' grandson.

Being 69 years old hasn't caused Jones to slow down any... he still rides his bicycle five and ten miles at a time. But it has prevented him from doing one thing and he regrets this very much. He can no longer give blood to the blood bank because their policy prevents them from taking it from anyone over 60. He had donated 67 pints when he was forced to retire. He still tries to recruit for the cause, though. As he says, "I don't know of any finer Christmas present than a pint of blood... it may save a life."

Although the Joneses' son and his family live on the west coast where he teaches Japanese, they have several "adopted" sons and daughters that live closer. The Joneses enjoy meeting people and making friends. They rent the garage apartment and all of the tenants seem to become "sons and daughters" to them.

Jones makes friends wherever he goes... even in the laundromat. He freely admits that he is known as "Pop" Jones all over the area. There seems to be some special quality about him... maybe it's his determination to "keep occupied rather than sit around and rust away."

Wesleyan Expands Faculty

Thirteen new fulltime faculty members have been appointed at Virginia Wesleyan College for the 1969-70 academic session, according to Dean Garry D. Hays. The list of new faculty includes two Woodrow Wilson scholars and three Fulbright scholars.

Dr. Myrtle C. Craig becomes the college's first fulltime professor of education and director of the college's teacher training program.

Miss Nancy S. Allen and Edward C. Flynn become assistant professors in the department of Spanish. Miss Joan A. Fillet has been appointed as an assistant professor of French. Dr. Verne M. Keefer becomes an assistant professor of biology and Percy Daniel White, Jr., joins the department of mathematics as an assistant professor. Dr. Lawrence D. Hultgren has been appointed as an assistant professor of philosophy and Harold R. Hite becomes assistant professor of drama. Dr. Larry W. Hays is assuming duties as assistant professor of psychology and director of counseling. Donald M. Forsyth becomes instructor in physical education. Mrs. Barbara R. Hays will serve as director of student services and will teach parttime in the department of history. Two new professional librarians are Miss Edwina Rooker, reference librarian and Mrs. Rosemary T. Matthews, catalog librarian.

Fourteen new part-time teaching personnel will join the faculty for the 1969-70 session. They are Mrs. Myrna T. Am-dursky, instructor in art; Mrs. Geraldine Bocchieri, instructor in economics; A. J. Coffman, instructor in history; Mrs. Lucy A. Herman, instructor in elementary education; Mrs. Mary Lou Hultgren, instructor in sociology and anthropology; Irving B. Dent, instructor in geography; Dr. Frederick Herman, instructor in history; Mrs. Helen Hunt, instructor in music; Mrs. Helen Shapiro, instructor in English; Barclay Sheaks, instructor in painting; Mrs. Jacqueline Stutzman, instructor in English and Joseph Wisniewski, instructor in secondary education. Mrs. Patricia J. Masaracha will serve as assistant instructor in biology and W. Leo Johnson becomes assistant instructor in chemistry. These two will assist in laboratory work.

Program Approved

The Virginia Beach Unit of the American Cancer Society, in line with a new National Program of the American Cancer Society, has adopted the "Reach to Recovery" service program.

Lawrence A. Sancillo, president of the Local Unit stated, "The first step in adopting this program was to get the approval of the Virginia Beach Medical Society. They completely reviewed the entire program and I am delighted to say, approved it and recommended that the Virginia Beach Unit go into the 'Reach to Recovery' program."

"Reach to Recovery" is a very specialized program designed to contact and assist the woman who has had major breast surgery and is completely trained by the American Cancer Society in what her duties will be. Then, only with the approval of her surgeon, the volunteer visits this patient in her hospital room. It is the function of the representative to present a kit to the patient containing several items, including a booklet which has a complete exercise program, lists of prosthetic items, giving recommended prices and also stores where these items can be purchased. The booklet also tells the woman about special problems she will have and how to best adjust to these.

"We of the Virginia Beach Unit and the volunteer representative do not recommend any exercise without the doctor's complete approval. The kit has one prosthetic appliance designed to be used while the patient is still in the hospital - also several items for a subsequent exercise program. For the married woman, the kit has a special letter to her husband, assisting him and explain-

He Doesn't Have the Answers

It's true that the public is made constantly aware of the minority of high school students—those who are in trouble—whereas little is said about the majority of the students—those who work hard and are eager to take the responsibilities thrust upon them.

One local high school student who belongs in the latter group is Cecil B. (Sonny) Strange III. Sonny was a senior at Kellam High School, and a busy one at that. He was Senior Class president, Valedictorian, a member of the National Honor Society, the Monogram Club and the Key Club. He also worked on the year book and was involved in building scenery for the Senior Class play.

Sonny has a 17-year-old sister and a nine-year-old brother. He says that the three of them have a good relationship. "We get along real well and help each other out... we go to bat for each other. We used to squabble, but we learned it is more profitable to get along."

All through high school Sonny played football and basketball. He was recipient of the Jaycees' Dr. L. Curtis Hall Outstanding Scholar-Athlete award. He is already a football candidate at Yale, where he plans to attend college.

Sonny has a $3300 financial aid scholarship to Yale. He has no idea what he will major in, but he thinks possibly engineering. "Something in the science and math field," he says.

Besides studying and keeping active in various clubs and organizations, Sonny has worked for two years at Plaza Chicken House (He likes their fried chicken), but he plans to work this summer for a local construction company.

In his spare time Sonny likes to surf. He is a member of the Surf Club and is quite enthusiastic about surfing in this area. He does feel that the surfing conditions are much too crowded here, however. At the time of the interview, in fact, he was sporting a black eye as definite proof.

Sonny dates, but he does not go steady. He particularly likes the Victorian-style fashions for the girls...with short skirts! He prefers Ivy-styled clothes for himself.

When asked if he had any answers to many of the problems that seem to create so much student unrest throughout the country, Sonny replied, "If I knew the answers I wouldn't be here...I think people are wasting their lives away trying to define a problem they can't solve anyway."

It's nice meeting someone, finally who doesn't have all the answers.

Wesleyan Appoints Trustees

Three new members have been appointed to the Board of Trustees at Virginia Wesleyan College, according to an announcement on Wednesday by Judge Jerry G. Bray, Jr., chairman.

The three are Mrs. Louise Eggleston, J. B. Fishburne, and M. Lee Payne, all of Norfolk.

Mrs. Eggleston, a native of Broadway, Virginia, is the widow of the late Aubrey L. Eggleston, a founder of the investment Corporation of Norfolk. She is a well-known church leader throughout the world through her work in the Kolnour Foundation of Baltimore, Maryland, and the World Literacy Foundation in which she worked closely with Dr. Frank Laubach.

She has served as president and a member of the Board of Trustees of the Kolnour Foundation, which is a spiritual training center for international Christian Leadership, and she has served as vice-president of the World Literacy Foundation. She has lived in Norfolk since 1900 and has been active in Ghent United Methodist Church. Eggleston Hall, a women's residence hall at Virginia Wesleyan College, is named for Mrs. Eggleston.

Fishburne is president of Universal Products Company of Norfolk. Born in Roanoke and raised in Richmond, he has lived in Norfolk since 1935. He is an officer of the Mortgage and Development Corporation, Contractors Paving Company, Virginia Data Center, Inc., and Industrial Design and Machine Corporation. Mr. Fishburne is a member of the administrative board of Epworth United Methodist Church.

Payne is president of United Virginia Bank-Seaboard National and United Virginia Bank International. He has been associated with this financial institution since 1951. He was appointed executive vice-president in February 1963 and president in September 1967.

Annual Farm-City Luncheon Planned

The annual Farm-City Luncheon, sponsored by the Agriculture Committee of the Norfolk Chamber of Commerce, will be held at Lake Wright Motel at 12:30 p.m. June 20.

This is the 20th year this event has been held and it is expected to be by far the largest. William E. Wood, Jr., Chairman of the Agriculture Committee, says about 400 people are expected from as far away as 100 miles.

Anyone interested in Agriculture business is invited. The speaker, Mr. Clarence Palmbly, assistant Secretary of Agriculture for International Affairs and Commodity Programs, is charged mainly with selling feed grains abroad and his efforts could drastically affect farm prices.

The luncheon will be attended by large groups of the Soy Bean Association, Feed Grain Association, Grain Dealers Association, Fertilizer Groups, Warehousing Groups, Shippers and many other people directly or indirectly associated with Agriculture.

A large number of Virginia Beach residents are expected to attend.

Heischober Addresses Meeting

Local VW dealer Harold Heischober, president of Hilltop Volkswagen, Inc., was a featured speaker this week at a conference of Volkswagen service managers held in Myrtle Beach, S. C. The three-day meeting, which concluded last week, was aimed at providing VW owners with the best in quality automobile service.

A total of 72 service managers from VW dealerships in Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, eastern Tennessee and the District of Columbia attended the meeting at the Ocean Forest Hotel in Myrtle Beach. Sponsor for the conference was Volkswagen South Atlantic Distributor, Inc., the Lanham, Md., based VW product distributor for the five-state region.

Heischober told the group that prompt and economical service for VW owners demands effective service department management.

Posts Begin Jr. Council

A Ft. Eustis-Ft. Story Junior Officer Council has been established at Ft. Eustis, Va.

The new council was initiated after pilot programs directed by U. S. Continental Army Command, Ft. Monroe, Va., had proved successful in the Third and Fifth Army areas. As a result, junior officer councils will soon be established at installations in the United States. Council membership is limited to officers in the grade of captain, with less than eight years of service, lieutenants; and warrant officers in the first two grades.

The junior officers councils will investigate and study housing and messing facilities for junior officers, social and recreational activities of the local installation and the surrounding community and customs and courtesies of the service.

They will also take up disciplinary matters affecting junior officers, modification and improvement of overall personnel policies and practices as they relate to junior officers, professionalism and job satisfaction.

Another item under consideration is the sponsor program for newly assigned junior officers and their families.

The council is making plans for a Lieutenant of the Month competition in order to recognize the professionalism of the junior officers.

Membership in the junior council will be composed of representatives of all units at Ft. Eustis and Ft. Story, a sub-installation of Ft. Eustis.

Council Meets June 20

The Virginia Beach Council of Social Services will meet June 20th at 3:00 p.m. at VEP-CO building, 525 First Colonial Road.

Gorman G. Brinkley, Director, Virginia Council of Alcoholism, Inc. for Tidewater will be guest speaker.

Baja to Appear Here

Julius "Spanish Flea" Wechter and the Baja Marimba Band, will appear at the Virginia Beach Civic Center on Saturday, June 28, for two concerts at 8:00 and 10:00 P.M.

They are not only exciting to hear, but visually exciting as well. And why shouldn't they be? Their stage act is the result of extensive planning by Herb Alpert, head of A&M Records, Gil Friesen, vice-president of A&M Enterprises, noted comedian Bill Dana, and Wechter himself.

The Baja Marimba Band, made up of fine musicians, is a cheerful musical vehicle whose engine is sparked gently by the humor shown to America by Laurel and Hardy—the deadpan exchange of glances, the subtle communication of comical men using skilled, understated, whimsy. Wechter admits that the stage act is "corn all the way with old Mexican costumes (a take-off on the mode of dress non-existent in Mexico for 100 years, if ever) and ideas, but palatable."

Julius Wechter, leader of the Baja Marimba Band, was one of the original musicians on Herb Alpert's first blockbusting single, "The Lonely Bull," which was recorded in Alpert's garage with a bunch of studio musicians. These musicians later became the Tijuana Brass, including Julius. Wechter remained with the Brass until, with the aid of Alpert, he formed the Baja Marimba Band in 1963.

The Baja Marimba Band derives its name from a combination of one of its instrument names and a geographical place in California according to Wechter. "We use an instrument called the bass marimba," explains Wechter, "and Baja is a part of California, and also means 'lower' in English. So, Baja Marimba."

Much of the success of the Band can be attributed to the leadership of Julius Wechter who originated the idea of having the group perform while smoking cigars and sporting enormous mustaches. Says Wechter, "It relaxes an audience to see us clowning around and they begin to join in and have as good a time as we are. We walk on (stage) and create an instant image of psychedelic happiness. Not totally exciting at first. The audience sits back and relaxes, and in this atmosphere... we lay this good music on them which they immediately accept."

The Baja Marimba Band, nine jolly musicians in the guise of old-fashioned Mexican minstrels, are on the threshold of becoming the most popular instrumentalists since Herb Alpert and the Tijuana Brass.

Remember, Julius Wechter and the Baja Marimba Band—Virginia Beach Civic Center—two concerts, 8:00 and 10:00 P.M.—Saturday, June 28. Admission is $4.00, reserved seat (available only at the Civic Center and the Ticket Stall at Pembroke Mall Shopping Center); $3.50, reserved section (first-come/first-served); and $3.00, general admission. The reserved section and general admission tickets are also available at the following locations: Ward's Corner Record Shop; the Clothes Horse in Portsmouth, the Red Barn in the Peninsula, and Clayton's Men's Shop on the Peninsula.

Mrs. Lambe Reappointed

Mrs. Laura Lambe, president of Laura Lambe Advertising Inc., has been reappointed to serve on the Travel Development Committee of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce.

The request for her continuing membership came from Mr. E. R. English, State Chamber President.

The Committee, chaired by Jack Smith, Executive Vice-President of the Roanoke Valley Chamber of Commerce, is comprised of approximately 40 travel-oriented persons throughout the state. The group serves as an arm of the State Chamber's Travel Development which is headed by Irby Hollans.

Mrs. Lambe also represents travel interests on a state basis as a vice-president of the Virginia Travel Council, representing the Tidewater area.

Vepco Applies for Line

Virginia Electric and Power Company has applied for an Army Department permit for construction of an overhead electric power transmission line crossing over Lynnhaven Inlet, parallel to the eastbound land of the Lesner Bridge.

The Army Department has issued a public notice to this effect, stating that the issuance of the permit will be based on an evaluation of all relevant factors, including the effect of the proposed work on navigation, fish and wildlife, conservation, pollution and the general public interest.

Objections to the work are requested to be stated in writing to the District Engineer, Norfolk District, Corps of Engineers, Fort Norfolk, 303 Front Street, Norfolk, Va. 23510, by June 28, 1969.

United Investment Savings. A new way to make your money grow.

The way your United Virginia Banker looks at it, it's better to invest your money than just save it. That's the idea behind our new United Investment Savings.

Start with an initial deposit of $500 or more. Then, as often as you like, make deposits of as little as $50.

Now here's the interesting part. United Investment Savings pays the nation's highest allowable bank return. The interest—5%—is compounded continuously. Your interest earns interest all the time, so you get more than 5%.

But that's not all. You get the convenience of a quarterly statement. Deposits are simpler to make, while there's no need to come into the bank to have your interest posted. And you even have a choice of how we credit interest to your account.

Withdrawals are easy too. No notice is required at the beginning of each calendar quarter. And only 90 days any other time.

City Put in Huge District

Virginia Beach has been placed in the same state planning district as Norfolk, Portsmouth, Chesapeake, Franklin, Suffolk, Nansemond County, Southampton County and Isle of Wight County.

The district has approximately 772,000 residents, second only to the 889,000 in the northern Virginia urban corridor. Virginia Beach City Manager Roger Scott said he is disappointed at the delineation of the district. He advocated strongly the inclusion only of the four major south Tidewater cities in the district. In public hearings held in recent months, Scott said he believed the only effective way such a planning district would work effectively would be to include only areas of similar interest.

He said at that time he did not feel that the rural counties had any place in the same districts with strictly urban areas because the problems of planning are entirely different.

When the final boundaries were announced Wednesday by the Division of State Planning and Community Affairs, Scott said he had no further comment other than what he had said in the past.

"I don't agree with it," he added, "But we'll do our best to make it work."

Division planners have recently concluded a year long intensive study of the State's local governments searching for logical combinations of jurisdictions that could be grouped into districts. Factors that were considered included

Attracting Industry Approved

It seems that not too many people are interested in what the city does to attract industry, even if that industry would help to lower or maintain the tax rate in Virginia Beach.

Fewer replies were received to last week's SUN SURVEY than is usual. But of those who did care enough to answer, 73 per cent said "Yes" to the question, "Should the City of Virginia Beach offer inducements, such as tax breaks, utility lines or streets and gutters, to attract new industry to the city as a means of broadening the tax base?" The other 27 per cent said "No."

Several who replied in the affirmative suggested that the city could do more than it has in the past, such as lower taxes for a period of years. Those who replied in the negative said they did not believe it was necessary to bribe industry to locate here. A few tersely commented they were not interested in seeing industry in Virginia Beach in the first place.

While the public opinion poll does not profess to represent the thinking of all residents of Virginia Beach, it does represent the thinking of a cross section of those who took time to clip it and return it to us. Your attention is called to this week's SUN SURVEY question also, which appears below in the box at the lower left corner of this page.

Each week a new question will appear and the results will be published the following week. The questions will be timely, and the more answers we receive the more responsible the opinion.

Council Raises Fees

Virginia Beach City Council Monday adopted an ordinance raising the fee for application of zoning changes from $50 to $150 and the application for use permits from $25 to $50.

City Manager Roger Scott said the fee change was not arbitrary, but necessary since the new fees actually represent the true cost of handling each permit in the first place.

The new fees go into effect with the next meeting of the planning commission on July 8.

In other action in the short, 4-minute formal session, Council adopted a resolution urged by Scott calling upon Congress to maintain the tax-exempt status of municipal bonds, now under federal-proposal to be placed on tax rolls.

A resolution was also presented to the Virginia Beach Borough Volunteer Rescue Squad praising the volunteers for taking seven first-aid awards in competitive tests.

Another resolution endorsed a U. S. Army Corps of Engineers plan which, if approved by Congress, will over a period of years raise the level of and widen considerably the ocean beach from Rudee Inlet to Fort Story. The city will be required to contribute about $6 million to the project over several years. A Corps public hearing Tuesday also brought no objections and the plan will now be passed on to higher headquarters. It has been developed for nearly five years.

Council also set the cost of accepting all private refuse from outside the city at $3.2 per ton, to comply with the same rate being paid by the City of Norfolk.

First Colony Telephone Company was granted a franchise to operate and place lines in the southern sections of the city.

Bids for new sewers were passed over by Council at (See "Council", p. 2)

Pilot Escapes Crash

Navy Lt. (jg.) Gary Watts apparently escaped serious injury when he was forced to eject from his F4 Phantom jet fighter moments before the plane crashed into a wooded area of the Jack Malbon farm Monday morning.

Watts, attached to Squadron VC-2 at Oceana N.A.S., indicated the plane went out of control during final phase of landing operations as he was returning from an exercise with the Air Interception Control School at the Fleet Anti-Air Warfare Training Center at Dam Neck. Moments after Watts ejected the plane crashed at a point just over a mile from the Oceana Naval Enlisted Housing and about the same distance from Harper Road.

A helicopter recovered Watts shortly after he parachuted into a field, and Navy firefighters extinguished minor fires at the crash site. The impact of the crash buried the aircraft in the marsh leaving only a small portion of the tail assembly visible above ground.

Perhaps the first two witnesses to the incident were Mrs. Ruth Tolliver, and her daughter Adele, who live in a house trailer less than a mile from the crash site.

Mrs. Tolliver said she heard the plane pass over the trailer "and then I heard this loud explosion". She indicated at first she did not pay much attention to the sound since many aircraft fly over that region in taking off and landing at the naval air station.

Moments later, Mrs. Tolliver continued, her daughter came running into the trailer relating about "a man coming down". Adele, aged 7, told the SUN she heard a loud noise then "the airplane fell down in the field and the man and the umbrella came down".

The Navy is continuing its investigation into the cause of the plane crash.

A member of the security staff at the crash site surveys the tail assembly shortly after the crash. This is the only portion of the plane visible after the craft buried itself when it plunged to earth.

Success Grows with Mountain

One of the more popular sightseeing attractions in Virginia Beach in the next few months is bound to be Mt. Trashmore, or Dorser's Mountain, depending on which name one wishes to use.

The official name of the rising mountain is the Virginia Beach Landfill Project, but the other two names have been added affectionately or facetiously.

The landfill area between Independence Blvd. and Windsor Woods, just off the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway, has always been something of an attraction, but now it is even more so.

In the beginning Roland Dorser of the Virginia Beach Health Dept. had an idea to dump Virginia Beach refuse in the area, pour dirt on top of it, compact it tightly and build a mountain. Then he envisioned an amphitheater being cut out of the mountain next to a man-made lake.

Landfill is not a new idea, but usually low areas are used to collect the refuse. The Virginia Beach project was unique since it all started at a relatively high ground level and went up from there.

Through Dorser's dream and hard work and the acceptance by city fathers, the plan was adopted. Because it was an entirely new concept the federal government became interested and has helped in recent years with funds to build Dorser's Mountain. And so Virginia Beach refuse was carted there and slowly the mountain began to grow, as the nation watched.

Until the completion of the expressway, few knew just where it was growing. But today traffic flows past the site and motorists are watching it grow. It was only recently that any real progress could be noted. Suddenly a real mound began to climb above the road level, and the project was expected to be finished by the early or mid-1970's. Only the sea gulls knew for sure.

Swarms of them had a morning and afternoon meal on Mt. Trashmore. Chemicals to sicken them failed to discourage them to a large extent, but now most have gotten the message and look for sweeter hunting grounds.

Thus Virginia Beach residents expected to attend a concert on a trash heap sometime by 1975 or so, or expected to watch the Soap Box derby races on a track built on another heap about the same time.

That was before Norfolk began to experience its very real refuse problems. Norfolk residents generate about 700 tons of garbage a day. The city has incinerators and landfill areas, but the fill areas are full to overflowing in most places and residents were up in arms about the pollution of the belching black smoke from the incinerators.

Norfolk officials looked toward Mt. Trashmore. Finally after months of negotiations, (See "Garbage", p. 2) more. Some 200-plus tons a day arrive from Norfolk now under provisions of a recently-accepted contract between the two.

Welcome to Virginia Beach! A Norfolk garbage truck is weighed in and logged Monday on its initial visit to Mt. Trashmore.

Candidates Expected At Jaycee's Debate

The political activity on the House of Delegates scene in the Democratic primary is rapidly reaching a fever pitch with only slightly more than two weeks before the July 15 election.

The Virginia Beach Jaycees have announced that they will sponsor a public debate among the candidates for the general public on Tuesday, July 1, at 8 p.m. A Jaycee spokesman said the organization is trying to generate interest in the dull campaign.

Questions will be prepared by Robert Stanton and none will be accepted from the floor on the night of the debate.

All four candidates, B. R. Middleton, Rhoe Adams, Richard Guy and Bruce Murphy are expected to take part.

During the past week the candidates have discussed a number of subjects. Guy said there is a need for strong representation by individuals actively involved in the everyday affairs of Virginia Beach. Middleton is in business in Norfolk and Guy said his firm is not even a member of the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce.

Middleton pledged to work to broaden the area's tax base with new industry to keep the economic squeeze away from the middle-class.

Adams called for a law against pollution in Hampton Roads. Murphy called for giving 18-year-olds the vote in Virginia and said that the decision not to was a mistake on the part of the Constitutional special session of the legislature.

Guy also said Virginia Beach is being shortchanged by the state government in highway construction funds.

Murphy said he favored the enactment of the Uniform Monday Holiday legislation in the state of Virginia. The matter is now before Congress.

There are indications that the last two weeks of the campaign will be intensely active by all four candidates for the House.

On the statewide scene, no appearances by candidates in the primary for any of the top three offices are scheduled in Virginia Beach in the next few days.

Conflict Suggested

A front-page story in the weekly newspaper, the VIRGINIA OBSERVER, has for the past two weeks made conflict of interest accusations at Virginia Beach City Treasurer, V.A. "Jack" Etheridge.

In the latest issue, an article says that Etheridge and his deputy, C. E. Upton, purchased parcels of tax delinquent property for a total of $9,150 and later sold it at a profit of $122,200.

The writer, Gordon Dillon also quotes a portion of a state law prohibiting a city treasurer from having any direct or indirect interest in the sale of tax delinquent property.

The article also notes cases where Etheridge was involved in business deals at a profit on which the writer says Etheridge (See "Conflict", p. 2)

Police Confiscate Film

By Les Lehigh

The Virginia Beach Police Detective Division, with the city's Commonwealth Attorney, Tuesday night arrested the owner and manager of the Star Theater and confiscated the film of the theater's current attraction "I Am Curious (Yellow)".

This was done shortly after the 11 p.m. completion of the evening's last showing of the movie.

Capt. R. C. Davis, Detective Division C.O., said Star Theater owner Kenneth Wayland Andrews, Woodrow Ave., Norfolk, and manager Calvin Tyrone Gray, Burlington Road, Virginia Beach, were charged with violation of the state code of Virginia, Section 18.1-230. Andrews was charged with the showing of an obscene movie, while Gray was charged with the willful aiding in preparing and presenting of the film.

Authorities said the arrests and confiscation of the film were made following deliberation between members of the Commonwealth Attorney's office and Police Department following the reported receipt of a large number of complaints over the content of the movie.

Commonwealth Attorney Andre Evans told the SUN, "After numerous complaints I went to see "I Am Curious (Yellow)". In my opinion this movie is hard-core pornography, rather transparently disguised by some extraneous pseudo-intellectual activities. The plot is non-existent and the director has admitted that he deliberately broke sexual taboos in order to shock the audience.

"The question, however, is not whether this motion picture offends me, but whether it violates the contemporary standards of this community. As Commonwealth Attorney I represent the people of Virginia Beach, and they are concerned. If some action is not taken this matter would never be presented to our courts for determination. I don't know about morals in Sweden, but I do question whether this picture meets the standards of public decency in Virginia Beach."

Call it a case of "one-upmanship" if you like, or perhaps a case of "follow the leader", but call it what you will, Virginia Beach State Sen. Edward T. Caton III seems to be having the same kinds of troubles as Lt. Gov. Fred Pollard.

And Caton is not even a supporter of Pollard in the forthcoming Democratic primary gubernatorial race. In fact, he is William Battle's Virginia Beach campaign manager.

Caton received a ticket from a State Trooper on June 5 because his automobile bore an expired State inspection sticker. Caton paid a $10 fine and $7.50 costs on June 16 in Virginia Beach Municipal Court.

In late May Pollard was told by a service attendant in Fredericksburg that the car he was driving also had an expired inspection sticker. Pollard, not taking any chances, transferred to another vehicle immediately and went on campaigning. He did not receive a ticket, however, and the errand auto was duly inspected.

In early May Pollard was given a speeding ticket in Virginia Beach on the Shore Drive. Pollard paid the fine and said he thought the speed limit at that point was 55 m.p.h., when it was actually 45 m.p.h. He was charged with doing 60 m.p.h.

It came to light at that time that Caton had received a speeding ticket for doing 80 m.p.h. in Virginia Beach in a 65 m.p.h. zone in February, 1968, but had not paid the fine. Because the Virginia General Assembly

When questioned on his opinion in the matter, Capt. R. C. Davis said, "I viewed the movie myself, even though I had the opinion of a detective sergeant."

Members of the Detective Division earlier viewed the film during a normally scheduled showing at the Star Theater after the film was confiscated during a performance at a Norfolk theater which Andrews also operates.

Davis continued, "I found it to be a two-hour film with about 15 minutes of what I believe to be obscene footage, and about an hour and 45 minutes of most difficult to follow socialist ideology. Of course, I'm no film critic, but I feel that viewing the film without a desire for the obscene portion would be a waste of time for the average individual."

Caton Evens Match

Call it a case of "one-upmanship" if you like, or perhaps a case of "follow the leader", but call it what you will, Virginia Beach State Sen. Edward T. Caton III seems to be having the same kinds of troubles as Lt. Gov. Fred Pollard.

And Caton is not even a supporter of Pollard in the forthcoming Democratic primary gubernatorial race. In fact, he is William Battle's Virginia Beach campaign manager.

Caton received a ticket from a State Trooper on June 5 because his automobile bore an expired State inspection sticker. Caton paid a $10 fine and $7.50 costs on June 16 in Virginia Beach Municipal Court.

In late May Pollard was told by a service attendant in Fredericksburg that the car he was driving also had an expired inspection sticker. Pollard, not taking any chances, transferred to another vehicle immediately and went on campaigning. He did not receive a ticket, however, and the errand auto was duly inspected.

In early May Pollard was given a speeding ticket in Virginia Beach on the Shore Drive. Pollard paid the fine and said he thought the speed limit at that point was 55 m.p.h., when it was actually 45 m.p.h. He was charged with doing 60 m.p.h.

It came to light at that time that Caton had received a speeding ticket for doing 80 m.p.h. in Virginia Beach in a 65 m.p.h. zone in February, 1968, but had not paid the fine. Because the Virginia General Assembly was in session at the time, Caton wrote the court, citing a law which precludes conviction of members of the legislature while that body is in session. The case never came to court, although many attorneys said later they felt the case should merely have been continued until after the session ended.

Under the provisions of the same law Pollard could have been exempted, since the law covers a period 30 days on either side of the legislative session. When Pollard was ticketed, the 1969 special session had been over less than ten days.

In a third incident, a few days after the speeding ticket Pollard's car was hit at a Richmond intersection and heavily damaged, although no one was injured. So far there have been no reports of Caton's involvement in an accident.

districts by the Division of State Planning and Community Affairs will indeed be a meaningful exercise unless and until local officials are willing to create a Planning District Commission.

To organize a Commission, local governments within a district have to frame a charter in which agreement is reached on matters such as a name for the commission, the location of its headquarters, and the representation to which each member government is entitled.

A commission is envisioned as an agency for effective area-wide planning. It should establish a forum for review of the mutual concerns of local governments and provide a means for coordinating Federal, State, and local efforts to resolve problems affecting the entire area.

The long range objective of the Planning District Program is to strengthen the Commonwealth's local governments by encouraging them to plan more effectively. Working together in a Planning District Commission should give local governments a better chance to recognize matters of mutual concern, and by pooling local and State resources they will have a greater opportunity to solve common problems than they would have individually.

As an aid in getting planning districts organized into Planning District Commissions the State will provide annual grants to help staff, equip and operate an office. Under the law, the State may contribute up to $5,000 for each 25,000 persons in a district. To fully finance Virginia's 22 planning districts would require almost a million dollars a year from the State.

The formula which governs State grants is found in the Virginia Area Development act and says that a Planning District Commission may be eligible for up to $5,000 for each 25,000 people who reside in local governments which are members of the Commission. But in no case will a Commission receive less than $10,000.

The State has drawn up a schedule which sets a maximum and a minimum grant level for each district. Initial State allocations to a Commission will be computed at the minimum level, but the Commission may receive more than the minimum if not all 22 districts become organized. A district which does not organize forfeits its share of the $555,000 and that share will be redistributed among those commissions which do get into operation.

Planning District 20, of which Virginia Beach is to be a member will receive a basic allocation of $50,000, but will receive more, up to the maximum of $70,000, only if the same amount is put up by the localities involved. The localities must also match the basic $50,000 grant.

City Manager Thomas Maxwell of Norfolk and City Manager Roger Scott of Virginia Beach reached agreement whereby Virginia Beach would accept Norfolk's garbage at exactly double the cost ($3.12 per ton) of the cost of handling Virginia Beach garbage.

This amount was based on Norfolk's charging Virginia Beach double rates for water. Permanent contracts on both are now underway, (and going smoothly, according to Scott) and it is hoped that the rates on both can be reduced.

The federal government also approved of the acceptance of Norfolk garbage, but required additional equipment. Some has arrived. One more compactor is on order.

Monday morning after several delays the first Norfolk trucks rolled into the landfill area and by that afternoon had deposited some 200 tons of Norfolk refuse. About the same was deposited in the next two days.

Virginia Beach Director of Public Works Charles Kiley said the amount will increase in time, but that in the beginning all concerned wanted to take it easy to see what problems developed.

None did, according to Kiley, who was in constant touch with Scott all day Monday. Everything went according to plan. The mountain grew noticeably. And the sea gulls had a field day.

In the next few months the skyline in the area will definitely change, and the best estimates are that when capacity is reached each day, the area will be full and fully mountainous in about a year. Then the amphitheater and racetrack can be built, while Virginia Beach and Norfolk cart the garbage to new sites already being negotiated for.

It's worth a drive on the expressway at least once a week now to watch the mountain grow. And in the years to come, Virginia Beach and Norfolk residents may muse as they hear music that they helped create the site.

Seaman Drowns

Navy officials say a 20-year-old apprentice seaman from Florence, S.C., drowned Monday afternoon in waters off Pier 12, Little Creek Amphibious Base. According to authorities Joseph E. Cate accidentally drowned when he fell from the salvage ship USS Recovery. Divers recovered Cate's body about two hours later.

Pinned Under Wreck

A 19-year-old Norfolk resident has become the 16th traffic fatality of the year in Virginia Beach. Police officials said Glenn Fann of Arthur Circle died early Monday morning of injuries received a week ago when his car overturned into a ditch on Sandbridge Road. Investigators said Fann was pinned beneath the wreckage of the car. A passenger in the auto, identified as Allen Bishop 18, of Chesapeake, is reported making satisfactory recovery from her injuries.

Whiskey Charges Made

Floyd E. Bonney of Back Bay Station has been bound over to a grand jury charged with aiding and abetting in the manufacture of illegal whiskey. Bonney, 31, was identified as the lessee of a West Neck Road house connected with the April raid on a still in a wooded region behind the house. Although police investigators said Bonney was arrested about a week after the raid, he was allegedly seen at the house on the day of the raid. Two other men, identified as John H. Dull of Back Bay Station and John A. Powell of Chesapeake are facing court appearance July 10 on charges of illegally manufacturing whiskey. Police officials said Dull and Powell were both arrested at the still site.

Assailant Sought

Virginia Beach police continue their search for the assailant of a 17-year old Norfolk girl who contends she was raped last Saturday night. According to the girl, she was forced into an auto in the Wards Corner section of Norfolk and driven to a remote area off South Lynnhaven Road in Virginia Beach and forced to submit to the advances of her assailant. Investigators quote the girl with saying she fled after the attack and summoned police by phone from a nearby home.

Sues Magazine

Navy Lt. Richard J. Marcinke, of Virginia Beach, is suing Male Magazine as the result of a story the magazine published allegedly describing his duties as commanding officer of Seal Team 2 while the unit was stationed in Vietnam. In his suit filed in U. S. District Court in Norfolk which seeks a sum of $1.15 million, Marcinke not only contends the story was libelous and an invasion of his privacy, but that it was published without his permission. The November 1967 story, reportedly entitled "Lt. 'Dem Dink' Marcinke, The Navy's Deadliest Vietnam Shark Man" according to Marcinke's suit referred to him in such terms as "the scourge of the bloody Viet waterways", "human fish phantom", and a "Cong-killing hot-shot".

'Torpedo' Closes Span

The erroneous report of a torpedo striking pilings near the three-mile mark of the Chesapeake Bay Bridge Tunnel resulted in the closing of the span to vehicular traffic for more than an hour last Thursday. The reported sighting of an object about 18 inches long bearing the marking "Mark 64" touched off a search of the waters and pilings by members of the Coast Guard stationed at Little Creek, the Fort Story Explosive Ordnance Demolition team and men of the Navy Underwater Demolition Team. Negative results from the on-scene search and lack of an official record of any torpedoes fitting the description of the sighting, led to the classifying of the object sighted as being an antisubmarine marker or smoke flare, and the crossing was reopened to traffic.

Charge Dismissed

Charges of manslaughter against Oscar G. Thomas, resulting from a fatal accident May 25 on the Chesapeake Bay Bridge Tunnel, were dismissed during proceedings Monday in Municipal Court. Associate Judge Thomas F. Betz, Jr., however, found Thomas guilty of reckless driving, fined him $250, suspended his drivers license for six months, and imposed a suspended 60-day jail sentence. The collision involved Thomas' tractor-trailer truck and the car of Marine Sgt. Dennis R. Mowbray took the life of Mowbray and threw Thomas over the bridge railing into Chesapeake Bay.

Car Overturns

Volunteers from the Knotts Island and Creeds Rescue Squads were called into service early Sunday morning following an accident which claimed two lives and injured two other persons. According to investigators, Dwight C. Wade, 22, attached to the USS Saratoga, and John R. Hutchinson, 18, of Knotts Island were fatally injured when their auto left the roadway and overturned a short distance from the ferry landing. Two other passengers in the car, identified as Ernest Waterfield, 19, and Kent Anspil, 17, received minor injuries in the 2 a.m. accident. The accident occurred in North Carolina.

Conviction Set Aside

Circuit Court Judge Robert S. Wahab, Jr., has set aside the manslaughter conviction of Navy P.O.2, Dennis D. Briggs as being contrary to law and evidence. Briggs was found guilty of the charge as a result of an accident last August which claimed the life of Phillip R. Pinching, while he was a passenger in Briggs' auto. Judge Wahab, however, found Briggs guilty of reckless driving and uphold an original fine of $200 which was imposed at the time of the manslaughter conviction.

Etheridge: No Rebuilding

City Treas. V. Alfred (Jack) Etheridge said he does not intend to rebuild his beach cottage which was destroyed by fire after lightning struck the structure last Thursday morning. Although the building, which formerly served as the False Cape Coast Guard Station, was destroyed by fire which swept through the two story frame structure, all 11 occupants of the beach house managed to escape without injury. Those reportedly occupying the cottage at the time were identified as Etheridge's wife, Mary Belle, their son, V. A. Etheridge, Jr., his wife and their daughter, Mrs. Roger Malbon plus three of her children and three other unidentified guests. Members of the Princess Anne Court House Volunteer Fire Department were able to reach the building with an ambulance shortly after receiving a report of the incident to whatever medical assistance needed. However, fire fighting equipment from the Court House or Creeds departments were unable to reach the burning structure due to the remote location of the building in the sand dunes and beach front of the region.

Scott's recommendation because of the poor money market at present and because of problems of interest on the sale of bonds to finance the projects.

During the informal session several Councilmen noted their distress with recent drownings in borrow pits, but were not able to come up with any realistic restrictions that would help the situation. The Birdneck Point sewage problem would appear to be settled, since there are health problems in the area and since money to build the lines can be recovered in time from residents and from the Cavalier Yacht and Country Club.

Councilman Larry Marshall recommended that shrubbery planted along Independence Blvd. be removed, since it was not being kept up and weeds were making it more of an eyesore. Scott noted that no more shrubbery is being planted on road projects because of the problem of maintenance and because most of it was planted under funds of an early federal grant now ended.

City May Revise Law

Clarification of whether or not a vagrancy law is enforceable in Virginia Beach may be made within a very short time.

Chief Justice of the Peace Alvin L. Rodgers recently requested J.P.'s of the resort city to cease issuance of vagrancy warrants as a result of the dismissal of a large number of vagrancy charges on Virginia Beach court dockets, a step which apparently stemmed from confusion over validity of the law as based on the city code of Virginia Beach.

Although the state statute covering vagrancy was repealed by the 1968 General Assembly and last week was ruled unconstitutional in Richmond's U.S. District Court, State Atty. Gen. Robert Button last February ruled that in his opinion the Virginia Beach vagrancy etheridge was able to get the property properly rezoned when other applicants had not been successful.

Last week the same newspaper reported that Etheridge had sold the names of delinquent taxpayers to real estate developers at $5 a name, receiving more than $28,000.

Etheridge said he had searched titles on his own time, although this week's article states that a former employee said she helped compile the lists on office time.

Etheridge said nothing was improper in the searching of the titles as a second job and that he was only trying to get enough money to educate his children.

Virginia Beach Commonwealth's Attorney Evans said he has looked into the latest charges made by the newspaper and is satisfied there has been no wrongdoing on Etheridge's part. He added that the matter is closed, as far as he is concerned.

"My understanding is that the property in question was purchased through Circuit Court proceedings and was handled by a special commission appointed by that court," said Evans.

He added that the sale of the property then had to be approved by the court after the necessary investigation of the commission and after a report of appraisers was received.

"The section (of the state code) involving treasurers and the purchase of tax delinquent land refers to a different kind of sale, where the treasurer and not the court sells the land for taxes," said Evans.

Sgt. Larry W. Kell, whose wife, Judy, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Dashiell of Rittman Road, has been recognized for helping his unit earn the U. S. Air Force Flying Safety Plaque.

Airman I.C. Michael D. Scott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Claude B. Scott of Comanche Road, has been recognized for helping his unit earn the U. S. Air Force Flying Safety Plaque.

Marshall said, "With all respect to Mr. Button, we have some judges who on cases thus far would agree with Judge Merighe (who ruled the state statute unconstitutional), and we are trying to work out an ordinance which would pass the constitutional test."

The difficulty of charging a person with being a vagrant, only to later have the individual in question be able to satisfy legal points which would clear him of vagrancy and therefore possibly result in what might be construed as an act of police harassment was also discussed with Marshall. He said, "You don't have an ordinance just for harassment. It's difficult to pass an ordinance which will give a police officer reasonable cause for making an arrest on vagrancy."

Marshall summarized the status of the question by saying "we are studying the question and comparing ordinances of other cities in hopes of arriving at a suitable ordinance. We are trying to draft an ordinance which will overcome this constitutional question."

Lovisi is also awaiting action before a grand jury on the charge of sodomy. He remains free on bond pending final outcome of the legal proceedings.

Circus Appearing June 26- 29

Khedive Temple will again this year present the Hamid-Morton Shrine Circus at Princess Anne High School Stadium, June 26-29.

This circus is unique in the fact that it is family entertainment, and the price of admission is all required to see the entire performance. There are no side-shows or extra attractions. The tickets are priced at $1 for children, $2 for adults including tax.

One of the acts in the Hamid-Morton Circus stars a horse that is howlingly close to being human. The act, Rosaire and Tony the Wonder Horse, is a decidedly different one that can be enjoyed by the whole family.

A routine of flowing rapport between horse and man, this sensational act has delighted and amazed audiences in all of the amazing major amusement centers of the world.

Last year through the generosity of Tidewater citizens, business men, and Shriners, more than 13,000 deserving children enjoyed a free trip to the circus. Again this year free tickets are available, and it is hoped that no child wishing to see this circus will be denied.

Arrangements for free tickets for any deserving child or group of children may be made by contacting Khedive Temple, 243 West Freemason Street, Norfolk.

BADGES & BANTER

By Les Lehigh

Two members of the 1st Police Precinct are studying law enforcement at Old Dominion College on their off duty hours. Sgt. W. W. Baker and officer J. C. McDonald are pursuing the regular college courses under provisions of the federal Omnibus Crime Bill.

The sound of wedding bells are still echoing through the Davis Corner Volunteer Fire Department. Bill Godley recently exchanged vows of holy matrimony with the former Miss Susan Braun. Incidentally members of the Department are expected to begin training shortly in the forming of a diving team to assist in rescue operations in waters of the resort city.

Another young lady has joined the staff in the police department's communications room at Princess Anne Headquarters. Indications are Miss Jeann Young is rapidly becoming adept at performing the many duties associated with her assignment.

A delegation from the Kempsville Volunteer Fire Department were in Rochester, N.Y. this week looking over a new engine the company is hoping to obtain. Those who made the trip included Chief Elden Swartzentruber, Graham White, Bob Smith, Stuart Bauxbaum, and Chris Eugene. Indications are no firm decision has been made as yet regarding purchase of the fire engine.

Members of the Virginia Beach police softball team will again engage in competition tonight when they face the Lowes' team at 9 p.m. on the field at Thoroughgood Elementary School. We understand a good showing of fans at the game could lend the necessary moral support to help them overcome a slump which has given them one win and nine losses. Several players tell us they have at least overcome one handicap which was giving them trouble—that of exhaustion from having to spend long periods of time in the field in first innings of unbelievable duration in length.

Ground Broken for TAHB

The mayors of three Tidewater cities and a former mayor officiated Monday afternoon at the groundbreaking ceremonies for the Tidewater Association of Home Builders Executive Office Building.

Mayor Frank A. Dusch of Virginia Beach, Mayor Roy B. Martin of Norfolk, Chesapeake's Mayor Gerdon A. Treakle and Portsmouth's former Mayor R. Irvine Smith joined together to turn the first shovel of dirt at the site of the home builders' new home at 5665 Virginia Beach Blvd. Construction of the building will begin immediately with Dave Howard serving as construction superintendent and Ed Carson in charge of landscaping.

The single story structure, to be built of brick, stone and glass, was designed by the architectural firm of Brundage, Cohen, Holten and Kroskin. It will house several offices and include a combination board meeting-conference room and library. Parking spaces for 35 cars have been allotted.

TAHB officers attending the ceremony were President, Howard M. Weisberg, who addressed the group briefly, Vice-Presidents, David A. Howard and Bernard Kroll, Treasurer, William J. Fanney, Secretary, Joseph C. Addington, Jr. and Executive Director, Malcolm G. Evans.

The Tidewater Association of Home Builders was formed in 1953 for the purpose of improving the home building industry for both buyer and builder through development of new methods and use of new materials to reduce costs while increasing quality.

Pembroke to Open Pool

The Civic League of Pembroke Meadows Recreation Center will have its official pool opening on July 3 at 5:30 p.m.

Mayor Frank A. Dusch has agreed to officiate. Other city officials invited are city manager; Larry Marshall, city councilman; and Harold Whitehurst, director of Recreation and Parks.

On July 4 at 10 a.m., there will be an old-fashioned 4th of July parade through Pembroke Meadows, winding up at the pool site. All members of the Pembroke Meadows Recreation Center are invited to participate.

There will be prizes awarded for the best patriotically decorated or dressed bikes, carriages, wagons, babies, adults and for the most unusual musical instrument in the parade. Uncle Sam, Dan Shields, will strike up the band, and Civic League Pres. C. C. Taylor and Recreation Center Director Fred Pearson will start the parade rolling.

A full day of fun and games is planned following the parade at the pool.

1970 Convention Plans Made

On a recent boat tour of the Broad Bay area, plans were discussed for the Sept. 17-20, 1970 Mid-Atlantic Shrine Convention.

Plans for a convention of this size necessitates many hours of advanced preparation, and the atmosphere of a relaxed boat ride lends itself well to the very complicated nature of this meeting.

In 1968 and 1969 the conventions were held in Atlantic City, New Jersey, and brought approximately ten thousand conventioners to that area.

Plans for the 1969 Fall Civic Center Convention Calendar include the following: Sept. 12-14, Jehovah's Witnesses Convention; Oct. 16-19, Medical Society of Virginia Convention; and Oct. 27-30, Pentecostal Fellowship of North America Convention.

Convention highlights for 1970 will include the Mid-Atlantic Shrine Convention and the Virginia Association of Rescue Squads, which is scheduled for Sept. 24-26.

Apts. Total 1,220

Applications for the construction of 1,220 apartment units will be heard by the Virginia Beach Planning Commission at the July 8 public hearing.

A.E. Havens Jr. is making application for the largest number of units—808. This application is for a change of zoning and use permit to construct the units on property south of Indian River Road, west of Interstate 64 in the Woodhaven area. Included in this application is a change of zoning from Residence Duplex District 1 to Residence Duplex District 1 with a Motel and Tourist and Restaurant District Supplement and General Industrial District 2. This change of zoning is for property located south of Indian River Road, east of Interstate 64.

Albert A. Kroll, Bernard Kroll and Ruth H. Cohen will apply for a use permit to construct 350 apartment units on property located north of Holland Road and east of South Lynhaven Road in the Princess Anne Plaza-Cardinal Estates area.

Bay Holding Corp. is applying for a change of zoning and use permit in the Gun Hall Manor area. This application includes a change of zoning from Residence Duplex District 2 to Multiple Family Residence District on property north of Gunn Hall Drive east of Oceana Blvd. for the construction of 40 apartment units. There is also a change of zoning to Limited Commercial District 3 for adjoining property. One application will be heard that was deferred from last month. This is for the construction of 22 apartment units on property south of Norfolk Avenue and west of Baltic Avenue. The application is by Hado Development Corporation.

Also deferred from last month is an application by Princess Anne Properties, Inc. for a use permit for camping sites and related facilities on property in the Princess Anne Plaza area.

Among the new applications to be heard this month is one by the City's Recreation Department for a use permit to operate a park on property located on the west side of London Bridge Road south of Adventure Trail. This will be a picnic area located at a point close enough to Oceana to observe the air traffic there, similar to Observation Point.

A change of zoning is being applied for by OCH Corporation from Residence Suburban District 4 to Multiple Family Residence District on property located west of Little Neck Road and north of Edinburgh Drive in the Kings Grant area. A use permit for dancing and live entertainment will be applied for by Kay-Tee Corporation. This application is for Joe's Fish Market, which is located on the west side of Atlantic Avenue north of 19th Street.

Marine Inspectors Hired

Two new marine inspectors have been hired to enforce seafood laws in the Chesapeake Bay area, particularly the crab conservation laws.

In addition to the inspectors the Virginia Marine Resources commission will use a boat to patrol the waters, according to Ernest Abbott, district inspector for the Commission.

The new inspectors are R.L. Diffeenderfer and B. H. Ames. With the addition of the two men Abbott says the area where most female crabs spawn can be covered more thoroughly. Until now much of the time has been involved in paperwork. Abbott listed the four violations most frequently committed as: commercial crabbing without a license, commercial crabbing at night or on Sunday, taking crabs that are under-size (crabs less than five inches long cannot be taken), and taking sponge crabs in the restricted area between May 15 and Sept. 15 (this area starts at the Nansemond Hotel at Ocean View, runs north to Thimble Shoals Lighthouse, northeast to Chape Charles Lighthouse on Smith Island, south to Cape Henry and then west along the shoreline back to the Nansemond Hotel).

Poor Planning Already

When statewide planning districts were discussed as a means of closer cooperation between like areas and as a means of drawing the state government much closer to local affairs and local problems, the plan was generally hailed as a possible panacea.

But by the time the original utopian proposals were watered down by the legislature, and talked almost to death by public hearings over the period of another year, many began to have doubts as to success.

Now the districts have been delineated. Virginia Beach has been placed in a district with the three other south Hampton Roads cities, two other small cities, and three generally rural counties. (See page 1 story.)

Just what basis for working together this large area can possibly have at present is hard to imagine. The urban problems are so removed from the rural ones. The commission it replaces was not this large, and was often bulky, because of the difference of planning problems and goals.

The cities of Virginia Beach, Norfolk, Portsmouth and Chesapeake have much in common, and should have been the only participants in a single district for the common good. There is talk also that Norfolk won't even participate, thus defeating the entire purpose. Virginia Beach will try, but the results are not expected to be the panacea.

Because it is all so new we give it time to straighten out its problems, but how it can work according to the much-heralded plan for the future is hard to see. Instead of eliminating or solving problems, it looks like the state has created some new ones. And localities like Virginia Beach are bound to be the eventual losers.

He Will Be Missed

Virginia Beach has lost a fine sportsman and a true friend. Tom Strange's death last weekend left a difficult void to fill. Although he knew the end was near, he continued in his position as golf pro at White Sands as long as he could.

He was an outstanding golfer, perhaps the best the city has ever known, and a maddened to the sport. But further he was a friendly man, always willing to talk, especially if the conversation got around to sports, and particularly golf.

Many young golfers today owe their success to Tom Strange, and many of his professional contemporaries considered him one of the best.

He left Virginia Beach several times and always came back to the city he loved. Both the man and his talents will be missed.

Conflicting Stories

There are conflicting opinions on whether Virginia Beach City Treas. V.A. "Jack" Etheridge is involved in any conflict of interest matter or political "hanky-panky", as Henry Howell calls it.

The weekly newspaper, the VIRGINIA OBSERVER, said Etheridge and a deputy purchased some tax delinquent land in Virginia Beach, some $9,150 of it which later was sold by them for $131,350,000. The article went on to say that state law prohibits a city treasurer from having any direct or indirect interest in the sale of such property.

Virginia Beach Common-wealth's Attorney Andre Evans said it is his opinion that since the land in question was purchased through court proceedings after all legal steps had been taken the law was not violated. Evans said the law pertained to the purchase of land for sale by the treasurer for tax delinquency, and not by the courts.

This, however, seems to be a rather grey area. And while Evans says the matter is closed as far as he is concerned, it would seem that an interpretation by the State Attorney General would be proper and important here. Evans has been quick to ask for other conflict of interest opinions from Richmond. Political ally of Evans or not, rumors and allegations concerning Etheridge, a key aide in the William Battle for Governor campaign, have been running rather high lately and need clarifying.

The people of Virginia Beach and the people of the state are owed this, and it should not be treated lightly or attempted to be covered up. Etheridge said he had no comment. We think he should.

After all if Etheridge was indiscreet in his actions, others have been fired for that.

"Norfolk Beach"

The Norfolk Chamber of Commerce is compiling a survey of its members concerning their feelings on renaming Ocean View, "Norfolk Beach". We vote YES. Norfolk doesn't have an oceanfront, as the name implies. In this area only Virginia Beach does.

This misnomer must have confused folks for years, since the only view of the Ocean from there is through field glasses, and the advertising of the Chamber and the city of Norfolk must have been hard put to explain that Ocean View does not offer an ocean or even a view of it. Norfolk Beach certainly tells the story better.

If this is really a time of decision for Norfolk, as the Chamber implies, let's finally set the record straight and rename the place properly.

'PUT SOMETHING IN THE POT, BOY!'

to the editor

Lynnhaven Road

Editor: VIRGINIA BEACH SUN,
I am deeply concerned about the condition of the heavily traveled portion of South Lynnhaven Road from the expressway south to Cox's Bridge. It is very narrow and uneven. In some spots, especially close to the toll road, deep drainage ditches have been cut recently, which are undermining the sides of the road badly. This is also true in other areas of the relatively short, but treacherous stretch of road.

It hasn't been too long ago since a school bus full of children went into a ditch on South Lynnhaven Road south of Cox's Bridge. Public opinion and much publicity soon brought about repairs to that section of the road. Now in September the new Plaza Junior High School will open at Silina Drive and Lynnhaven Road, right in the middle of this bad section. Will it take another school bus accident, maybe this time in which someone will be killed, before city officials make a move to correct a bad situation? I hope not. Something should be done immediately before it's too late.

I have been told by city employees whom I have called about this that engineering studies have been completed on repairing and widening the road and even straightening out the bad curve right at the bridge but that there are still several problems to be ironed out before anything will be done. Money, they tell me, is part of the problem.

We, who live in this area are just as entitled to good roads as anyone else in the city. I have to travel that road everyday, twice a day to reach my place of employment. I always breathe easier after I have passed it.

Please, can your newspaper look into what is the holdup on fixing this horrible road. You will be doing all of us who use it a favor, and you may be saving some school child's life.

Mrs. Anthony R. Morton

Special Report

Which One Is Better?

Just which one, Pepsi or Coke, has the best carbonation, may never be settled, but the matter of who the Democratic nominee for Governor of Virginia will be, on July 15.

No one denies any candidate thought to conduct a poll, but it does become interesting when the 1st question on a poll which is full of political and racial questions is concerned with which soft drink is the better one.

Even more interesting is the fact that the poll in question, made for William Battle, was at first denied by the Pepsi folks of central Virginia. But a reporter for the VIRGINIA SENTINEL brought out the facts that the Pepsi company paid $8,200 for the poll to be made, although they still refuse to discuss the matter.

Oh the other hand, Battle says, "So what if they did pay part?" For the one question concerning Pepsi and Coke, $8,200, as the company's part, does seem a bit high.

The entire matter came out at a recent labor convention and received widespread publicity, except in Tidewater, where the newspapers in Norfolk printed "nary a word." The SENTINEL article also brought out the close ties of Battle and the Pepsi folks and their family in central Virginia.

No one has said there was any violation of any law, but it does give cause to wonder why Pepsi would finance a political poll, then the folks who run that particular branch of the company being so reluctant to talk about it.

In possible retaliation, Battle has accused Fred Pollard of being the trucker's lobby candidate. Pollard obviously denies this.

As the campaign draws to a close on a rather dull note, the spectacular is expected. And that spectacular must be in the form of accusations of one candidate against the other, either in the form of personality or of "hanky-panky", to quote Henry Howell. All concerned expect a runoff primary in August, but still no one except the three candidates are ready to say who will be in it. All three of them are certain they are ranking number one and will be in the runoff.

Obviously, this is incorrect, since only two of them will be. Privately most political sources feel that Henry Howell will be one of them, but they are still reluctant to say which one of the other two it will be.

Recent developments in New York City have pointed to a conservative mood of the voters, and in Virginia, conservatism has always been the rule. This would seem to favor Pollard.

Pollard is running his campaign on experience in Virginia. Battle is running his campaign on federal experience. Howell is still trying to keep the big boys honest.

What it all boils down to is a rather low-key campaign between Pollard and Battle, while Howell tries hard to garner the "undecided" support.

All are aware that the approximately 3 per cent who admit to being undecided can swing this election one way or the other. While Battle and Pollard continue to act confident in attempts to get this vote, Howell is begging for it, and just might get a good deal of it.

No new issues have come into the campaign, but none were really expected. Mostly all the candidates can do is talk about their records and make a few brash promises.

The Pollard ticket definitely has the advantage of presenting a three-man unified front, while the others appear to be floundering around looking for reasons to get together in the final analysis after the runoff.

With only two major candidates in the running for Lt. Governor this is the only race where a runoff is not expected. At least that one will be decided on July 15, even if we never know which has the better carbonation, Pepsi or Coke.

SUN SPOTS

By H. Joseph Lowenthal, Jr.

"No, I flatly refuse to drive it," she said. "Everytime I do, something goes wrong."

"Try it once more," he begged. "Maybe today will be different."

"I doubt it," she said quickly. "Whoever heard of the distributor hat jumping off like it did last time?"

"That's the distributor cap," he pointed out. "And it could have happened to anyone. The clamps came loose, that's all."

"Besides it's not air conditioned," she said.

"Certainly it's air conditioned," he said. "That back window won't close and the side windows don't close all the way either. It was plenty cool all winter."

The Air Conditioned Cave

"I don't mean that kind of air conditioning," she said. "I mean hot air. I get enough of that when I try to get the good car from you."

"Very funny," he said. "But I need the good car too. You don't want me to arrive at my appointments looking all wilted, do you?"

"Yes," she said. "If it means I have to drive that would-be-convertible that won't convert." "Hey, that's an idea. It will too convert. Even if the top won't come back up," he said. "That ought to keep you cool while you're driving."

"Suppose it rains?" she asked.

"So you'll get a little wet," he said. "That would cool you off too."

"I'm driving the station wagon with factory installed air conditioning," she said firmly.

"Yeah, I figured you were," he said. "But there's never any harm in trying. You're just spoiled that's all."

"Me? Spoiled?" she asked indignantly. "How can you say such a thing? You know I could be happy living in a cave."

"Sure you would," he said. "If you could take the dishwasher, foam mattress, color television and your decorator with you."

"That's not fair," she said. "We didn't have any of those conveniences when we got married, and we survived."

"We had deodorant, and we darned near didn't survive," he said. "Suppose you had to go through that first hot summer we were married. Remember the hot room we lived in? We used to visit air conditioned friends whenever we could and we'd nearly suffocate getting there in the car without."

"I wonder how the pioneers made it?" she asked seriously. "They visited the Indians who air conditioned them with arrows," he said.

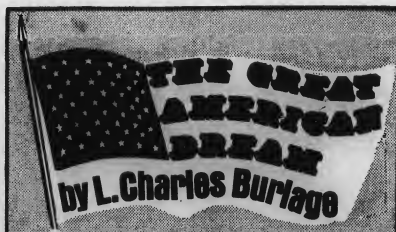

"All right, so we're spoiled," she said. "But I still say. I could live in a cave and like it."

"So go live in a cave," he said. "I like all the comforts of my home and car."

"Well, I like them too," she said. "And maybe I'd only want to live there about two weeks."

"That figures," he said. "But leave me the keys to the air conditioned car while you're gone."

"That's a deal, but today you're going to drive the convertible and I'm going in comfort," she said. "I'll drive it tomorrow. I want to get ready for the cave gradually."

Politics as recently as five or six years ago was a relatively pleasant game.

The issues to which the people responded were fewer and of a less urgent nature. Authority or the "establishment" (whatever that is), is being attacked on a world-wide basis. Colleges seem to be in the forefront of all this social upheaval. There seems to be little doubt that a reorganization of the social structure around the world is underway.

The average voter in this country is discontented and unhappy. Since most of the burning issues of today have been 300 years in their formation, the willingness to compromise has diminished and the life of the politician has become correspondingly more hazardous. Since the very essence of politics involves the skillful use of the art of compromise, no politician today is secure in his office. Couple this with the unparalleled growth in mass communication (especially television), and the insecure position of political life becomes obvious.

It is significant to observe the substantial number of Virginia politicians in the House of Delegates who decided not to seek re-election in 1969. There seems to be a growing belief that the problems associated with seeking and holding public office outweigh the advantages of public office.

The problem of the politician today is nowhere more evident than in the office of City councilman. This is one political office in which the holder is confronted with half of his neighbors and friends on one side of an issue, and half on the other side of the same issue.

The most frequently troublesome issue to come before a City councilman is the question of zoning. It has long been the writer's belief that a city councilman who decides each issue on its merits without considering the number of voters for or against a given issue, couldn't possibly be re-elected beyond his second term.

The unpleasant aspects of a political career unfortunately are causing many good men and women to refrain from seeking public office. In view of the distasteful aspects it would be most unlikely that many candidates would offer solely on the basis of potential financial reward; as there would seem to be many other areas where financial success could more easily be attained.

It has always been the belief of the writer that the vast majority of candidates for public office sincerely believe that he or she has a contribution to make.

As voters we should admire and respect the courage and sacrifice of all men and women who offer for and hold public office. We should try harder to be more charitable in our criticisms and more understanding of their burdens. Maybe this would be a start towards reducing the level of disorder and lawlessness in this nation.

These young people from Knoxville, Tenn., are busily engaged in repainting a home on Morse Avenue. Sally Woods, 15, renews her supply of paint as Frank Limpus, 14, touches up a window trim and Marie Salem, 14, continues repainting the wall of the home.

They're Sold on Working

A group of 20 young people are spending an unusual two weeks in Virginia Beach performing a humanitarian service for people they have never met before and will probably never see again.

These boys and girls, Negro and white, representing a number of creeds, religions and a varied cross section of social and economic backgrounds, are engaged in a summer work camp sponsored by the American Friends Service Committee.

The young people ranging in age from 14 to 20 are engaged in rebuilding and repainting deteriorated homes of residents of Virginia Beach who because of being financially unable to, or because they are too far advanced in years to take care of the repairs themselves.

The program is being carried out through the invitation of the Seateck Community Center, which also acts as a clearing house on requests from residents of the city to obtain the services of the work camp. The group operates out of the Friends School on Laskin Road, which also serves as their living quarters, and is being partially supported through a small donation from the Mayors Council on Youth Opportunity.

Rick Sprague, a 26-year-old graduate student of Duke University majoring in psychology, from Chapel Hill, N.C., is the group's adult project leader. He is being assisted by two married couples who volunteered their services.

Sprague points out that each member of the group is here on a volunteer basis, and that in addition to giving up two weeks of their summer vacation for the project, each member pays a tuition of $30 for the privilege of taking part in the program.

The group is broken up into small work parties and spend seven and a half hours per day performing such jobs as physically repairing homes, even to the point of rebuilding exterior walls which contain large openings as the result of damage or deterioration, repairing leaky roofs, and/or repainting the buildings.

Sprague said each member of the group responds to work assignments on a purely voluntary basis and that the only compensation they receive for their work is a deep feeling of personal satisfaction in knowing they have helped someone less fortunate than themselves. It is anticipated that before the work camp is disbanded and the young people leave the resort city they will have repaired approximately 15 homes.

Three young people in the group are residents of Virginia Beach. They are Larry Boone, Thadious Williams and Wardell Grinstead. The remainder of the group come from other locations in Virginia, North Carolina, Georgia, Louisiana, Florida, Tennessee and South Carolina.

Sprague speaks very highly of the members of the work camp and says they are deeply concerned over what they have found through their work. Sprague expressed their view, "several of the young people have expressed opinions that they didn't believe people have to live under such deprived conditions and sincerely want to know what can be done to correct this situation." He adds the program also points out that "the attitude of young people being lazy is just not true; it's just a question of providing an opportunity of something for them to do."

This marks the third year the program has been carried out in Virginia Beach, and Sprague reflects the feelings of many others when he expressed his feeling about the project. He said, "I came into the program a skeptic, but I'm sold on the idea now."

Stamp Covers Available

Manned Spacecraft Recovery Forces of the U.S. Navy will provide commemorative cachet and cancellation services for the upcoming Apollo 11 manned space flight to the moon.

Philatelic coordinators designated for Atlantic and Pacific Fleet Recovery Forces (Task Forces 140 and 130) will receive all such covers and make the distribution to assigned ships.

To permit adequate time for required handling of covers, collectors should send pre-stamped, self-addressed envelopes to the appropriate coordinator prior to July 4, 1969, in accordance with U. S. Post Office Department Regulations, only

U. S. postage may be used on covers submitted. Stamps (postage) of other countries or the United Nations cannot be used, and cash or checks in lieu of postage cannot be accepted. It is further requested that collectors furnish standard size covers, 3 5/8 inches by 6 1/2 inches with a filler inserted to simplify handling.

Due to the popularity of the cancellation service and the limited postal facilities on recovery ships, the coordinators for Task Force 140 and Task Force 130 will accept a maximum of 6 covers from individual collectors (two covers per recovery ship) for the Apollo 11 mission.

Addresses for the Atlantic and Pacific area Coordinators are: Task Force 140, Public Affairs Office (Apollo 11), Manned Spacecraft Recovery Force, Atlantic, Bldg. SP-71 Naval Air Station, Norfolk, Va. 23511 and Task Force 130, Chief-in-Charge (Apollo 11), Navy Terminal Post Office, FPO San Francisco, Calif. 96610.

Johnson To Head Republicans

In a close race the Virginia Beach Republican City Committee elected Elbert L. Johnson as its new chairman, succeeding John A. Field III, who resigned effective July 1.

Johnson defeated Jimmie S. Fant, 11 votes to nine. The new chairman is an architectural estimator for U.S. Plywood in Norfolk.

Field resigned to accept an assistant U. S. District Attorney post next month, but is still responsible for setting up the city convention scheduled for July 8. A site for the convention is still not settled, but Field said he is hopeful of holding it in a school.

A flap recently over use of a courtroom for the convention is apparently the reason for the confusion over a site. City Manager Roger Scott at first said the convention could not be held in a courtroom this time, as had been the practice of both major parties for some years. After he said this would be the last such convention to be held in a courtroom.

At the GOP city convention there will be 500 votes from the city's 26 precincts, allotted on the basis of the Republican vote cast in the 1968 presidential election.

The Republicans now have two candidates for the House of Delegates from Virginia Beach, and there is still speculation that two more might seek the two available spots on the ticket to oppose the winners of the July Democratic primary.

During the city committee meeting last Thursday attorney Robert M. Furnis, Jr., a partner in a Norfolk law firm announced he would seek the nomination. Businessman Wallace F. Schwieger had announced some time ago that he too would seek the nomination.

Lynnhaven Dredging To Begin

The first stage of work aimed at dredging a channel in the Western Branch of the Lynnhaven River from Virginia Beach Blvd. at Thalia Creek to Lynnhaven Inlet should begin in the near future.

The dredging of the two-mile section of the river has been strongly urged by property owners in the area for some time and has been high on the priority list of dredging projects of City Council.

Now that all plans are completed, easements and disposal areas obtained and a U. S. Army Corps of Engineers permit issued, the initial phase of the operation is expected to begin soon. Lines will be laid to handle the material being dredged by the city's large dredge. The project is expected to be finished within a year.

The channel will be deepened to six feet and will be 60 feet wide. The cost of the project is estimated at slightly less than $150,000.

Approximately 1,000 boatowners along the route will be the immediate winners when the project is completed, but eventually there are plans for a boat launching ramp near Princess Anne High School, which will make it a simple matter for boatowners to launch craft there and reach Chesapeake Bay in a matter of minutes.

Actor David Califf (right) is able to keep two young ladies (Carolee Silcox, standing, and Claudine Iddings) on the string while the lights are out in his apartment. Meanwhile, neighbor Pat Stoner thinks he knows what's going on, but wait until the fuse is fixed! All appear in Wedgewood Theatre's current attraction, "Black Comedy," through July 13.

'Black Comedy' Is Full Night

Wedgewood Theatre in Tuana is currently playing an excellent, if exhausting, production of the way-out English farce, "Black Comedy" by Peter Shaffer.

As presented by Wedgewood there is one act with an intermission, and it is almost too much to digest all at once. Director Ron Reid has mounted a fast-paced, farce-comedy production on the stage. There is much slapstick and much broad gesturing and miffing to add to the loud-talking, foot-stomping action.

The play is an innovation in theatre. The action begins in total darkness, but the characters supposedly can see, even if the audience cannot. When the main fuse blows, the stage is bathed in light and the cast supposedly can no longer see, except for brief moments when a match is lighted and the stage light goes dim.

The action revolves around a young sculptor, that he is, who will do almost anything to make a name for himself, including marrying a wealthy, spoiled, brainless debutante. She has persuaded her father and a millionaire art lover to come to view his works on the night the fuse blows.

When the lights go out or on, as the case may be, the plot becomes highly complicated and farcically, unbelievably funny. David Califf is very British and very active in the role of the sculptor. His movements in the "dark" are delightful, and his comedy timing in movement is perfect. The way he pitches his voice too high at times is annoying, but he is not alone in this.

Carolee Silcox is miscast as the debutante, but she tries hard to make this thankless role into something pleasant. Her tantrum scene is quite good, however, but she could have left out some of the stamping around until then.

Lilene Miller is quite funny and quite believable as the spinster from upstairs who gets loaded on gin in the dark. Leroy Roby Brown spends too much time in falsetto to make him entirely understandable as the art lover electric repairman. Bob Hutchinson is pleasing as the millionaire, although he only appears momentarily.

Claudine Iddings is delightful in her mugging and inability to see in the dark. She plays the former girlfriend who arrives in the dark and is recognized by touch.

One may quarrel with the broad interpretation of this work, but it is well done by Wedgewood. And the audience leaves tired, but pleased. HJL

Patrick Stoner gives a very funny, campy performance of the fastidious bachelor across the hall.

Halpern Praises Interest

Attorney Norris Halpern complimented members of the Virginia Beach Democratic club on their interest in becoming involved, when he addressed a recent luncheon meeting.

He told the luncheon meeting that we live in a troubled world of riots, sit-ins, looting, and partial destruction of cities. He deplored the fact that colleges are not able to function normally because of the breakdown of law and order, especially among youth.

"In a sense we have lost our faith in democracy and its institutions and have made the further mistake of policing the world at our expense in money and manpower, without demanding that other nations contribute their share," said Halpern in discussing the Vietnam war.

In addition he criticized the growing power of labor unions and what he called abuse by labor of "the economic rights of the masses."

He suggested also that Congress create a Supreme Court of Economics, composed of two labor leaders, two capitalists, two eminent economists and a chief justice, which would be the final say in settling labor problems.

Halpern represents the Tidewater Association of Home-builders in legal matters and was asked to address the club in this capacity.

Survey To Check Fireworks Rifelery Class Offered

The City of Virginia Beach is taking part in a survey on the amount of property damage and the severity of body injuries which can be attributed to the use of fireworks.

The survey is being conducted from June 28 to July 14 by the Fire Marshals Association of North America.

In discussing the survey with Milton Holland, Chief of the Virginia Beach Fire Prevention Bureau, the fact came to light that the Virginia Beach city code is quite explicit regarding fireworks. Holland pointed out that under provisions of the city code it is illegal to sell, possess, and/or use any type fireworks, excepting caps used in toy pistols and sparklers. The exception to the rule is public fireworks displays held by amusement parks and similar organizations, provided these groups have met with safety standards outlined for their use and with proper certification from the fire marshal's office.

Holland also pointed out that improper handling of sparklers can result in bodily injury. He cites cases where children's clothing have been set afire, resulting in severe burns, in the careless handling of lighted sparklers. The public can assist in this survey by reporting any injury, and/or property damage as the result of the use of fireworks.

Food Program Aids 172

Figures released on the March food stamp program show that 172 persons in Virginia Beach participated in the program.

The Virginia Beach residents aided by the program were part of 80,974 people in Virginia who received the food assistance.

Does every member of your family know more than one way to escape from your house in case it catches fire?

'Little Girls' Are Left Behind

American designers offer no safe little fashion clichés, no status uniform, no simplified chic-of-the-week tricks. Each woman is expected to find her own way in a world of wide choice, where quality, subtlety and polish count as high as line, color and texture.

Designers have had great fun with "air" and "bare." So will the woman of taste. Many clothes seem to be blown up against the body, swirling high around the neck and head, clinging against the hips and fluttering back in a long Isadora (Duncan) scarf. Pleats move everywhere, from a controlled flicker below long sweater-pull tops to the psychedelic play of all-pleated dresses or culottes. Hoods swathe the head, often under big shadowy hats.

The long, lean, pulled-down silhouette with a wide hemline is THE look. Narrow ankle length coats, long, unshaped jackets and exaggerated mufflers hawk back fifty years, when rebellious youth and unisex read "Votes for Women."

The classic V neck of the tennis sweater is seen on the smartest daytime and dinner clothes. These usually are jumpers, or have a jumper effect, with full contrasting sleeves.

The "daring décolletage" is taking the edge off the nudity kick. While there are still some see-throughs, the new excitement is in the return of the rich, stately evening dress with a tight bodice and either a high, Victorian neckline or a devastating plunge. There is no timid middle ground. A woman must know her figure well enough to recognize the boundary between allure and vulgarity.

Tailored suits and coats have simple small collars or often none at all with a huge enveloping muffler of the fabric swung dashing around the neck high to the chin.

The expected swing to the taut waistline did not happen. Both women and designers rejected it, at least for now, as out of key with our swift and volatile time. The wide fabric belts of the season encircle the waistline area lightly, high or low, and never compress it. The only exception is the wide use of fabric sashes on the wrapped-and-tied silhouette. This is the secondary but almost equal shape of the winter.

Shoulders remain small, ultra-feminine and young, with high armholes. This adds to the long-coats and dresses have wide flat mufflers four yards long to hide the chin and drop to the hem. Floor length coqboas trail after statuesque evening dresses, the way they did in the days of Toulouse-Lautrec and Paul Cesar Helleu, the society portrait-painter of the Belle Epoque (1890-1914). The high choker collars, upswept hair with escaping tendrils, the long strings of pearls and the nose veils of that time are new accessories.

Patterned fabric is one of the designer's favorite fashion tools. He plays with it like notes of music, creating intricate chords of two or more motifs in a single costume; two or three colors of the same pattern. Bold-patterned tweed combined with paisley silk and wool knit.... Three shades of metal brocade forming a dress.... Fur sleeves against grey flannel and knit.... Lace over gold tissue.... Wool jersey paired with soft charmeuse satin....

Wool velour, satin and velvet are basic materials now. Tweed is very much back in the picture, in new layered, yarn textures that look more like needlework than the work of a loom. Daytime fabrics are soft and deep. For evening the textures are either vaporous metallic chiffons or slipper satin with impressive body--the old "stand-alone" look.

Everything shines like the surface of the moon. Colors blaze in changing luminous reds, greens, purple, yellows, like an earthrise. How else could fashion go in a year that marks a moon landing? Blacks are as deep as outer space. Greys range from dust to cut-steel. Brown and white continue to be a favorite combination.

Satin or jeweled borders under score necklines and hems of afternoon and evening clothes. The jewels are chunky, faceted stones, set as by a jeweller. There is little or no beading.

Entering the 70s is the tall, boneless, worldly woman. A woman who has everything and wants more. Left behind is the little girl who was just one of a row of paper dolls.

Fabulous fake furs make the fashion scene in fall '69, like the "Werewolf", a casual trench coat in long-haired pile by White Stag. $70.00.

pull silhouette by which this year will be remembered.

The pant suit takes its place as a classic part of today's wardrobe. The exciting headline lies in the return of the independently important day dress. The day dress is no longer a shell under a coat, but an independent personality unit, lavishing fascinating cuts, welt seams in interesting patterns, bright or white borders, twin patterns or lovely new textures on the dress beneath the coat.

The long muffler and the contrast border are the fringe benefits of the season. Suits,

Dedication Is Saturday

A marker will be dedicated at the 193-year-old Lancaster Lovett house at Princess Anne Court House at 2 p.m., Saturday, June 28 by the Princess Anne County Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

have been made to the house, a chimney on one side bears the date 1776. It was built on land that was part of an original land grant to Lancaster Lovett, for whom the house is named.

The house, now owned by Mr. and Mrs. Maury Riganto, is located on Holland Road just before it intersects with Princess Anne Road.

The house has quite a history and was once used as the parsonage of Nimmo Church. Another resident was Judge John J. Woodhouse. The original lock on the double Dutch doors still has the crest of the King of England.

A Chocolate Covered Camper

Camping is an experience no child should miss--according to all the experts and brochures on the subject. They don't mention what it may do to the parents.

The eight-year-old is attending day camp for the first time. The first problem to be overcome was stage fright at the bus stop. She was ready to leave by 7:30 a.m. Of course, the bus wasn't due until 8:20. But when we did get there she wouldn't get out of the car, even though some other girls she knew were already waiting at the stop.

"I'm scared."

"Well, what are you scared of?"

"I don't know, I'm just scared."

You can guess the rest. Then, when the bus did arrive, she hit the panic button because she couldn't get the car door open and she was afraid the bus would leave without her.

The first night I asked her how she liked camp. "I got sand in my shoes." Trying a different approach, I asked her what she did during the day.

"We walked and we walked. All we did was walk." As further proof of her physical activities, she went to sleep on the sofa before supper.

Then right before she went to bed she announced that she had to have a "sit upon" by the next day. A "sit upon", if you haven't run into them before, is just that--a waterproof pad which can be tied around the waist to keep the girls' bottoms dry when they sit on the ground. So I spent the next hour and a half trying to round up material and then in making the thing.

"It's too wide," was the word of appreciation the next morning.

"You'll grow."

Next she wandered into the kitchen where I was fixing her lunch to take along. "Not chocolate cake again!"

"Why not? I thought that was your favorite."

"It is, but we hang our lunch bags on a clothes line in the sun so the bugs won't get to them. The chocolate melts."

"Too bad, I haven't got anything else. You're always begging me for grilled cheese. Now you can have grilled chocolate. I wonder how it would be if I stuck a marshmallow in with it..."

"Newel Post"--It's A "Right One."

By Yatta Jones

"It's my opportunity to be around these beautiful things... you can put just so much into your own home."

These words are what Mrs. Bernard Raymond, Margery, has to say about her antique shop, "Newel Post," which is located at 5369 Virginia Beach Blvd. "Newel Post" is not a run-of-the-mill antique shop filled with popular--and sometimes questionable--items.

Margery's special touch in display and her discriminating taste is her choice of stock transports the shop completely out of the commonplace. Margery says, "I stock what appeals to me... it's more of a collector's shop... I don't think that there is anything in here that I wouldn't have in my own home."

Most of "Newel Post" stock comes from Europe. Not that there is anything wrong with American antiques, but, as Margery says, "American antiques are so scarce that what there is that is good, is of museum quality." She goes to Europe about once a year to replenish the stock, and about five times a year she receives a shipment from her agent there.

There are two standards that the antiques she carries has to meet: each piece has to be authentic and each piece has to be in good condition. She says the Europeans have an expression they use which means an antique is genuine--"That's a right one," she likes to "Newel Post" to be stocked with "right ones."

The condition of an item has a lot to do with its value. Margery says, "When you buy something 'as is' nine times out of ten it never was." She says that any piece that has to be repaired, especially to any extent, loses its value (and sometimes its charm). So she has made a standing rule: everything she stocks is in good condition.

A wide variety of items is another thing that makes the shop fascinating. Right now the shop boasts a stagecoach trunk, a bird cage with ruby glass guards, a music box Christmas tree stand, Chinese teapots that were made in the 1700's, an American flag that was made when there were only 13 states and some stuffed casings that came from a butcher shop display. These are in addition to several beautiful desks, tables, paintings and other more conventional pieces.

Each item is displayed to its best advantage. Everything looks as though it were placed in its particular spot after hours (See "Newel Post" p. 7)

Mrs. Heatwole

Meredith-Heatwole Wedding

Miss Catharine Deborah Meredith and Frank Andrew Heatwole II were married Saturday, June 14, at Callee Episcopal Church with Rev. John H. Jordan officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jaquelin Marshall Meredith of Southside Road. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel S. Heatwole of Harrisonburg, Va.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white satin and Alecon lace dress trimmed with seed pearls. The headpiece of her tulle veil was trimmed with pearl petals and nylon roses.

Matron of honor was the sister of the bride, Mrs. William Frank White III of Fairfax, Va. Miss Elizabeth Madeline Heatwole, sister of the groom, was the bridesmaid. Flower girls were Meredith Lee Bryant and Shannon Leigh White, nieces of the bride.

Mr. Heatwole, father of the groom, was best man. Groomsmen were William Joseph, David Nardi, William Heatwole and Carlos Bennington, all of Harrisonburg, Va.

A reception was held at the home of the bride, after a wedding trip to Washington, D.C. the couple will reside at Timberville, Va.

Sept. Wedding Planned

Dr. and Mrs. John D. MacLeod, Jr. announce the engagement of their daughter, Sarah Martha, to Robert William Owens, Jr.

Mr. Owens is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Owens of Bennettsville, S.C.

The wedding will take place Sept. 6 at The Church in the Pines, Laurel Hill, N.C.

Fashions Are Sweet

Would you like to be wrapped up like a candy bar, looking good enough to eat? And when your dress gets dirty, discard it?

If so, you may be one of many American girls who'll be wearing paper dresses this spring and summer.

A well-known candy manufacturer, now making these fun fashions available, expects them to attract the high school and college crowd.

Besides showing the name of a candy bar, each of these two "fashion wrappers," repeats the colors of the actual package. One shift is imprinted Baby Ruth, in large red letters against a white background. The other is a soft butter yellow, with the word Butterfinger in blue running from hem to neckline.

The mini-styled dresses are available for $1.25 each and a wrapper from a Baby Ruth or Butterfinger bar, from Curtiss Candy Company, P.O. Box 51, Asheville, N.C. 28802. Sizes are petite, (4-6), small (8-10) and medium (12-14). (NP Features) and hours of study. But Margery says not. "I take the space I have and do the best I can with it." She says she does not follow any rules she just does what pleases her.

Antiques and decorating are close companions as far as Margery is concerned. She says, "If I were just beginning to decorate I would start with the best painting or antique I could buy...it lends warmth to a room."

Margery has made several talks to various clubs and organizations. She speaks on "Creating with Antiques," which is where her real interest lies. Although she finds the history of a piece intriguing, her primary interest in the piece is based on what she can do with it. "I don't like to own an antique just because it's old...it has to do something."

She is able to point to many items in the shop and suggest an unusual, but effective, function for them. There are some pages from a choir book which she says can be framed and hung. "Or," she says, "I have a screen at home made out of them." There is a charcoal stove at the shop that Margery says makes a very nice umbrella stand. And a chamber pot that is perfect for a wine cooler.

Margery is as interesting as the shop. She opened the shop two years ago because, as she says, "I've never been one to vegetate." She says that she was an organization woman for years. "As your children grow older, though, you develop new interests...After you've done everything a normal, decent person does, you have to have something to keep yourself from being a boring person."

Margery says her husband's backing and enthusiasm have helped her from the very beginning. "He's just as interested in antiques as I am, and he's very creative."

As interested as she is in "Newel Post," Margery does not let it interfere with her normal routine or enjoyment of life. "I'm only here in the afternoons and I'm very organized so that when I leave home everything is running smoothly." She also has an assistant, Mrs. William Earley, to take over when she is not there.

Many antique shop patrons have already learned that "Newel Post" is a marvelous place to buy, browse, or converse. Margery says the coffee pot is usually on and she enjoys talking to the people that visit her. "They're all so interesting...people who collect antiques are very creative."

If you need any proof of this statement, just meet Margery Raymond sometime.

Beauty Can Be Damaging

The search for beauty can send a hypersensitive woman straight to a doctor's office rather than to a triumphant appearance.

A nationwide poll of dermatologists reveals that anti-bacterial soaps are the most frequent cause of skin-deep irritations, followed by hair dyes and sprays, nail products, lipsticks and eye shadows. More rarely mentioned as trouble-makers are beauty preparations medicated make-up preparations, anti-wrinkle creams, eye liners, and mascara.

Dr. Paul Lazar, assistant professor of dermatology at Northwestern University Medical School, who conducted the survey, emphasized that most cosmetics are perfectly safe. But some can cause unexpected reactions among vulnerable women--triggering off an allergy or oversensitizing skin to sunlight.

Some beauty preparations have contained chemicals that irritate skin on contact but most of these have been removed from the market. Dr. Lazar, in a report to a Conference on Evaluation of Safety of Cosmetics, cited chemicals once used in deodorant sticks, nail hardeners, and soaps.

Nor is it always easy to trace the source of the trouble. "Your skin can be affected by something you've eaten," Dr. Lazar ruefully pointed out.

"We spend $3.5 billion dollars a year on these beauty preparations," said Dr. Lazar. "It is impossible to determine the true incidence of reaction because only patients with severe reactions seek medical advice."

Even the purest substances can prove damaging, the dermatologist pointed out. Baby oil mixed with tincture of iodine, used by teenagers as a suntan lotion, sometimes causes an acne-like reaction. Too energetic rubbing with an oily lotion can irritate hair follicles, particularly among hairy men.

From his own practice, Dr. Lazar also warned against the careless use of aerosol deodorants. Only the most limited area should be sprayed, he said.

Scrubbing alone has been known to cause skin problems. "Excessive cleaning," warned the doctor, "is the counterpart of dishpan hands."

'Coolth' Is Answer to Heat

Wilted weather calls for reviving fare from the kitchen. Preferably something that keeps the cook as cool as everyone else, and gives her time to share summer's leisurely pace. Here are some fine examples which depend on time-saving dairy foods for nutrition, flavor and "coolth."

Summer refreshments might start with soup -- deliciously frosty for a change -- butter-milk-tangy too. Garnished with croutons, slivered almonds or a dash of curry powder, as you please, Chilled Tangy Pea Soup even looks cool. Pour it into prechilled bowls and serve it icy cold.

To go with this chilled soup, try a pair of dairy, open-faced sandwiches. One sandwich spread features shrimp with Blue cheese, green pepper, pimiento and ripe olives; the other lobster, celery and lemon. Together, soup and sandwiches make a light collation, sure to charm a ladies luncheon group.

Equally easy and reviving are "Alamode Coolers", intriguing ways to float ice cream in drinks like Banana Froths, pineapple Hawaiian Mists and such. Fizzy, frosty and gaily garnished, "Alamode Coolers" are as festive a collection of refreshers as ever sprouted from lawn glass-holders. And just the cool, sweet-sipping touch to please a gathering of any age!

CHILLED TANGY PEA SOUP

1 can (11 1/4 oz.) condensed green pea soup
2 c. buttermilk
Garlic-buttered croutons OR toasted slivered almonds OR curry powder (optional)

In a bowl blend together soup and buttermilk; cover and chill well. Serve in chilled bowls. Garnish with croutons, almonds or a dash of curry powder, if desired. Yield: 3 1/4 cups.

*May also be served in chilled cups as an appetizer.

Bring out those handy lawn glass-holders -- and bring on "Alamode Coolers", ice cream floats in a variety of combinations that make for easy summer sipping.

LOBSTER PARTY SPREAD

1 can (5 oz.) lobster, drained and chopped
1 c. chopped celery
1/4 tsp. grated lemon grind
2 tps. lemon juice
1/2 tsp. onion salt
1/8 tsp. pepper
1/3 c. dairy sour cream

In a bowl toss together lobster, celery, lemon rind and juice, onion salt and pepper. Gently blend in sour cream. Yield: 2 cups.

SHRIMP PARTY SPREAD

1 c. finely chopped cooked shrimp
1/4 c. chopped green pepper
6 ripe olives, chopped
2 tps. chopped pimiento
1 tbs. crumbled Blue cheese
1 tsp. lemon juice
(See 'Coolth' p. 8)

Davis-Ellis NWCA

Davis-Ellis NWCA N. 241 of Little Creek has sent a box to the chaplain of the 12th Marine Regiment in Vietnam containing items to be distributed among the servicemen there.

The box contains brownies, fudge, cookies, canned meats, instant drink mixes, etc. The club periodically sends similar boxes, containing items most requested by the men in Vietnam.

Daughter Born

Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Marshall of Camp Springs, Md. announce the birth of a daughter on June 25 at Morris Cafritz Hospital in Washington, D.C. Mrs. Marshall is the former Eleanor Diane Fisher of Virginia Beach, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall J. Fisher.

Lace Cookies

In a medium saucepan combine 3/4 cup dark corn syrup with 3/4 cup butter or margarine. Bring just to boiling point and remove from heat. Combine 1 1/2 cups sifted all-purpose flour with 1 cup finely chopped nuts and 3/4 teaspoon ground nutmeg. Blend into corn syrup mixture. Drop by the rounded teaspoonful, 4 inches apart, onto greased cookie sheets. Bake in preheated oven (325 F.) 8 to 10 minutes or until golden. Cool 1 1/2 minutes before removing from cookie sheet to racks. Roll into cone shape, if desired. Yield: 75 to 85 cookies.

HERE COMES OLGA!

In my last column it seems I wished everyone a happy vacation and I would return when the Virginia Beach people again appeared on the scene. Well less than two weeks it seems the Virginia Beach people again became active in their endeavors so here I am again.

Friday night was really a very busy night. First I started off with the Ocean Heath Restaurant now open for the season, newly decorated and with new managers. Best of all they will be having Al DeHannis and his band there for the entire season. He will be playing nightly with the exception of Sundays. Al comes to the Ocean Heath after a six months stand at Pier 66 in Fort Lauderdale. He also spent 44 months at the Skyriders club in El Paso. I would say that this is proof enough that he has a really terrific band, but I might add I have heard him many times, and when it comes to a real dance band he has just that.

If the buffet served at the Ocean Heath for the press is any criterion to meals that will be served this summer, I would suggest you do, indeed, drop by.

The Americano was my next stop where I covered the Virginia Beach Little Theatre group at their annual end-of-the-season party. I spent little time with them as this was more of a business meeting with them. Leaving the Americano, my next stop was the June German at The Cavalier.

On entering the ballroom, Mr. & Mrs. P. H. Allen and Mr. & Mrs. Charles Gilliam were receiving the guests and seeing that everyone was introduced. Mrs. Charles Allen was the chairman and she really did a wonderful job with this dance.

Each table had a centerpiece of gardenias and magnolias, and the favors were most unusual. Mrs. William Vaughan had taken rocks shaped like feet out of her yard painted the toe nails or which appeared to be toe nails and on the bottom of each foot she had put a coat of tar. These favors represented the TAR Heel, which, of course, as you know is the native home of June German members--North Carolina. Hanging from each chandelier were cardboard moons and star, and behind the band stand on the wall was a large sheet of music, musical notes and the title was "Carolina Moon".

Some of the guests I saw as they entered were Mr. & Mrs. Robert Wilson, Mr. & Mrs. Clarence Smith, Mr. & Mrs. Scott Taylor, Mr. & Mrs. Rinehardt, Mr. & Mrs. Adin Woodward, Mr. & Mrs. Bill McCullurg, Mr. & Mrs. W. T. Haskett, Capt. & Mrs. W. J. Thompson, Mr. & Mrs. William Vaughan, Mr. & Mrs. Glenn Darst, Mr. & Mrs. Wiley Harrell, Jr., Mr. & Mrs. Web Brown, Sr., Mr. & Mrs. J. D. W. Cassada.

Attract Birds; Supply Needs

(Editor's note: Here is another in the series on home horticulture by Wesley P. Jenkins, Extension horticulturist at Virginia Tech.)

Would you like to have more birds in your yard? All you need to do is provide for their comfort, and they will flock to your home and sing their thanks. Most of the things they need are easy to supply and are not expensive.

The population explosion and the hectic pace of modern society is a problem for birds as well as humans. New housing developments remove trees and brush and thus destroy nesting sites and food. The draining of wet lands and the building of super highways is equally harmful.

Birds have about five basic needs. Supply these and you will have many more birds around your home. To survive and perpetuate their kind, birds must have food, water, shelter from hot and cold weather, nesting sites, and protection from predators.

Food for birds is easy to supply. A bird feeder will provide the cafeteria service they enjoy most. Also, plant some berry-producing shrubs which will add beauty to your landscape, and food for your feathered friends. Some trees and shrubs which supply food for birds are Japanese Barberry, Birch, Blueberry, Buckhorn, Chokeberry, Elder, Larch, Mountain Ash, Mulberry, Privet and Viburnum.

Water is a critical need for birds and may be hard for them to find in some localities during dry periods. A bird bath will provide a place to drink as well as bathe. If you have ever observed birds splashing around in their special bathing pool, you know how much they enjoy it.

The shrubs and small trees you plant to supply food may also provide shelter from the hot sun in summer and cold winds of winter. Locate them in a back corner of the property away from traffic and excessive noise. Include some evergreens which will be more effective as a windbreak.

sites, but you may increase the appeal of your yard as a bird haven by installing some bird houses. Be sure you select the correct type to attract the species you prefer, and which are commonly found in your area.

Your birds will also need nesting materials to construct or line their homes. They will welcome a supply of short pieces of old thread or rags. Do not provide tough fibers like nylon.

in which birds may become entangled. A supply of mud which is high in clay will attract robins, and other birds that use mud in building their nests.

Be sure the feeders and nesting boxes are located where they cannot be reached by cats. A smooth metal cylinder or cone at least 12 inches wide on the pole or tree will cat-proof the location.

VIRGINIA BEACH Garden Club News

Birchwood

Mrs. M. K. Kelly was elected to serve a second term as president of the Birchwood Garden Club. Serving with her are Mrs. Edward Tippe, first vice president, and Mrs. F. L. Hewitt, Secretary-Treasurer.

To celebrate the end of the year activities, the club members toured the garden of Fred Heutte, noted horticulturist and former director of the Norfolk Botanical Gardens. The club then lunched at the Lake Wright Motel with Heutte as guest of honor.

Thoroughgood

The Annual June Luncheon Meeting of the Thoroughgood Garden Club was held at the home of Mrs. M. A. Glass with the Luncheon Committee Chairman, Mrs. G. A. Towns and Mrs. Samuel L. Denty, Mrs. Richard L. Lindell and Mrs. August H. Culpepper assisting.

After hearing Charles Turrisi, a well known rosarian, and speaker at the May meeting of the Club, all members expressed their great interest in growing and showing roses.

Lynnhaven African Violet

New officers of the Lynnhaven African Violet Society were installed at the June meeting at the home of Mrs. C. L. Herberger Sr. They are Mrs. Nelson Charlton, president; Mrs. C. W. Diggs, vice president; Mrs. Edward Dawson, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Harry Billups, recording secretary; and Mrs. Carl Salland, treasurer. Mrs. Hersberger installed the officers.

Mrs. Salland won the award for the most points for horticulture and Mrs. Charlton won second prize. Mrs. Diggs won the top prize for arrangements.

Mrs. Charlton recently spoke to club members on vacation care of violets.

You feel a little edgy, or maybe cross.

Sooner or later, that day comes, the day when a woman feels she's changing. It's not a good feeling either. And she could use a good old-fashioned medicine then.

You might even have what we call hot flashes and feel sad and slightly off-balance. Whatever you feel, we have something for the day you need a little comforting. Lydia E. Pinkham Tablets. They're made with gentle, natural ingredients that work to help you feel better. When you start changing, you could use a good old-fashioned medicine for an old-fashioned problem. And, you don't run any chance of the kind of unpleasant side effects you can get from some of the newer drugs.

Improve Outdoor Facilities

Now is the time to improve your facilities for outdoor living. The rush of early season gardening is over, and you should have more time for cookouts, and other leisure time recreational activities.

A terrace near the house will provide an extra outdoor room for family living. From a landscape point of view, the terrace serves as a platform for the residence and improves the adjustments of the house to the grounds. It will provide an ideal place for quiet reading, picnics, outdoor cooking or entertaining guests.

It is fun to plan and develop a terrace. It should be located adjacent to the kitchen or family room of the home. Be sure your terrace is large enough for the intended use. Allow adequate space for tables and chairs and the easy movement of people.

As a general rule, the terrace should be as wide as the height of the house from the ground to the eaves. A narrow terrace will look skimpy. The shape should carry out the lines of the adjacent building, but may have irregular free form if appropriate shrubs and trees are planted.

The surface of your terrace should be firm and relatively smooth. It should slope gently down from the house to be sure water drains away from the foundation.

A paved terrace is ideal to provide a smooth surface for chairs and tables. It is also easy to clean. You may prefer the design and texture which can be secured from bricks or flagstones. If such materials are used, be sure to install them on a firm well-drained sand or tamped cinder base. A brick or flagstone terrace will be much easier to clean and maintain in an attractive condition if the cracks are completely mortared.

Your terrace should be designed to provide privacy for your picnic or entertainment use. It should not be a part of the walks or drives around the home. It may be very annoying if traffic around the house must pass through the terrace while you are entertaining guests.

A wood or masonry fence will provide a partial screen. Vines or espaliered trees may add interest to your fence. Shrubs or small trees may also be used as a screen, but will require more space than a fence. One or more trees may be located in the lawn near the terrace to provide shade from the late afternoon sun.

Plan to include accessories which will make your terrace more useful. Install electric lights and weatherproof receptacles. This will extend the hours of use and provide current for outdoor grills, radios, or other appliances. Flowering plants or shrubs in pots, tubs or boxes will make your terrace more attractive.

Any three of these are free. Send a postcard to Masonite, Box B, Chicago, Ill. 60690. For more than three, send a dime each.

Instant Onions

Whenever instant minced onion is to be sauteed or added, uncooked, to a salad or sandwich filling, rehydrate it briefly before use. Add an equal measure of water to the instant minced onion and let it stand 10 minutes. Water will be absorbed, plumping up the onion bits.

'Coolth'

1/2 tsp. salt
1/8 tsp. pepper
1/3 c. dairy sour cream

In a bowl toss together shrimp, green pepper, olives, pimiento, blue cheese, lemon juice, salt and pepper. Gently blend in sour cream. Yield: 1 1/3 cups.

ALAMODE COOLERS

BANANA FROTH

1 c. mashed bananas
1 c. milk
2 tbs. sugar
1 pt. sparkling water, chilled
1 pt. vanilla ice cream
Banana slices, unpeeled (optional)

Beat together banana, milk, sugar and vanilla; divide into 4 tall glasses. Mix in a little sparkling water. Add scoop of ice cream to each glass; fill with sparkling water and stir. Garnish glasses with unpeeled banana slices, if desired. Yield: 4 glasses.

APRICOT FIZZ

1 1/2 c. (12-oz. can) apricot nectar
1 pt. ginger ale or sparkling water, chilled
1 pt. vanilla ice cream or lemon sherbert

Divide apricot nectar into 4 tall glasses. Mix in a little ginger ale. Add scoop of ice cream to each glass; fill with ginger ale and stir. Yield: 4 glasses.

FRUIT PUNCH FROST

1 c. diced fresh strawberries
1/4 c. sugar
1/2 c. orange juice
1/2 c. pineapple juice
2 tbs. lime juice
1 tbs. lemon juice

nish with fruit kabobs. Yield: 4 glasses.

HAWAIIAN MIST

1 c. (8 1/2 to 9-oz. can) crushed pineapple
1 can (6 oz.) frozen orange juice concentrate
1 1/2 pts. vanilla ice cream
1 1/2 pts. sparkling water, chilled

Combine pineapple and orange juice concentrate; divide into 6 tall glasses, about 3 tablespoons per glass. Add about 1 tablespoon ice cream and a little sparkling water; mix. Add scoop of ice cream to each glass; fill with sparkling water and stir. Yield: 6 glasses.

EVER-FAVORITE CHOCOLATE

2 c. milk
1/2 c. chocolate syrup
1 pt. vanilla ice cream
Sparkling water, chilled

Divide milk and chocolate syrup into 4 tall glasses; blend. Add scoop of ice cream to each glass; fill with sparkling water and stir. Yield: 4 glasses.

Marinated Pole Beans

Remove tips from 1 pound fresh Florida pole beans; cut into 2-inch lengths. In a medium saucepan bring 1-inch salted water to boiling point. Add beans and cook uncovered for 5 minutes. Reduce heat, cover and simmer 10 minutes or until just crisp-tender. Drain, transferring beans to a bowl. Add 1 can (3 to 4 oz.) sliced mushrooms, drained; 1/4 cup bottled French or Italian dressing and 2 tablespoons chopped pimiento; toss gently. Cover and refrigerate 5 to 8 hours. Serve as an hors d'oeuvre or as a salad on a lettuce leaf. Yield: 6 to 8 portions.

A plain box cake mushrooms into a spectacular dessert when it is frosted with a "quick and easy" mint topping. Just whip a pint of whipping cream with 1/4 cup of confectioners' sugar until it stands in soft peaks. Carefully fold in one-half cup of Richardson's After Dinner Mints. Frost 'n' refrigerate the cake until ready to serve.

Mrs. Harkins Wed in May

Miss Joann Beatrice Maher was married to Sgt. Bruce Lloyd Harkins USMC in a double ring ceremony May 3 at Eastern Shore Chapel.

Mrs. Harkins is the daughter of Mrs. Jane C. Morton of Virginia Beach.

PEUGEOT OWNERS DON'T TRADE IN THEIR CARS EVERY 27 MONTHS***

They don't have to! Peugeots are built to last and last longer than last payment. Why? ... more goes into them: like stainless steel bumpers and trim, thicker body metal, long lasting Michelin X tires, and much more is not and corrosion proofed. Aluminum parts let the engine run cooler. A 4-speed synchromesh transmission allows easy down-shifting, with less wear on brakes.

Yes, more goes in ... and Peugeot owners get a lot more out. Even after 100,000 miles of trouble-free driving, Peugeot keeps right on running like a top. And, the diesel good looks are timeless. Styled by famed Italian designer Pinin Farina, Peugeot won't be old next year. Or the next. Or ever. So get out from under those monthly car payments. Get a Peugeot ... the best car.

This was the powerful swing of Tom Strange...

Strange Loses Cancer Battle

Virginia Beach golf professional Tom Strange is dead at the age of 39. Cancer claimed him last weekend after several months of illness.

Although he was gravely ill for some time, he continued his duties at White Sands Country Club until recently. He died in a local hospital Saturday and was buried Monday in Rosewood Memorial Park.

Strange had been a professional golfer for 11 years and a resident of this area for 15 years. He won the State Open championship four times, once as an amateur, and won most other area major tournaments in his career.

He turned pro in 1958 to serve as professional for Elizabeth Manor, and in 1960 Sam Snead hired Strange as assistant pro at The Greenbriar in White Sulphur Springs, W.

Surf Contest Lists Winners

District 4 Regional surfing championships, sponsored by WGH radio, were held June 21 and 22 at the Steel Pier.

The championships were divided into two categories—Eastern Surfing Association Champions and Non-ESA Champions. Champions in the ESA category were: Kenny Smith, Men's; James McCullough, Junior Men's; Steve Cole, Boy's; Ray Heard, Senior Men's; Joy Evans, Girl's; and Johnny Holland, 3A-4A. All winners, excepting Ray Heard, are from Virginia Beach; Heard is from Washington, D. C.

Non-ESA Champions were: Randy Friel, Men's; Randy Lane, Junior Men's; Bobby McCoy, Boy's and Lee Haywood, Girl's.

PTA Plans Conference

The Virginia Congress of Parents and Teachers is having their annual summer conference at Virginia Wesleyan College July 9-12.

The conference will begin at 1 p.m. on July 9 with the registration of staff members; registration of delegates will be held at 2 p.m. in the East Lounge. A picnic is scheduled for 5 that afternoon and the first general meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. Keynote speaker for this meeting is Mrs. W. Hamilton Crockford III, first vice president of the Virginia PTA. Mrs. Crockford will speak on "Changing the PTA Image."

At the second general meeting, to be held July 10, Mrs. Rodney H. Bryson, legislation chairman, will speak at 10:45 a.m. on "You and Legislation."

Special interest groups will meet at 2 p.m. on July 10 and 10:15 a.m. on July 11. Topics for these groups are Bylaws, Programs, PTA Funds, Publications, Safety, Character and Spiritual Education and Membership and Room Representatives.

A problem clinic will be conducted on July 10 at 4:15 p.m. Mrs. Crockford will preside at this meeting. The third general meeting will be held on that same day in the East Lounge at 7:30 p.m.

The fourth general meeting will be held at 9 a.m. on July 11. Topic for the meeting will be "PTA-SCA Relationships."

The fifth general meeting will be held on that day at 2 p.m. Two topics are scheduled for that meeting: "Group Singing."

Fund Drive Seeks Help

The Children's Home Society of Virginia has sent out an appeal to Virginia residents for contributions.

As of this date only 39.22% of their annual budgeted goal of $75,000 for 1969 has been realized. Because of the lack of funds in 1968 the Society could not help 193 babies.

Serving on the Board of Sponsors of the Society in Virginia Beach are: Mrs. G. Bentley Byrd, Mrs. Richards M. Cooke, Mrs. Alfred L. Nicholson, Mrs. James P. Sadler and A. Gordon Stephenson.

Children's Home Society of Virginia was founded nearly 70 years ago to aid in caring for homeless children. Whenever the Society cannot receive a baby they find an agency which can help.

More information about the Society may be obtained by writing State Headquarters, Campaign Dept., P.O. Box 111 84, Richmond, Va. 23230.

Census Makes Home Check

Census Bureau representatives, Mrs. Mary Euler and Mrs. Audrey Hayden will visit households in this area during July to take a survey of buying and home improvement expectations.

Households in this area will be included in a nationwide survey according to Director Joseph R. Norwood of the Census Bureau's regional office in Charlotte announced today.

Householders will be asked whether they expect to buy a house, car or major appliances during the next year and whether they have made recent purchases of these items. Homeowners will be asked about home improvements and repairs during the last three months and any planned for the future.

The survey is taken quarterly throughout the Nation to gather information that will guide Federal agencies and other groups with programs based on consumer spending patterns.

In the most recent survey of the series, taken in April, U.S. families indicated that their plans for buying houses and cars were at about the same level as a year earlier, but on the average they expect to buy more household appliances and furnishings.

Households included in the July survey will not be identified. All answers are kept confidential by the Census Bureau, and information obtained in the survey will be used only for statistical purposes.

symposium topic is "A Hard Look at the PTA. Participants in the symposium are: E. E. Brickell, superintendent of schools at Virginia Beach; George Thompson, principal of a school in Roanoke; Dr. Robert F. Williams, VEA executive secretary; and John Blum of Anandale, extension chairman of the board of managers of the Virginia Congress of PTA.

Mrs. Crockford will also speak at the sixth general meeting on "The Changing Structure."

Mrs. L. Belmont Williams of Chesapeake is the summer conference chairman. She is also the Tidewater Regional vice president. She will preside at several of the meetings.

Arrangements have been made so that commuters may take part in a portion of the programs.

2 Programs To Help Children

Two large federal grants have been received for summer programs in the Virginia Beach Public Schools.

One is for a new program for educationally and culturally deprived children of migrant workers. The other is for the Head Start program for local culturally deprived children.

The program for migrant children will be for nine weeks and will have a $48,000 budget. It is for children from preschool age up to 10 years old. The children will be picked up at the labor camp at Pungo and be taken to Courthouse School near Princess Anne.

Included in the program will be breakfast and lunch, basic health care, academic subjects, plus field trips. About 75 children are expected.

The eight-week Head Start program, as in past years, will be located in centers. This year's centers for 225 preschool children will be located at Courthouse, Seatack, Old Dominion and Kempsville elementary schools. This year's budget will be $75,864, of which $14,263 will be local funds.

The program will include breakfast and a morning snack, physical psychological screening while providing learning experiences and field trips which the children might otherwise have missed before starting public school.

Storeroom Is Beauty Spot

A storeroom at the corner of 26th and Pacific Avenue has been turned into two shops where a woman can literally be transformed from top to bottom.

Trice's Coiffures opened its doors Tuesday afternoon. It is connected by a door to Trice's Cleaners. The beauty shop is managed by Virginia Lewis.

Said Bob Trice, "If she can fix their heads I can take care of their knits and dresses. We'll make them look good from head to feet."

All the work on the beauty shop, except electrical work and plumbing, was done by Trice and his employees. Their goal was to have a "Beachy look," and they've succeeded. Over the front counter is a roof they constructed of chicken wire and straw. It is decorated with small beach bags, shells, etc.

Trice is almost as proud of the baseball team he sponsors as he is the new shops. His team in the Men's Unlimited League won nine straight games and defeated teams from two higher leagues to bring home a trophy.

Bank Makes Appointment Church Elects Readers

J. Burton Harrison, Jr., president of the People's Bank of Virginia Beach, recently announced the appointment of L. Wirt Walker to the position of Loan Officer.

Walker will be responsible for all consumer credit and for the operation of the credit department. Prior to this appointment Walker had served as new business development coordinator at the Bank of Virginia, and as an assistant branch manager for the Virginia National Bank.

Harrison also announced a number of other appointments including: Mrs. Renee Sharp, Head Teller, and Mrs. Coleen Garrison and Mrs. Judy Fredrick, customer service area.

Due to increased business activity the bank has found it necessary to expand its operating area 50%. The additional space is being used entirely for customer service.

A native of North Carolina, Walker came to Tidewater in 1947 and attended Maury High School and Old Dominion College. He has taken numerous American Institute of Banking courses, earning a certificate, and has served as treasurer of the Tidewater Chapter of the AIB. He is married and has two children.

Navy Ens. Howard H. Steinmetz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard F. Steinmetz of Lord Felton Lane, and Ens. Richard L. Stow, son of Navy Capt. (Ret.) Walter K. Stow Jr. of Forehand Lane, were commissioned ensigns in the Naval Reserve on completion of the Aviation Officer Course at the Naval Aviation Schools Command, Pensacola, Fla.

At a recent meeting of the members, First Church of Christ, Scientist, elected Ray W. Breeden, Jr., to serve as First Reader for a three year term.

In this position Breeden will conduct the Sunday and Wednesday evening services at the church. He replaces Mrs. Hilda Wilson.

Assisting Breeden on Sundays as Second Reader will be Mrs. Constance Crockett Crosby, elected at the same meeting. The retiring Second Reader is Mrs. Frances Boykin.

The new Readers began their term the first of this month.
